Berne, Switzerland, March 26.—The anger aroused in central Serbia and Montenegro when the Yugoslav government signed the Tripartite Pact in Vienna seemed tonight to be approaching a condition of revolt at Kragujevatz and Cetinje, the capital of old Montenegro.

The irate peasantry of central Serbia and the giant mountaineers of Montenegro were reported marching by the thousands, demanding arms and leadership for war against the Germans, who already are said to be threatening invasion of Yugoslavia "to save it from itself."

While the Yugoslav secret police, using lists prepared weeks ago by Gestapo agents, began rounding up Serbian patriots, Comitadji (patriotic society) leaders, opposition party members and student leaders, dissension was spreading within the capital.

Eight demonstrations were beginning in the outskirts of the capital tonight and the crowds, some of them armed with clubs and small-caliber pistols, planned a march on the center of the city.

Steel-helmeted policemen rushed in fast trucks to "danger points" about Belgrade as evening fell. The gendarmes were posted at strategic points throughout the city.

Police cars were assembled about the presidency today after Premier Cvetkovic and Foreign Minister Cincar-Marcovic had returned from

'Civil Service Girl' Accepts Hollywood Option Offer

Hollywood has called to a native California daughter whose beauty brought her nation-wide recognition in the Capital.

Two weeks ago Life Magazine photographed 22-year-old Marguerite Sharpe behind her typewriter in the supplies and accounts division of the Navy Department and put her on the publication's cover with the caption, "The Typical Civil Service Girl."

Since that time local representatives of Fox Film Co. have given her an informal screen test and offered her a 30-day option, which she has accepted. The option has still two weeks to run.

"I don't see why I shouldn't accept if I get a movie offer," the comely Federal worker said yesterday.

Should U. S. Forbid Defense Strikes?

What does the American public think of Federal mediation of defense strikes? Should such mediation be merely voluntary . . . or compulsory? Should strikes be forbidden by law?

These questions are answered in tomorrow's report by the Gallup Poll, together with an analysis of what the public thinks is the chief argument for and against labor unions. See Friday's Post.

Mysterious Attacker Brutally Bludgeons District Housewife

Case Is Similar To the Unsolved Abramowitz Slaying

MRS. RUTH STREET

Bludgeoned over the head by a colored man who told her he came to repair a gas heater, Mrs. Ruth A. Street, 38, of 1629 E Street Northeast, was in critical condition at Casualty Hospital last night.

She was found semiconscious in her second-floor duplex apartment by a laundry man a few minutes after a telephone operator had called police, reporting that she heard groans coming through a receiver in the Street home.

Similarity between this crime and the strangulation of Mrs. Ruth Simons Abramowitz, March 8, led Acting Chief of Detectives Ira E. Keck to dispatch Detective Sergt. Jeremiah Flaherty, ace homicide squad investigator, to the scene. Flaherty is also assigned to the murder case.

According to David Zeits, route man for the Greystone Hand Laundry, he went to the Street apartment a few minutes after 12:30 p. m. and Mrs. Street opened the door for him. Her head was bound with a blood-covered towel, he told police, and she collapsed in a faint.

He called police and an ambulance.

Before Mrs. Street was taken from the apartment, her husband, Maurice Street, a Capital Transit Co. bus operator, arrived.

He said he worked out of the Buchanan Street station and had gotten a message to call his wife. The message was timed at 11:20, he said.

When he called home at about 12:30 p. m., he told police, his wife told him to come home immediately that she was hurt. Street said he attempted to find out from her what

30 Yugoslav Ships May Go To British

Transfer Effective When Axis Pact Causes Conflict With Britain

By George F. Horne.

New York, March 26.—Yugoslav shipping men in the United States representing some 25 or 30 vessels of 200,000 tons have been organizing quietly to transfer their allegiance and assistance to Great Britain the moment Yugoslavia's treaty of adherence to the Axis brings her into conflict with Britain and her allies, it became known here today.

The British already are in possession of assurance to this effect.

While operators in the Yugoslav tramp shipping business were reluctant to discuss their plans, they did not deny that such assurances had been given to authorities here and at the embassy in Washington.

It was indicated also that the impetus had been given the movement by the approbation of Yugoslav diplomatic representatives, with the inference that the legation might break off from its government in Belgrade.

In such a move the Yugoslav Minister would follow examples established by numerous other countries that have fallen under the domination of the Reich.

Six Companies Reported Involved

There are six leading companies reportedly involved in the so-called "Free Yugoslav" movement.

Shipping men who replied to inquiries here expressed surprise at their discussions in Washington had become known.

Several emphasized the traditional friendship of the Yugoslav people with Britain and with Greece, and declared that the greater part of the Yugoslav community in the United States was antagonistic to the leadership at home and to the Axis adherence agreement signed in Vienna.

It was disclosed that a number of shipping men closely connected with Yugoslav shipping interests had come to the United States several months ago from London, presumably to direct operations in case it became necessary for Yugoslav foreign representatives to sever con-

Germans Given Holiday to Heil For Matsuoka

Japanese Foreign Minister Received In Big Demonstration

Berlin, March 26.—The Japanese Foreign Minister, Yosuke Matsuoka, arrived from Moscow tonight for a four-day visit in the Reich capital.

Waiting to greet him were the representatives of the national socialist government, the armed forces and the party hierarchy, led by Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop, and General Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel.

The station itself was elaborately decorated with Japanese, Italian and German banners and the alcove from which the distinguished gathering descended on carpeted stairs to the street was a floral masterpiece, the major motif of which was the Rising Sun, made of white paper chrysanthemums and red paper poppies skillfully illuminated by hidden spotlights.

All Berlin was in festive dress. A public flag display had been ordered and a holiday was declared for this afternoon to enable the population to line the streets through which the cortege passed en route to Bellevue Castle, where the Japanese statesman will stay.

Shifting Winds Hold Up Signing Of Aid Measure

Miami, Fla., March 26 (AP).—Shifting winds kicked up the Gulf stream today and prevented a "special delivery" Navy plane from delivering the $7,000,000,000 British aid bill to President Roosevelt for his signature.

Officials said if rough seas quieted, another attempt would be made tomorrow to take the big White House mail pouch to the Presidential yacht Potomac, somewhere off the Florida coast. The Navy plane flew to the vicinity of the fishing cruise, bearing the bill, but turned back because of the staff wind.

Long Arm Reaches Out

Youth Admits Holdup Slaying Of Woman Shopkeeper Here

A 20-year-old colored youth yesterday admitted to detectives in a signed statement that he shot and killed Miss Fannie Cohen, 60, of 1419 R Street Northwest, in a holdup attempt, February 15.

Detective Lieut. George Darnell, chief of the homicide squad, revealed the confession several hours after the suspect, William Thomas Mumforde, colored, 20, of no fixed address, had been returned here from Rockingham, N. C., where he was taken into custody Sunday.

Mumforde was arrested at the request of local authorities after records at the Federal Bureau of Investigation disclosed he had been arrested in Greenwood, S. C., in February [illegible] released.

Detective Sergt. Aubrey M. Tolson brought the man back from Rockingham and said the suspect had turned over to him a .38-caliber revolver which, according to Tolson, the man said was the murder weapon.

Miss Cohen was shot and killed in a dress shop she operated at 1512 U Street Northwest, February 15, by a colored man apparently intent on robbery. Miss Cohen was alone in her shop when a man entered brandishing a revolver. When the shopkeeper screamed, the bandit fired one shot and fled.

The suspect will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Reopen Allis-Chalmers Plant, U.S. Orders; Strike Vote Called At 3 Bethlehem Shipyards

Steel Workers Resume Picket Duty, but Their Militancy Wanes

By the Associated Press

New York, March 26.—The Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America (C. I. O.) today called meetings Friday afternoon of workers in three big Bethlehem Steel Co. shipyards in New York harbor to vote on plans for an immediate strike.

Philip H. Van Gelder, national secretary-treasurer of the union, said the call was issued by officers of Hoboken Local 15 and Brooklyn Local 13. He said eight weeks of conferences with company officials had failed to bring a settlement of grievances.

The union claims to be the bargaining agent for some 90 per cent of the 5,000 workers employed in the three yards, filled to capacity with work on American and foreign shipping.

There was no direct connection with the Bethlehem Steel strike in Bethlehem, Pa., Van Gelder observed, "except that the difficulties we have encountered are the result of the company's national anti-union policy."

At the meetings Friday (5 p. m.), Van Gelder added, the workers either could vote for an immediate walkout or appoint a strike committee to determine the time and place, if necessary, for a strike. Approval of National President John Green, of Camden, N. J., is required for a strike vote, Van Gelder said, adding that he was certain it would be forthcoming.

Bethlehem Strikers Lose Militancy

Bethlehem, Pa., March 26.—C. I. O. steel workers this afternoon reestablished mass picket lines at the nine gates of the Bethlehem Steel Co. plant here in an attempt to stiffen a strike from which the starch has been almost wholly removed.

The restoration of the lines, accomplished without incident, followed an agreement between union leaders and Maj. Thomas Martin of the Pennsylvania Motor Police.

An angry armistice on violence was maintained today in this magnificently misnamed little town after sporadic flare-ups yesterday when

Prolabor Members of Congress Warn Unions of Strike Curbs

Ramspeck and Healey Say Drastic Legislation May Be Necessary

By John B. Oakes

Post Staff Writer

Rising concern in Congress over the strike situation was sharply reflected yesterday in warnings from prolabor members that drastic legislation is on the way unless current industrial troubles are soon cleared up.

"I am absolutely certain," said Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia, ranking member of the Labor Committee, "that the House will pass restrictive legislation unless the unions themselves put a stop to two things: (1) Strikes in national defense operations and (2) exaction of high initiation fees from workers on defense construction projects in cases where the union has been unable to furnish the necessary employes from its own ranks."

Noting that he already had taken the House floor four times this session to speak against "antilabor" proposals, Representative Ramspeck said he "much preferred to see the question solved without legislation." But, he declared, "if the unions continue to talk about technicalities in which the public is not interested, legislation may be necessary."

And Representative Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, coauthor of the Walsh-Healey Act, stated that "the attitude in Congress is leaning toward pretty drastic legislation—which I personally hope will not be enacted because it would be destructive of personal liberties."

He emphasized the hope that the new Mediation Board would prove sufficient to settle current industrial disputes, and observed that "the union should adjust high initiation fees to make legislation unnecessary."

It was indicated yesterday that the Judiciary Committee, which has been holding hearings on the defense-labor situation for several

8 Americans Reported Held By Japanese

Accused of Plotting Campaign in Korea Against Japan's War

Tokyo (Thursday), March 27.—At least 8 Americans were among 15 persons reported today to have been arrested in Korea on charges of plotting a campaign in Korea against Japan's war in China.

United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew immediately sent an official to the foreign office to protest the arrests and was assured that there would be an immediate and thorough investigation.

Most of those arrested were said to be missionaries.

A roundup of the missionaries evidently has been under way for some time.

It was said in reliable quarters that some missionaries had been overzealous and indiscreet.

U. S. Reaches Fork in Road, Says Donovan

Col. William J. Donovan, who toured the battlefronts abroad for President Roosevelt, warned the Nation last night that America faces only one choice: whether or not to resist the attack Hitler has decided to launch against America and the world.

The wartime commander of the "Fighting Sixty-ninth" stated in a coast-to-coast broadcast made at the request of Secretary of the Navy Knox that the American people "have no choice as to whether or not we will be attacked."

Speaks From Offices

"That choice," he warned, "is Hitler's: and he has already made it—not for Europe only, but for Africa, and Asia and the world. Our only choice is to choose whether or not we will resist. And to choose in time: while resistance is still possible; while others are still alive to stand beside us."

The stocky, gray-haired emissary, spoke over three networks from his six-room law office on the ninth floor of the Bowen Building.

He said that the Lease-Lend Act transforms the armies in China, the Middle East and England, in effect, to American "expeditionary forces" which the United States must supply. Pointing out that the German counterblockade was attempting to "throttle the American supply," he asked:

In Danger of Attack

"Are we going to deliver the goods? This question must be answered now. Are we prepared to take the chance?"

He added: "There is a danger, and whatever we do we must rec-

Crack-Down Move Raises Possibility of Industry Draft; Knudsen and Knox Declare Defense Work Can't Wait

By George Bookman

Post Staff Writer

National defense officials last night ordered immediate reopening of the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. plant at Milwaukee, where a 64-day-old C. I. O. strike has held up work on $45,000,000 of defense contracts.

First use of the "crack down" tactics to end such a production stoppage, the order raised the possibility that the Government might commandeer the Allis-Chalmers plant if it does not obtain labor and management cooperation.

William S. Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management, and Navy Secretary Frank Knox telegraphed labor and management officials at the Allis-Chalmers plant to "start operations immediately," informing them that "we can no longer wait for settlement of the strike by ordinary means."

The telegrams were dispatched to Max W. Babb, president of the company, and to Harold Christoffel, head of C. I. O. Local Union 248, of the United Automobile Workers.

Christoffel replied a few hours later that the strike will "go on" until the union membership votes otherwise. He said in a statement at Milwaukee that the members had been called to meet Saturday morning "to act on the entire strike situation." He added that if any attempt is made to reopen the plant before that time the workers would not heed the call.

Further, he said that under OPM procedure "the plant can be reopened only by the Government demanding that the company accept "the OPM settlement terms of March 1.

At Chicago, William Berchtold, public relations counsel for the company, said while en route home from Washington, that reopening of the plant would be attempted Monday. He said the Government action was "a tremendously encouraging thing."

The strike "is vitally affecting the delivery of Navy orders," the Government ultimatum said. Allis-Chalmers defense orders include contracts for turbines for the new Radford, Va., powder plant, Navy propulsion machinery, Army tractors and machine tools.

The telegram from Knudsen and Knox to the management and workers at the Allis-Chalmers plant said:

"Public interest demands that our national defense program not be handicapped by unnecessary strikes in defense industries. The strike called by the C. I. O. in your West Allis plant—now in its tenth week—is vitally affecting the delivery of Navy orders. We can no longer wait for settlement of the strike by ordinary means. We must ask you to notify your entire force to report for work and start operations immediately.

"We are sure the country can rely on the patriotic spirit of your workers to return to work on vitally needed defense orders without delay. Negotiations can be continued while all men are at work."

To the copy of the message sent to the union was added this sentence: "We expect your full cooperation in carrying out the above program."

The action to end the Allis-Chalmers tie-up came at the end of day-long conferences here between Knudsen, Knox, Babb and Lester Armour, a director of the company.

Sidney Hillman, Knudsen's associate director in the OPM, who has been in charge of labor matters in the defense program, was out of town and did not participate in the conference or in sending the messages.

Section 9 of the Selective Service law gives the Government power to take over plants that "refuse" to cooperate with the Federal authorities.

Impatience Grows at Delays

The law provides that when a plant "refuses" to manufacture armaments ordered by the Secretaries of War or the Navy, the President may "take immediate possession" of the plant and operate it, paying the manufacturer a "fair and just" rental.

The law has been interpreted not to allow the drafting of workers. The Government could, however, cancel draft deferments that workmen might have received owing to the defense importance of their jobs.

President Woodrow Wilson used both weapons in World War days against management and labor.

In another order indicating growing impatience at defense delays due to strikes, the OPM also directed the C. I. O. to remove vital defense supplies of vanadium from the strike-bound plant of the Vanadium Corporation of America at Bridgeville, Pa. Knudsen, saying the metal was "urgently required defense material," also asked the company to use all its facilities to expedite the removal.

Two Monkeys Cut a Caper, Give Three Policemen a Lively Time

MONKEY BUSINESS—Policeman D. B. Plant has monkey back in tow

Two young monkeys created a stir in Southwest Washington late yesterday when they broke loose from a home at 610 F Street. They roamed for half an hour before being captured by their 22-year-old mistress, Miss Edith Smith.

The animals, which Ralph Smith, owner of the Capital Yacht Basin, had brought from Florida last week, smashed their way through a basement window upon being frightened by dogs barking at them through the pane.

After escaping into the back yard of the Smith home, the monkeys scaled an 8-foot fence to the back yard at 608 F Street. They then clambered to the roof of a woodshed.

At this point Mrs. Clara M. Horner, who lives at the 608 address, heard squeals and went to the rear to investigate. She screamed at what she saw, and called the police.

Meanwhile, Miss Edith Smith, hearing the commotion, raced to the rear of her own house.

Three policemen from Fourth Precinct Station arrived and a crowd of 50 adults and children lined the backyard fence to view the proceedings.

Miss Smith captured the monkeys with the assistance of the three police, D. B. Plant, J. D. Miller and P. L. Vogel, who, according to their own account, lent only moral assistance.

Attacking from the Horner side of the fence, the officers scared the animals back onto Smith property, where Miss Smith quickly pounced on them. She was bitten on the finger in the process.

D. C. Favors Standing at Bars, 10 p.m. Closing of Liquor Stores

The Commissioners yesterday approved revisions in the District liquor code permitting standing at bars for either beer or liquor, the closing of package stores at 10 p. m. on week days and a banning of liquor handbills.

Of the 22 proposed changes submitted by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, the city heads approved 16, some of which, such as the standing at the bar, will require legislation by Congress. Their action climaxed a nine-month campaign by members of the local liquor trade for reforms and a Congressional investigation by Representative Herman P. Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

Amendments sought by a group of the trade to bring about price-fixing legislation and a ban on the use of prices in liquor advertising were rejected by the Commissioners. Four other features of the A. B. C. program also were turned down by the Commissioners.

The various changes submitted by the A. B. C. Board which won approval will be redrafted by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech and then sent to the Commissioners for promulgation. The regulations become effective within five days after promulgation, except

Weary House Plans 10-Day Vacation

By Robert C. Albright

By the United Press

A ten-day spring vacation yesterday was held out to House members as an oasis in a session that promises no sine die adjournment or lengthy summer recess.

Leaders will propose an Easter "rest period," extending from April 3 or 4 to April 14, as a reward for "hard work" and insurance against taut nerves.

By "gentleman's agreement," the holiday would operate through a series of three-day recesses, with the House convening in name only every fourth day. Under the rules, neither House can recess more than three days at a time.

Members could go home, "go fishing" or just relax, for no business would be transacted during the period.

Ahead of Schedule

"Just say they have worked hard and they deserve a rest," one leader said. "We are well ahead of schedule on all legislation.

But ahead lay a long stretch, without early prospects of another let-up. Administration spokesmen have abandoned any hope of sine die adjournment in the face of the war emergency. For a while members talked of a month's summer recess, but with Europe's war fronts expanding, that hope has faded too.

Bills turned out by the House in a record three months include 11 appropriation measures setting new peak for peacetime.

Among them: The independent offices bill, the $1,152,372,632 Treasury-Postoffice measure, the $890,824,000 Agriculture appropriation, the $190,000,000 first deficiency measure, the $3,446,000,000 Navy appropriation, the urgency deficiency bill, the $1,533,000,000 fourth supplemental and the $4,073,000,000 fifth supplemental defense bills, the $175,800,000 Army clothing bill, the $315,000,000 "ugly duckling" cargo ship bill and the $7,000,000,000 British aid appropriation.

In its spare time, the House has passed also the lend-lease bill, the debt limit bill, the defense housing measure and the excess profits tax bill.

The Senate hasn't been exactly loafing either, but it has been coasting along with two or three day recesses ever since the lend-lease bill passed on March 8, waiting for the House bills to come over. Senate spokesmen said last night they had considered no change of pace over the Easter holidays.

Save for the regular War Department appropriation bill not due to be reported for some weeks, the House has taken all of the hurdles on defense and aid measures presently scheduled. Five other departmental appropriation bills await action when members return from their "rest."

Tax Measure Ahead

In addition, the House Ways and Means Committee, after the holiday, will swing into the 1941 revenue measure, expected to raise more than $1,500,000,000 to help offset the year's $24,000,000,000 spending record. Close behind, in the domestic legislation field, may follow the long awaited social security bill.

Senate quiet, unbroken since the lend-lease bill tumult, is expected to be shattered again when the chamber starts debating legislation to carry out the St. Lawrence waterways agreement. Preliminaries will open next week in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, when Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, moves to label the agreement a treaty.

Chicago—Strikers from the International Harvester Co.'s plant, scene of violence Tuesday, marched to the City Hall in the Loop to complain to a city council meeting against alleged "police violence." Their demonstration brought from Mayor Edward J. Kelly a promise to intervene in the C. I. O. strike. The plant picked up production speed, manned by participants in an A. F. L. "back-to-work" movement.

Richmond, Ind.—Officials of Harvester's Richmond plant, encouraged by the company's policy in Chicago, announced that police protection will be afforded any workers who want to return to work at the strikebound plant this morning. The Richmond and Chicago I. H. C. plants, as well as a plant at Rock Falls, Ill., are scenes of strikes organized by the C. I. O. Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee.

Oakland, Calif.—President Roosevelt was asked by striking C. I. O. automobile workers to force General Motrs t settle strikes at three Oakland plants. The unin said it south "decent working conditions and wages."

Schenectady, N. Y.—The General Electric Co.'s Schenectady plant heard that it faces "demonstrations" the week of March 31 against what C. I. O. union leaders term its refusal to grant a 10-cent hourly wage increase. Leo Jandreau, business agent of Local 301, United Electrical, Radio and Machinist Workers of America, said more than 4,000 workers authorized the action at a meeting Tuesday night. The union claims 12,000 members; the company says it employs 22,000.

Utica, N. Y.—Pickets marched outside the two plants of the Utica and Mohawk Cotton Mills, working on defense orders for sheets and pillowcases, as a strike of C. I. O. textile workers entered a third day. Joseph Davoli, union organizer, said the union seeks recognition as a bargaining agent.

NEW YORK—Negotiations between the C. I. O. United Mine workers of America and coal operators on union demands for $1-a-day wage increases for 300,000 Appalachian miners and indirectly for 120,000 others in outlying areas, continued in the shadow of a March 31 deadline for expiration of the present contract.

When the Allis-Chalmers strike was called January 22 the issues were said to be demands for a union shop, wage increases and seniority adjustments.

After early efforts by the United States Conciliation Service to achieve a settlement, Knudsen and OPM Associate Director Sidney Hillman submitted a proposal to both sides to end the dispute.

OPM sources reported that the union agreed to accept the proposals "unconditionally" on March 1 but that the company did not agree to accept it.

Some Votes Fraudulent

In an effort to break the ensuing deadlock, the Allis-Chalmers officials were called to meet with the OPM yesterday. The company's officials emerged from yesterday's meeting saying they would return to Milwaukee. The sequel was the telegraphed order from Knudsen and Knox to reopen the plant.

Company officials said their firm had told OPM and Navy officials yesterday that a portion of the votes cast by union members to authorize the strike last January were improper and fraudulent. One company spokesman said a handwriting expert had found that 40 per cent of the strike votes were fraudulent.

Babb and Armour said they were expecting a decision today by the Wisconsin State Labor Board on their contention that the strike had been called in an illegal election.

While the latest official move to end the Allis-Chalmers tie-up was developing, Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, told the House that Hillman and "other Administration officials" were "back of the C. I. O. drive" at Allis-Chalmers "to the extent that they are encouraging the strikers."

He charged also that Harold Christoffel, president of the C. I. O. local at Allis-Chalmers, was a Communist.

Halifax (Thursday), March 27 (AP).—The Canadian war patrol ship Otter burst into flames at sea off Halifax yesterday and 19 members of the Royal Canadian Navy were killed.

The announcement made early today said flames suddenly enveloped His Majesty's Canadian ship Otter and that only 22 of her complement of 41 survived by taking to lifeboats in the raging Atlantic.

Dykstra Board Standing by For Strike Call

The new National Defense Mediation Board, headed by Dr. Clarence A. Dykstra, yesterday was keeping in close touch with the Nation's strike situation while waiting until Secretary Perkins certifies one or more controversies to the board for adjudication.

Dykstra indicated this attitude in reply to a telegram from Gov. Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania, requesting the board to intervene in the strike at the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s Bethlehem, Pa., plant.

Dykstra explained the board cannot intervene unless Secretary Perkins so requests. The President's order specified such action, and also specified Secretary Perkins was to call upon the new board only after department conciliators had failed to effect a settlement.

Dykstra, in his reply to Gov. James, said:

"Your telegram received. We share with you deep concern for a speedy and equitable settlement of the strike now affecting the plant of the Bethlehem Steel Co., at Bethlehem. This board can take up cases under the President's order only when certified by the Secretary of Labor.

"We are advised that the Federal and State conciliation services are at this moment working earnestly and cooperatively to bring about an early and equitable settlement of this strike. We are watching closely every development as we realize how essential it is to our national defense program that this unfortunate situation be quickly adjusted."

The mediation board will not convene until April 10, unless Secretary Perkins meanwhile certifies one or more cases to it, Dr. Dykstra said.

Labor Department officials, pointing out that the Bethlehem plant still is operating, voiced doubt that strike would be certified to the national board as long as production continues. Similar views were expressed regarding the strike at International Harvester Co. plants in Chicago and elsewhere.

While the board was waiting for Secretary Perkins to certify cases to it, the Office of Production Management furnished the board "for its information" names of 12 companies in key defense industries at which strikes may break out momentarily. A total of 64,350 workers is involved in controversies at these plants, the statement indicated.

The list included:

Westinghouse Electrical and Manufacturing Co., Pittsburgh, United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers of America (C. I. O.), 30,000 workers.

Bethlehem Steel Corporation, Johnstown, Pa., Steel Workers Organizing Committee (C. I. O.), 17,000 workers.

Westinghouse Airbrake Co., Wilmerding, Pa., United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers of America (C. I. O.), 4,400 workers.

Pacific Coast Drydocks Association and California Metal Trades Association, International Association of Machinists (A. F. L.), 3,600.

Youngstown Sheet & Tool Co., Chicago, Steel Workers Organizing Committee (C. I. O.), 1,000 workers.

Union Calls Strike Vote at Three N. Y. Shipyards

150 State troopers erased picket lines and prevented congregations of strikers along the 4-mile street paralleling the huge plant.

Whether the newly formed picket lines, set up after the midafternoon change of shift, would prove to be a move too little and too late to restore an apparently lost militancy in the strike was a question which remained unanswered.

Implying that the strike was broken, company spokesmen declared that 80 per cent of the workers reported on today's shifts and that work on the plant's share of the Bethlehem company's $1,500,000,000 of defense orders continued uninterrupted.

Union leaders, however, reported that they filed 6,000 applications for unemployment benefits, indicating that about one-third of the plant's production workers were on strike.

Although the company spokesman asserted that the strike had not affected those departments working on military orders, there were reports tonight that Army, Navy and FBI officers were investigating the dispute. State police, whose ranks were swelled to 250, were said to fear trouble at the plant gates as the night progressed.

Most singular factor in the dispute, which flared Monday afternoon when voting began on the employes' representation plan, independent union found company dominated by the National Labor Relations Board, was the absence of vigorous mediation attempts, either by the company, the union or Government agencies.

A conference scheduled for this morning between the union and the company's Labor Relations officer, Walter L. Trumbauer, was canceled when the union representatives failed to arrive on time. However, it was announced tonight that the meeting would be held at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

A company spokesman, meanwhile, declined to make any comment when asked whether the company would meet with union representatives if they were accompanied by State or Federal mediators, or to make any statement on whether the company wanted mediation.

He denied union charges that yesterday's outbreaks of violence, in which cars were overturned and local police roughed up, were the result of company instigation. He added that the company had not imported any strikebreakers or provacateurs, but said, "We know that there are many faces in town and around the gates never seen before."

Although the question of wages has not been formally raised in the strike, behind the agitation for the elimination of the E. R. P. lies a deep dissatisfaction with the company's bonus system, characterized by Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, as a device to circumvent the wage and hour law.

The NLRB, holding the E. R. P. was company dominated, ordered it disestablished and its recognition by the company withdrawn. Neither decree was effected. Instead, the order was appealed to the United States Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia, and argued there February 17.

According to Hugh P. McFadden, E. R. P. attorney, Monday's elections were mandatory under the E. R. P. by laws, and without them, Bethlehem employes would be without bargaining representatives.

At Johnstown, Pa., however, E. R. P. officers at the Bethlehem Co.'s Cambria plant canceled an election scheduled for this morning. Although there was a possibility that the voting might be called for on Friday, it was believed probable that it would be held entirely in abeyance to prevent an almost certain strike among the 15,000 employes there.

James Roosevelt A Modern Midas To Legislator

Des Moines, Iowa, March 26 (AP).—James Roosevelt, son of the President, was referred to as a modern Midas today when the Iowa House voted to tax $100 a year each the automatic motion picture boxes with which he has been identified.

One Representative argued the devices don't produce sufficient revenue to pay such a tax.

"Don't you know," asked Representative A. H. Avery (Republican), "that everything Jimmy Roosevelt touches turns into gold?"

weeks, would probably not report out any legislation this week or even next; but a speech of its chairman, Representative Sumners, Texas, scheduled for today, is awaited in the House with widespread interest.

Meanwhile, Chairman Vinson of the Naval Affairs Committee said that he intended to start hearings next week on his bill to provide a 30-day cooling-off period in disputes involving naval contracts. The measure would preserve the status quo in respect to open or closed shops in firms engaged in naval construction.

Committee Hearing

Rules Committee hearing was held yesterday on the proposal of Representative Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, for a House investigation into union labor fees in the District. He subsequently asked that the inquiry be enlarged to include Forts Meade and Belvoir. No action was taken by the committee and none is expected in the immediate future.

Speaking for the resolution, Representative Walter (Democrat), Pennsylvania (whose district includes the struck Bethlehem Steel plant), said that in some instances "undesirables have gotten their lecherous hands on labor unions in the United States."

Representative Michener (Republican), of Michigan, another member of the Judiciary Committee, observed that "the minute you attempt to do anything," the various members of the Defense Commission "tell us that if you pass a law, you're going to interfere with the national defense."

"It strikes me," said Representative Halleck, the Indianan who nominated Wendell Willkie at the Republican convention, "that we're coming up to the time when we ought to be doing something."

Dies Reads Telegam

Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, called on Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, to tell what his organization "proposes to do" with officials of "whose Communist affiliations there can be no doubt."

He read to the House a telegram he said he had sent to Murray which said in part:

"What does your organization propose to do with the following officials of the C. I. O. concerning whose Communist affiliations there can be no doubt in view of the evidence before our committee."

Dies said his telegram contained these names and affiliations: Joseph Curran, national Maritime Union president; Ben Gold, president of the International Fur and Leather Workers' Union; Donald Henderson, president of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers; Harry Bridges, C. I. O. West Coast maritime leader; Michael Quill, president of the Transport Workers' Union; John Santo and Austin Hogan, officials of the same union; Lewis Merrill, president of the United Office and Professional Workers and others.

Air Maneuvers Over Factories Spur Workers

The Army has inaugurated a novel method of forestalling strikes and increasing production in plane factories—staging aerial demonstrations over aircraft production centers to show the workers the importance of their jobs.

Maj. Gen. George H. Brett, acting Chief of the Air Corps, disclosed yesterday that the plan already had been tried with good results at Seattle, and that similar air shows are planned elsewhere to further the patriotic feeling of defense team-play.

"We want these factory workers and their families, and the general public as well, to realize that they are playing tremendously important parts in the defense program—that they actually are producing something for that defense just as much as though they were wearing the uniform," Brett told a House military subcommittee.

Pioneer Air Corps Wasn't So Particular

The acting chief of the Army Air Corps disclosed yesterday that he'd never have become a military pilot had the physical standards for flying cadets today applied when he won his wings 25 years ago.

Maj. Gen. George H. Brett said that he was color blind and had been when he learned to fly back in 1915.

"When I entered aviation," he added, "so many pilots had been killed that they couldn't get enough applicants."

The Air Corps chief said that since the demonstration over the Boeing Aircraft factory in Seattle he had received many letters indicating that the people there were "tickled to death" at what the Army had done.

"We were a little worried by the strike situation," Brett explained, "so we took a lot of all types of our planes up there on a Saturday afternoon and put on a demonstration to show the workers and their families just what they are working on That's what we're going to have to do for the entire country."

Present plans call for demonstrations at Baltimore and Buffalo, where there are large plane factories. The Army also will stage such air shows over colleges late this spring, to stimulate pilot recruiting among June graduates.

The Army pilot training is to be expanded more than four times the present output, Gen. Brett told the House subcommittee. Next month the military air schools will begin turning out 600 trained fliers a month. This will be stepped up so that by November 1, 1942, the output will be at the rate of 30,000 a year.

To reach a rate of 1,000 finished pilots by October, the Army will have to double the number of primary training schools now in use—about 28—he stated.

Members of the committee disclosed at the same time that the Army is testing a new explosive said to be 60 per cent more powerful than TNT, and costing only one-third as much as the latter.

14,900 Defense Homes Needed

New housing facilities for 44,900 families of defense workers will soon be required in 65 communities, Charles F. Palmer, defense housing coordinator, yesterday told the Senate Public Buildings and Grounds Committee.

Palmer testified in support of legislation to provide an additional $150,000,000 for defense housing, which would bring authorizations for this purpose to a total of $467,099,987.

The witness said that $134,071,500 of the $140,000,000 provided by the Lanham Act, passed last session, had been allocated, as of March 1. Under these allocations, he said, dwellings are being built to accommodate 33,090 families.

House Acts To Put Teeth In Alien Laws

By Cecil B. Dickson

International News Service Staff Writer

Legislation to put "teeth" in United States counter-espionage activities against alien Communists, Nazis and Fascists operating in this country yesterday was given right of way in the House. Action was scheduled for next week.

The bill, by Rerpesentative Hobbs (Democrat), Alabama, and advocated by Attorney General Jackson also will permit the Federal Government to detain at immigration stations thousands of deportable aliens now roaming the country at will. It was approved unanimously by both House Judiciary and Rules Committees.

Aimed to keep subversive elements from coming into the country, the measure also proposed to write into Federal Law for the first time a prohibition against the entry of any alien "intending to act in behalf of any foreign government or foreign political party or group" including "the Communist Party of the United States of America, The Partito Nazionale Fascista, The Nationalsozialistiesche Deutche Arbeiter Partei, The Kyffaeuser Bund, The German-American Bund, or any organization successor to any one of them."

More than 8,000 undesirable aliens against whom deportation warrants have been issued are in this country and the Government has found it virtually impossible to deport any of them because of Europe's war conditions and the refusal of several countries to permit return of the aliens.

Attorney General Jackson informed Congress that under existing laws the Government was unable to keep thousands of the deportable aliens from roaming about the country because it was unable to send them back to their native countries.

The legislation will permit the Government to place them, along with aliens convicted of criminal charges, into detention camps operated by the Immigration Service.

With approval by Congress of the bill, the Justice Department and the Federal Bureau of Identification will be better able to combat espionage and sabotage activities of aliens working for foreign governments and foreign political parties, according to Representative Hobbs.

The bill has been attacked by liberal elements in the country as setting up "concentration camps." "That," said Hobbs, "is propaganda used by Communists and Nazis who want a free rein to carry on espionage and sabotage against our defense program."

Under the measure a new board of supervision of deportable aliens is created to pass on appeals of aliens against deportation and detention. Provision is made that they may be allowed to stay in this country and remain free if the board finds their activities "are not deleterious to the national safety of the United States."

Provisions also are made to speed up naturalization of aliens, whose records justify their becoming citizens.

Halifax Sees Cooperation Among Nations After War

By the Associated Press

New York, March 26.—A spirit of cooperation among all nations, translated into practical action, was pictured by Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, today in a discussion of the postwar world.

"I would not exclude Germany for one moment from cooperation," he said, "if Germany is willing to cooperate with sincerity, with good will, and with the intention to be a good European.

"All I am saying in regard to Germany is that after this war the world will not be prepared to take any more risks about Germany not cooperating."

The tall, slim peer discussed Britain's prosecution of the war and her after-war aims with a score or more American and British newsmen.

Alternately twirling a charm on his watch-chain and toying with his horn-rimmed glasses, the Ambassador assured his interviewers that Britain did not want a vindictive peace.

"But," he added, "we are going to see, as far as we can, and I haven't the smallest doubt that you will be with us in this, that steps are taken to insure the world against a repetition of this affair at the hands of Germany."

Lord Halifax, speaking of postwar adjustments, said: "I believe that your country and mine will have to remain awfully close together, and if they remain as close as I would like to see them, I think that they will be the, so to speak, magnet, the rally point, of other countries who feel the same way."

He said it was his "deliberate and considered conviction" that the confidence of the British people, together with "a combination of four activities—military, naval, air and blockade—with your help we can secure victory over the Nazis and their Axis allies that we think is essential for the peace of the world."

On the question of American aid to Britain, Halifax agreed with a questioner that "it is very much a question of how fast you can do it."

"If we don't do it fast enough, what happens?" he was asked.

"Well," replied the Ambassador, "the war will take longer, but you needn't think that in any circumstances we are going to lose, because we are not."

After luncheon, Lord Halifax went to City Hall for a formal call on Mayor LaGuardia and later opened the clubrooms for the new British Merchant Navy Club.

Army May Study D.C. Blackout Plan

The War Department may consider the suggestion of Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, that Washington have a trial blackout, it was indicated yesterday.

Assistant Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson told Randolph that the "proposal is worthy of most careful consideration" during a conference.

Willkie Urges U. S. Assurance Of Aid to China

By the Associated Press

New York, March 26.—Wendell L. Willkie said tonight that China's struggle against Japan would go down in history "as one of the decisive battles in mankind's long fight for freedom and for a better life" and urged America's moral and material support of the Chinese as a means to preserve its own freedom.

In a speech prepared for a dinner under auspices of United China Relief, which opened a Nation-wide campaign to raise $5,000,000, Willkie said the United States should assure China and all nations fighting "aggressors" of "weapons on a vast scale," of relief, and of our determination to keep free governments from defeat.

"The truth is," he said, "that freedom cannot exist in isolation. Freedom cannot exist in prison. We in the United States, who have demonstrated our ability to be free, cannot keep freedom all to ourselves. To remain free we must share freedom with others."

He said China's struggle was a vital part of the defense against the world attack upon the economic and governmental systems of democracy, and that totalitarianism would be thrust upon the United States unless this attack was defeated.

Whether this country chose to trade with victorious totalitarian governments or to exist in isolation, he said, conditions would make it necessary for the Government "to step in to run our industries, our enterprises, our jobs, and finally our lives. We would lose our freedom in the very process of trying to save it."

House Acts to Halt Transfer of Cotton

By the Associated Press

The House passed legislation yesterday to restrict the Agriculture Department's authority to reconcentrate Government-owned cotton.

The roll call vote was announced as 226 to 119.

The bill, offered by Senators McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, and Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, was designed to protect interior warehouses against heavy movements of cotton to port warehouses. It was opposed by Secretary Wickard.

It now goes back to the Senate for concurrence in a minor amendment.

Nazis in Troops Taking Libyan Mud Village

By the Associated Press

Cairo, March 26.—British headquarters conceded tonight that there were some German troops in an Axis mechanized detachment which last Monday occupied El Agheila, westernmost point of the British spearhead in Libya, and that there probably were other detachments in the vicinity directly westward.

This is by no means an indication of a general German-Italian advance, they declared, for the British have been keeping a careful watch on Germans landing at Tripoli, only North Africa harbor left to the Italians and repeatedly attacked by the R. A. F.

The latest raids were on Monday and Tuesday nights, the British reported, and caused fires and explosions among government buildings and harbor works.

The bulk of the Axis detachment in El Agheila is Italian, the British added. British patrols withdrew Sunday before the town was occupied, a communique stated.

The town is 150 miles southwest of Bengasi on the Gulf of Sidra, at the point where the victorious imperial army of the Nile halted its westward drive.

British officers said the town was of no importance: a ruined mud fort, a few bad wells and having a peacetime population of about 20. Besides its position is exposed militarily.

In Eritrea and Ethiopia, last spots of stiff Italian resistance in East Africa, the R. A. F. reported widespread air raids, particularly at Cheren, in support of the British land forces' efforts to take that Italian stronghold which guards the route to Asmara.

Many Italian prisoners and considerable equipment were reported taken as the British gained new positions around Cheren and repulsed a counterattack.

In Ethiopia, the British said they heavily bombed the Addis Ababa-Djibuti Railway between Diredawa, where the British hope to cut the railroad, and the Ethiopian capital.

In conjunction with this action, forces pushing westward from Jijiga advanced on Harar, walled city which stands as a guardian of Diredawa.

Yugoslavia Faces Revolt Over Pact

Vienna.

Alarmed by the spread of dissension, the government forbade the playing and singing of national songs.

It was learned late tonight that a resolution was being prepared by the leaders of the Serbian Patriotic Society, the Comitadjis, the Sokols and others for presentation to Prince Paul tomorrow demanding the expulsion of the "traitorous Cvetkovitch government" and immediate formation of a nationalist government.

On the eve of tomorrow's Episcopal council of the nineteen Serbian Orthodox Missions, priests and monks appeared in the cafes late today distributing pamphlets calling upon the people to revolt. Serbian priests and monks have conspired and fought with the peasants against suppressors and invaders for nearly 200 years. The present patriarch is the son of a Comitadji leader.

Yugoslavia's revolution, however, if it comes, seems certain to start in central Serbia and Montenegro, where public opinion has already reached an explosive pitch, according to telephoned information from eyewitnesses today.

Some of the young army leaders have declared that the army never will fire on the Yugoslav people. But foreign military experts in Belgrade insisted today that the Yugoslav army—one of the best organized in Europe—would follow the orders of the general staff, even to put down a popular revolt.

In Zagreb and Sarajevo students demonstrated in an orderly manner, quite openly distributing pamphlets deploring the government's action. Following Monday's disastrous demonstration at Banja Luka in which many were hurt, disturbances have been intermittently breaking out there all day yesterday and today.

Students Riot

In Belgrade, shortly before noon, some 250 to 300 university students wearing British, American and Greek flags in the lapels of their blue jackets swarmed onto the great Terazia Square, chanting, singing and waving Serbian flags. Large forces of steel-helmeted police charged three times, slightly injuring a few of the students as well as a few onlookers. Eighteen were arrested.

Grammar school students in a fashionable school on the outskirts of the city today were punished and the school closed when two classes of students walked out of the German class and refused to attend a lecture. German is the second language in Yugoslavia.

British on Frontier

Belgrade, March 26 (U.P.).—Observers at the Yugoslav southern frontier today watched British mechanized forces move into positions along the strategic Vardar Valley opposite the Yugoslav town of Djevdjelija, about 65 miles north of Greek Salonika.

Boy Admits Helping Move Md. Girl's Body

MARIE SWIFT

By the Associated Press

Crisfield, Md., March 26.—State's Attorney F. Kirk Maddrix said tonight a 16-year-old boy had confessed helping his mother take the body of Miss Marie Swift, attractive garment factory worker, to a country road, where it was found early yesterday.

Madrrix said investigators still were questioning the mother, a Crisfield oyster shucker, in an effort to determine cause of the 25-year-old woman's death.

"The boy confessed being with his mother and helping her remove the body from their home to where it was found," the State's attorney said, adding that the case was "near solution."

Miss Swift was to have been married Saturday, and Madrrix said an autopsy performed by Dr. William Coulbourne, medical examiner, disclosed she was an expectant mother.

Maddrix said investigation showed that Miss Swift left a dance Monday night, and went to the oyster shucker's house about 9 or 9:30 p. m.

A taxicab driver told authorities he saw the girl walking down a side street about that time.

Her body was found early yesterday, lying face down near the country road, by Clifford Taylor as he was bicycling to work.

Maddrix said she apparently had been thrown from an automobile.

Meanwhile, the medical examiner awaited a report from the Federal Bureau of Investigation at Washington, where the girl's vital organs were sent for examination after the autopsy failed to disclose cause of death.

Martial Law Binds Syrian Cities After Rioting

By the Associated Press

Vichy, March 26.—Martial law prevailed in several Syrian cities tonight following two days of riots in which at least 12 persons were killed in Damascus and Aleppo.

Garrisons of the French colonial army were held ready to deal with further uprisings, under order of Gen. Henri Dentz, commander of French forces in the Levant states.

Food shortages and Nationalist agitation were blamed for the rioting, which some sources added was incited by foreign agents.

Earlier outbreaks occurred on February 28 in native quarters which later were closed by French authorities, and as comparative calm returned, Gen. Dentz began discussions with native leaders.

The uprisings recurred on March 19, and Dentz suspended conversation with the native leaders.

Let Services Buy Argentine Beef, Welles Urges

Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, asked yesterday that Congress lift restrictions on Army and Navy purchases of Argentine beef.

He made the request in asking a Senate Appropriations Committee to eliminate from a $4,073,000,000 supplemental defense bill a House-approved provision generally prohibiting the Army and Navy from purchasing food, clothing and other products except in continental United States.

Welles appeared before the committee in a closed session and told reporters later that he had urged that the restriction be lifted so that purchases could be made in Latin-American countries in furtherance of the "Good Neighbor" policy and to promote hemispherical cooperation on defense.

The provision inserted in the House-approved bill was similar to an amendment the Senate struck out of the regular naval supply bill this week, despite the efforts of some Senators to prevent the purchase by the Navy of Argentine canned beef and other products.

Army and Navy To Get Defense Inventors' Report

The research divisions of the War and Navy Departments are to receive the report of a conference here this week of defense inventors.

The Inventors' Council, of the Department of Commerce, including scientists and industrialists serving the Government for $1 a year, met Tuesday.

They discussed war inventions submitted by American inventors throughout the year.

Those meeting were: Conway P. Coe, United States Patent Commissioner; Watson Davis, director of Science Service, Inc.; Dr. Frederick M. Feiker, dean of the George Washington University School of Engineering; Frederick M. Zeder, vice chairman of the board of engineers of the Chrysler Corporation; Dr. William D. Coolidge, vice chairman of General Electric Corporation; Dr. Finn Sparre, director of development for the duPont Corporation; Rear Admiral Harold G. Bowen, director of the Naval Research Laboratory; Maj. Gen. J. O. Mauborgne, chief of the Army Signal Corps; Maj. Gen. William H. Tschaffat, retired, former chief of Army Ordnance Division, and Lawrence Langer, secretary of the Inventors Council.

Convoy Beats Off Nazi Attacks; Bombers From U. S. Patrol Sea

By the Associated Press

London, March 26.—British war vessels shepherding convoys through the North Sea beat off a series of night attacks by German torpedo boats and shot down a German plane with a hit full in the nose, the admiralty announced tonight.

These reports were issued as reliable sources said Britain's answer to German extension of the Atlantic counter-blockade is a swarm of big American patrol bombers that comb the seas for Nazi craft as far as Iceland—800 miles from the nearest English cape.

Lockheed and consolidated "Catalina" bombers bear the brunt of the aerial scouting.

The admiralty said naval light forces hit several of the speedy E-boats and that it was probable some were lost.

The plane—a Messerschmitt 110—was shot down when it made a daylight attack on a convoy guarded by the destroyer Versatile, built during the World War. No British damage was reported.

Earlier officials announced a British plan had torpedoed and sunk a 6,000-ton German supply ship today off the Dutch coast and the admiralty said the British submarine Sturgeon torpedoed and sank an 8,000-ton German tanker off Norway.

German activity over Britain was light today but two southern towns reported industrial buildings damaged by German aircraft.

Bolivia-U. S. Oil Deal Protested

La Paz, Bolivia, March 26 (AP).—Opponents of a Bolivian Senate project for an oil agreement with the United States demonstrated outside the presidential palace today. They carried banners which said: "We will defend Bolivia against foreign interference. We will defend our oil."

The Senate project, introduced recently by a minority bloc, urged an agreement with the United States on the grounds that questions arising from cancellation of a Standard Oil concession in 1937 damaged Bolivian-United States relations.

U. S. Weighs Nazi Blockade Extension

The United States is preparing a reply to Germany's extension of her sea blockade to territorial waters of Greenland, Acting Secretary of State Welles indicated yesterday.

The German warning that war operations would be extended past Iceland to within 3 miles of Greenland set officials to studying whether the Berlin government had infringed on the Western Hemisphere and what should be done about it.

Mentioned as possible steps in answer were:

1. A United States warning to Germany to keep her submarines and other war vessels out of the Western Hemisphere.

2. An extension of the Neutrality Act's "combat zone" to include Iceland, thus forbidding American shipping from visiting that British-occupied Danish colony.

3. An extension of the Pan-American neutrality zone to the easternmost limit of the Western Hemisphere, permitting United States neutrality patrol vessels to widen their patrol.

Statement Due Soon

Welles said at a press conference that the entire question was under study and that he probably would make a statement in a day or two.

The German action brought up for debate again the exact limits of the Western Hemisphere, which the United States is pledged by the Monroe Doctrine to defend.

Administration quarters of high authority recently defined this hemisphere to include Greenland but not to include Iceland.

The United States now keeps Coast Guard vessels around Greenland, officially on international iceberg patrol, but also to maintain watch on any hostile operations in those waters.

Officials disputed German explanations that they extended the blockade against Britain to include Iceland because American ships had been unloading supplies there for transshipment to England.

No U. S. Ships Fly Route

The Maritime Commission declared that no American ships had been going to Iceland. The only ships plying between the United States and Iceland were said to be six small vessels operating under the Icelandic flag and carrying supplies for the island. The ships, it was stated, totaled 7,516 tons.

Trade between the United States and Iceland began after the German invasion of Denmark isolated the island from the mother country.

Officials wondered whether the German blockade extension would affect shipment of food and other supplies from the United States to Finland.

Finnish vessles which have been carrying Red Cross and other supplies to the port of Petsamo normally pass near Iceland through the area now declared within the blockade zone.

The American Export - Import Bank only last week granted Finland a credit of $7,000,000, essentially for foodstuffs.

Nazi Food Deal With French May Upset U. S. Plans to Help

Whether Britain should permit food from America to be sent to unoccupied France is a question of official consideration in the United States today. Below The Post presents the fourth of a series by the United Press on the food problem in France, including the disposition of Red Cross food sent there, and an account of the State Department's interest in a reported deal for an exchange of commodities between occupied and unoccupied France which indicates France's problem might be one of distribution rather than scarcity.

By Ralph Heinzen

United Press Staff Writer

Montauban, France, March 25.—Tracing a case of canned condensed milk sent by the American Red Cross on the S. S. Cold Harbor, as part of my survey of French food conditions, I saw the mercy shipment reach its intended destination last week—among the group classified as "children zero to 14 years."

I saw the elaborate pyramid of precautions with which the Red Cross surrounded the distribution of this cargo to insure that it remains in unoccupied France and that none reaches German or Italian hands or enters occupied territory.

While I watched, school children each got a glass of milk, mothers came to get it in bottles for nursing babies, and thin old men and women whose daily bread ration is 160 grams—two slices—gratefully drank glassfuls which were their entire dinner.

I saw milk distributed to children in poverty-stricken families where the single glass of milk was all that stood between them and hunger.

Every can of milk was checked as it was taken from the case and opened and consumed on the spot so that the Red Cross could assure Washington and London that the entire cargo reached the mouths for which it was intended. On the restriction depends the possibility of future shipments.

In a dozen of the hungriest departments of Free France I saw two very able young Americans—Alex Moore of Paris, Chicago and Leland Stanford University, and Clen Robertsen of Nashville, Tenn.—supervise for the Red Cross the distribution by scores of French charity groups. Moore, who is barely 21, wears the French army ribbon for distinguished service and bravery under fire while a member of the American Volunteer Ambulance Service.

The two young Americans whizz along the roads in a station wagon from one distribution center to another, arriving unannounced to check stocks against what they know the distribution center received.

They go into hospitals, schools, orphan asylums, and dispensaries where they check and countercheck the distribution of milk, woolens, vitamins, yeast and all other foods and medicines which made up the Cold Harbor's cargo, that arrived at Marseille some two weeks ago.

I went with them, and from their list I checked and assured myself that the materials are feeding and clothing the mothers and children to whom the Americans sent them.

By the end of this week all of the Cold Harbor's cargo will be distributed. On April 1 another Red Cross ship is due at Marseille.

Whether France will be granted American food supplies in the future became an open question at the State Department yesterday following official surprise at press reports of a barter agreement between unoccupied and occupied France to trade livestock for wheat and other foodstuffs.

Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles telegraphed Ambassador William D. Leahy in Vichy for full information on the press reports of the deal, but would make no other comment.

Authoritative sources revealed, however, that the State Department had no advance knowledge of the reported barter deal, was considerably surprised by it, and will review the entire question of feeding short-rationed France in the light of these reports.

It was considered unlikely that any change would be made in plans to ship a gift of $1,000,000 worth of flour to unoccupied France in two French ships.

Strictest guarantees were demanded of the Vichy government that none of the food, nor the ships, would get into German hands or be of benefit to the Nazi conquerors of France. Thus it was with considerable consternation that officials heard reports yesterday from Vichy that the government of unoccupied France had agreed to send to occupied France 1,355,000 head of livestock and other foodstuffs in exchange for 800,000 tons of wheat, a like amount of potatoes and 200,000 tons of sugar.

American officials appeared insistent upon being fully satisfied that the Vichy government will live fully up to its guarantees before they will sanction additional shipments.

A British Embassy spokesman doubted whether navicerts for the 13,500 tons of gift flour would be revoked by the British ministry of economic warfare, but he added:

"Obviously, it does not help the case of food for France."

Nazis Extend Sea Blockade To Iceland

By the Associated Press

Berlin, March 26.—Germany declared tonight her determination to do everything militarily possible to keep Iceland from becoming a mid-Atlantic supply depot for Britain and followed up with a special high command announcement that 41,500 tons of shipping had been sunk by aerial bombs today.

The bulk of this toll was reported to have been taken far west of the British Isles, well into the extended zone of German war operations which now includes Iceland. The Germans say the British are trying to use this island, which is occupied by British troops, as a base to crack the German blockade of American supplies to England.

West of Shetlands

A rare high command special communique said a long-range bomber sank a 10,000-ton freighter in a strongly-defended convoy several hundred kilometers west of the Shetland Islands, and that in the same region one 9,000-ton and one 6,500-ton merchant ship fell victims to long-distance battle planes.

The communique said a 6,000-ton tanker sunk in the mouth of the Thames River and another 6,000-ton ship damaged off the southeast British coast.

A report that the British planned to run the blockade from Iceland with a fleet of tiny boats that could skitter away from heavier Nazi war vessels was given as one reason for the blockade extension.

Germany intends to make it difficult or impossible for large and more vulnerable cargo vessels to take supplies from America to Iceland, these sources said, thus nipping the "mosquito merchant fleet" plan before it can begin.

Hitler's Threat Recalled

Moreover, American ships that approach Iceland presumably will be treated as any nonbelligerent vessel approaching England, Berlin sources added.

(On January 30 Adolf Hitler warned the world against aid to Britain and said "every ship that comes within range of our torpedo tubes will be torpedoed.")

Germany long has had its eye on Iceland. German reconnaissance planes have made at least one flight to Reykjavik to have a look around, and Nazi surface craft from time to time have been reported in that vicinity.

Resist Betrayal, Britain Appeals to Yugoslavs

By the United Press

London, March 26.—The British government tonight broadcast an appeal to the Yugoslav masses, already demonstrating against Germany, to resist "the betrayal of your honor and independence" and prevent ratification of Yugoslavia's adherence to the Axis alliance.

The provocative appeal was broadcast by Lieut. Col. Leopold S. Amery, secretary of state for India in the cabinet, despite the fact that the press asserted editorially that a Yugoslav revolt might only serve to give Adolf Hitler a pretext to send troops into the Balkan nation.

During the day Richard Austen Butler, undersecretary of foreign affairs, told the House of Commons that Yugoslavia has opened the way for German "infiltration and intimidation which will gradually imperil the free existence of Yugoslavia as an independent state."

Amery told the Yugoslav people in his broadcast that "it is not too late" for them to save their nation from Hitler's clutches.

Can Not Sign Away Honor

"Your government is democratic and it cannot claim the right to sign away the honor and independence of 16,000,000 people against their will," he said.

"If the people clearly show that accession to the Axis pact is regarded by them as a betrayal of their honor and independence then surely it is the duty of the government to consult the people before the pact is ratified.

"It is not too late for that . . . the whole future of Yugoslavia is on razor's edge."

Amery then asked:

"Will Yugoslavia sell her honor and liberty for a German promise? Will you let your people become once more a subject race?"

During the day it was proposed in the House of Commons that the British Broadcasting Corporation should cut the time of other European broadcasts and devote more time to Yugoslavia "in order to encourage the Yugoslav people's resistance to the government's policy of surrender."

Nazis Ready to Grab Mile

As Butler described the Belgrade government's capitulation to the tripower alliance and told of a strong last-minute British warning to the Yugoslavs, the London press asserted that "Germany has got the inch she needs in order to grab her mile."

Butler told members of Commons that Yugoslavia, by yesterdays pact-signing at Vienna, has not only abandoned her neutrality, but has now "entered the very system of Great Britain's enemies."

"The responsibility for the result of the present decision rests squarely on the shoulders of the Yugoslav government," he said. "The house will understand that I cannot take this matter any further."

"The Yugoslav government," Butler said, "must be well aware that in adhering to the tri-partite pact they have opened the way to Germany's familiar methods of infiltration and intimidation which will gradually imperil the very existence of Yugoslavia as an independent state."

Supplies for Greece

London, March 26 (AP).—Supplies of tin, rubber, hemp, hides, chemicals and coffee have been shipped to Greece from British colonies, the colonial office said today, to help in the Greek war effort.

Warship Transfer To Canada Instead Of Britain Studied

Transfer of destroyers and lighter warcraft to Canada, instead of directly to Britain, yesterday was reported one of several plans under consideration should British supply lines be cut by the German counter-blockade.

The ships, it was said, could be loaned to Canada with the specific condition that they be used to keep North Atlantic sea lanes open.

Proponents of the Canadian transfer point out that it would be in line with the United States "good neighbor" and hemispheric defense policy, with repossession more certain in event of a British defeat.

Fee Requirements In Public High Schools Denounced

Philadelphia, March 26 (AP).—Thousands of students from low-income families are forced to leave high school annually because they cannot pay fees required in the free public schools, Harold C. Hand, of the University of Maryland, said today.

He spoke at the opening session of Scholmen's Week, a University of Pennsylvania conference expected to draw 5,000 educators during the next four days.

Hand said charges now made for towels, locker rooms, athletic equipment, diplomas, dramatics and athletic contests can't be met by some, who as a result are "frozen out of school."

"The result of this," he asserted, "is leading to greater economic, social and cultural inequalities, and is seriously widening class distinctions."

Hand suggested that tax funds be used to finance all educationally worthwhile student activities and that more financial aid in general be provided for underprivileged students.

U. S. Aide Hurt in Raid On London Flies Home

New York, March 26 (AP).—Maj. Robert B. Williams, air attache of the American Embassy in London, who was seriously injured during a bombing raid January 31, is en route home on a Pan American clipper due at LaGuardia Airport Friday.

Fears were expressed for a time that Maj. Williams would lose the sight of one eye as a result of his injuries. It was understood an ambulance would meet the plane to take him to a Government hospital.

What Size is a Sheet

do you realize that the "torn size" you have been buying is not the actual hemmed size, which may be as much as 5¾ inches shorter

When your mother or grandmother bought sheets to hem, herself, by hand—quite naturally the merchant told her the size of the sheet as torn (to assure straightness) from the bolt. Ever since, the torn size has been stated as the sheet size.

But Woodward & Lothrop feels that modern housewives, accustomed to buying sheets already hemmed, may not take into consideration the fact that the sheets they buy are actually shorter than the size customarily given.

For instance, closely woven Wakefield Percale Sheets vary 5¾ inches in length between the 90x108-inch torn size and the 90x102¼-inch actual hemmed size. Pillowcase torn size measurements indicate size before folding and hemming.

We shall, therefore, tell you both sizes—the torn size and the hemmed or actual size, so you may know more exactly what you are buying—until you become more accustomed to hemmed sizes—after that Woodward & Lothrop will quote actual hemmed sizes only for sheets and pillowcases.

Navy Making Plane Carrier Of Freighter

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Navy is converting a new 17,615-ton merchant ship into an aircraft carrier designed to carry a squadron or more of war planes, it was officially disclosed yesterday.

Two other merchantmen, officials also said, are being acquired for remodelling into airplane transports—a new type of vessel able to rush large numbers of short range fighters to distant "trouble spots."

The S. S. Mormacmail, one of the C-3 cargo ships completed by the Maritime Commission last spring, has been purchased from the Mormack Lines and is undergoing conversion at Norfolk, Va., the Navy stated.

While unwilling to go into details about the work to be done, officials said that a flight deck will be built over the vessel, and guns installed. The work will take several months and when completed the ship will be able to carry "more than a squadron" of fighting planes. A squadron of carrier planes normally includes 18 craft.

Te merchant vessels being purchased for conversion into plane transports are the Seatrain Texas and Seatrain New Jersey, owned by the Seatrain Lines. The craft, finished last year, are slightly larger than the Mormacmail, and are specially built to carry freight cars.

About 100 freight cars can be rolled onto the craft on tracks from the docks, and the Navy plans to use their quick loading and carrying capacities for fast shipment of planes. Warplanes, their wings detached, can be easily put aboard and as easily unloaded and put into action, officials said.

The merchant vessel being converted into an aircraft carrier, designated by the Navy as the AVG-1, has an over-all length of 492 feet and a beam of 69 feet. Its Diesel engines drive it some 3 knots above its designed speed of 16½ knots. The vessel was bought from the Mormack Lines for $2,956,346 and its cost of conversion probably will run more than that. The two Seatrain ships cost about $3,000,000 each and will cost an estimated $3,400,000 more apiece to convert.

If the Navy's experiment in converting a merchantman to an aircraft carrier proves a success, it would open a way to the quick strengthening of the fleet aircraft wing. There are six aircraft carriers now in service, and 12 building. Many of the latter will not be completed before 1943 or 1944.

Ivan S. Ivanovic, treasurer of Combined Argosies, Inc., an agency for several leading shipping concerns, said it was true that he had been in Washington on Tuesday, but declared that his discussions had not been official, but were independent, representing only the interests of his lines.

He declared no official action was needed or would be taken as long as his country and Great Britain remained nominally friendly, as they still are.

Another shipping man, who asked to remain anonymous, said, however, that he anticipated that "in view of the fact that Yugoslavia has joined the Axis, the British will take steps."

Ivanovic said that "the bulk of Yugoslav tramp ship operators whose steamers are in the United States, South American and other waters, will not cooperate with the Axis."

He added that a number of Yugoslav ships were in waters of the United States but would not say where they were located.

(Informed of the story at his home here, the Yugoslav Minister, Constantin Fotitch, would neither confirm nor deny the reports. "I have no statement to make," was his lone comment.—Editors Note.)

Legislation to extend the hours bars are open from Saturday midnight to 2 a. m. Sunday. This would be coupled, however, with the closing of bars between Sunday midnight and 2 a. m. Monday, which is now permitted.

Holders of on-sale beer licenses would begin the sale of beer and light wine on 1 p. m. Sunday instead of 8 a. m. Sundays and must close at Sunday midnight.

Licenses would be restricted to residents of the District for one-year prior to the application or those "gainfully" employed here for a year.

A complete ban on the offering of prizes, gifts or souvenirs as an inducement to purchase liquor products.

Class "A" license holders, or off-sale package goods, would be closed at 10 p. m. on weekdays but at midnight on Saturdays and days before legal holidays.

Limit advertising signs on display to 10 square feet or signs which blink. This regulation would become effective within 120 days.

Liquor licenses could not be granted to establishments within 400 feet of a church or school. This distance would be measured from the main street entrance of the licensed premise to the main street entrance of the institution. It had been proposed that this distance be 600 feet and that playgrounds, libraries, hospitals and athletic fields be included.

Combination stores, such as a grocery or delicatessen, having a liquor license, would have to provide separate departments for the liquor goods, which will be locked and closed during the hours when alcoholic beverages are not permitted. This will not, however, apply to combination stores, which are not open when the sale of liquor is prohibited. This regulation would become effective in 120 days.

Booths in beer and whisky taverns will be limited in height to 24 inches from seat to top of booth. It had been proposed to limit the height to 18 inches.

All licensees must supply a list and description of all employes within 30 days after promulgation.

Ban on the use of religious figures, Santa Claus, semi-nude women and the like in all liquor advertisements.

Permit the granting of a one-day beer license for picnics, or the like, in residential neighborhoods.

Appeals from decisions by the beverage board would be heard by the Commissioners, as heretofore, they decided in turning down a proposal to permit appeals to be taken to the courts. The use of miniatures, which contain non-alcoholic beverages, would be continued, the city heads ruled. A regulation had been proposed to abolish all miniatures, whether full of liquor or not. Liquor miniatures are now prohibited in the District. Two other proposals of a minor nature were disapproved by the Commissioners, because the present regulations already covered the features involved.

Negro's Defense Role to Be Aired

G. N. T. Gray, national welfare officer of the National Alliance of Postal Employes, will address the opening session of a conference on the Negro's role in national defense at 10 a. m. today in the Vermont Avenue Baptist Church.

The conference will be sponsored by the Chicago Council of Negro Organizations.

A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, will address the night session of the conference tomorrow at 8 p. m. Edgar Brown, president of the United Government Employes, also will speak tomorrow.

Nazis Get Holiday To Heil Matsuoka

The crowds cheered lustily along the entire route.

The usual military honors were accorded the guest, who appeared in good spirits, although diminutive in size beside his German hosts. The Japanese ambassador to Berlin, Lieut. Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, in his derby hat, as well as the full Japanese diplomatic and military missions here greeted him on the station platform.

The official visits are scheduled to begin tomorrow when the Japanese foreign minister will be received by Adolf Hitler and von Ribbentrop.

Tonight Matsuoka issued a message to the German people. Now that the three-power pact has become a reality, he declared, "the Japanese nation is with you in joy and sorrow." Japan believes in the Fuehrer and in the outstanding qualities of the German people, he added, "and will not be surpassed in fidelity, courage and firm determination to arrange the world on the basis of the new order. We must live in the future, not the past."

The Japanese trust that also the German people will remain faithful to the spirit and objective of the three-power pact, Matsuoka continued, and wish the Reich a rapid victory in this war. As a result of his visit, the Japanese foreign minister concluded, he hopes to be able to contribute to closer cooperation between the Axis nations.

It is suggested that Matsuoka during his stay in Berlin will receive visits from Japanese diplomats stationed in various European capitals.

Mystery Attacker Bludgeons Woman

was the matter, but all she would say was: "I'm bleeding from the mouth and nose."

Detectives questioned Street and learned the couple lived with Mrs. Street's 17-year-old son by a former marriage, John LaQuay, 17, a messenger with Western Union.

The youth left the apartment for work about 6 a. m., and Street left about five minutes later, the latter asserted.

Apparently Dazed

Police found blood in every room of the two-room, dinette, kitchen and bath apartment. The woman, they said, apparently had walked around in a daze after being struck. The bathroom floor was splattered as was the wash stand. A towel soaked in blood was in the wash bowl and one was lying on the floor of the dinette.

Spots of blood were noticeable on a couch in the living room. Spots also led along a corridor into the bedroom.

The apartment did not appear to have been ransacked and Street said furniture and other household effects were in order.

Robbery was not the motive of the mysterious attacker, detectives disclosed. A glass bank partly filled with coins was on a bureau in the bedroom and Mrs. Street's pocketbook was found undisturbed.

Suffering From Shock

Physicians at Casualty Hospital, who gave the woman first aid, said she was dressed in a flowered house dress which also was covered with blood.

They treated her for a severe head injury and she was later examined by her own doctor, Dr. Henry B. Gwynn. He said she had lost a large quantity of blood and had suffered serious head laceration and shock, apparently inflicted by a blow from a blunt object.

Mrs. Street was given a blood transfusion and will be X-rayed today to determine whether she suffered a skull fracture. Doctors said her condition was too grave to examine her for evidence of criminal assault.

She regained consciousness late yesterday long enough to tell her physician that a colored man had comes to her apartment, saying he wanted to repair the gas furnace in the kitchen. When he entered, she said, he struck her over the head and she lost consciousness.

She said her assailant was about middle-aged and was wearing dark clothing.

Alone in Apartment

Like Mrs. Abramowitz, Mrs. Street was alone in her apartment when the man entered. There was a night chain on the door which apparently was unfastened, investigators said. No weapon was found.

Residents of the building said they saw no strangers enter or leave, although Mrs. Harry Butcher, who lives on the first floor, said she heard Mrs. Street fall about 11 a. m. and added that she heard the woman moan.

Later, Mrs. Butcher continued, she heard Mrs. Street make a telephone call.

She added that she heard someone run down the steps but also thought this not unusual and did not telephone the police.

Defense Held Creating Major Problems Here

Washington's mushroom growth under pressure of defense activity is causing a housing shortage that is becoming acute and is creating serious problems of public health, schooling, and recreation, the Tolan migration investigating committee was told yesterday.

Charging that rents are mounting steadily and that low-income groups are being "gouged," Mrs. Helen Demey Hoffman, executive director of the Washington Housing Association, said:

"Overcrowding and lack of sanitation affect the white collar worker in Federal or private employment as well as the migrant worker.

"Frequent complaints of doubling up in apartments and rooming houses come to us. One bath for 15 to 20 persons is a common grievance. Three to six unrelated roomers in the parlor of a once fine private residence is not uncommon.

"Renting a vacant bed was once shocking but is now all too frequent. Conditions which were deplored for migrant workers in Washington are creeping up until now Federal workers must cope with them."

Exploitation Reported

Mrs. Hoffman said that "the exploitation of renters is definitely in the low-price range of dwelling units renting under $50 a month."

Quoting the WPA survey of last August to the effect that the renting vacancy rate is only 1.8 per cent and the overall rate 3 per cent, Mrs. Hoffman added.

"A vacancy rate of 5 per cent is needed to permit choice for the renter."

Health Officer George C. Ruhland told the committee that the "addition of thousands to the population of the District obviously will leave its impress on the health problems of this community."

A recent survey of one of Washington's rooming house districts, he said, covering 158 dwellings, disclosed 1,928 occupants for the 1,346 rooms, Dr. Ruhland said.

"It is a well-known fact," he added, "that where crowding of this type exists the incidence of sickness from communicable diseases is distinctly greater."

Anacostia Needs Schools

Dr. Ruhland pointed out that the applications for hospital admission permits rose from 32,676 in 1939 to 54,066 in 1940. The daily average of patients at Gallinger Hospital, he said, rose from 895 to 956 in the same period and showed a further increase to 1,184 in the first three months of 1941.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, called attention to the need for additional schools, because of the influx of defense workers, especially in the Anacostia area.

He submitted copies of the estimates and justifications previously presented to the Board of Education.

Hugo W. Walter, general secretary of the recreation committee of the District Defense Council, stressed the need for more recreational facilities, both for defense workers and selectees who are stationed in this area.

Dissatisfaction Seen

"The housing of defense workers places them in a very difficult and unsatisfactory position," he said.

"When they have no place to go and nothing to do but remain in their rooms they become dissatisfied and resentful. They place themselves, through no fault of their own, toward the bottom of the scale of good democratic behavior."

Dorothy Delapole, staff associate of the Travelers Aid Society, New York, told the committee that a sharp increase in the number of white middle-aged women coming into Washington had been observed.

The Tolan Committee concluded its hearings to await House action on a resolution to renew its life.

N. Y. Woman Sleuth Suspended in Shooting

New York, March 26 (AP).—Mary A. Shanley, 39, one of New York's two first-grade woman detectives, was suspended pending trial today after being charged with having "fired her gun without just cause" in a bar and grill and having been "found unfit for duty, due to overindulgence in some intoxicating agent or agents."

The bar proprietor told police she entered his place at 3 a. m. and fired a bullet into the bar after he had refused to serve her a drink. The $4,000-a-year detective, who was cited for bravery in 1937 after capturing two burglars single-handed, told other detectives that a male patron made insulting remarks to her and that she did not draw her gun until he made a movement which led her to believe he was reaching for a gun.

Dr. Prentiss Willson Denies Seeking to Restrain G. H. A.

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Skillfully parrying the prosecution's assault upon his testimony, Dr. Prentiss Willson yesterday not only denied seeking to restrain Group Health Association but emphasized he was against action which would have barred nonmembers of the District Medical Society from hospital staffs.

A former president of the society, Dr. Willson was the first defendant among 13 Washington practitioners to take the stand in the antitrust trial, in which organized medicine is accused of obstructing Group Health Association.

Cross-examination by John Henry Lewin, special assistant to the Attorney General, made a few nicks in the obstetrician's story. But in its essentials, he stood firm, maintaining throughout:

That at no time did he ever say or do anything with the intention of arresting the progress of the Federal Workers' Health Cooperative.

That he voted against admission of Dr. Raymond E. Selders to the Columbia Hospital staff not because the applicant was the G. H. A. surgeon but principally because his professional qualifications, in Dr. Willson's judgment, were not adequate.

Defends "White List"

That the District Medical Society's constitutional amendment which paved the way to a "white list" from which the name of G. H. A. was excluded, was not directed against the cooperative.

That he voted against application to Columbia Hospital of the so-called Mundt resolution, which provided that all staff doctors be members of the American Medical Association, through their local societies.

That the society's resolution of November 3, 1937, which Dr. Willson introduced, was offered by him for the purpose of sidetracking a proposal to bar members from working for or affiliating with groups not approved by the society.

The Government's contention is that the resolution, which says that the D. M. S. "has an apparent means of hindering the successful operation of Group Association, Inc.," conclusively establishes Dr. Willson as a conspirator against the clinic.

"My resolution," said the witness, was submitted for the purpose of protecting the society against a course of action that could not be sustained."

Refers to Sprigg Plan

The "course of action" to which he referred was the plan of Dr. William Mercer Sprigg, also a defendant, to prevent members from dealing with medical groups which did not bear the society's approval. Group Health Association would have fallen in this category.

Dr. Willson admitted that the Sprigg plan was "connected" with the G. H. A. issue and that his own proposal was a substitute. But he would not concede that, consequently, his resolution was directed against G. H. A.

If the language of the draft made it appear that it was, the reason is simply that he thought strong words would expedite the resolution's passage and thereby shelve the Sprigg proposal, Dr. Willson said.

One phase, stating that the society has no control over hospital policies "except through its control of its own members serving on their medical staffs," was inserted because it was a "subtle" activator, rather than because he actually believed this, the witness declared.

Prosecution's Point

Cross-examination by Lewin gained from him the admission that the acceptance of Dr. R. Stephen Hulburt on the Columbia Hospital staff "very well may have been due" to his resignation from G. H. A. Turned down while he was a member of the cooperative's staff, Dr. Hulburt was granted Columbia privileges a few weeks after quitting the Federal employes' clinic.

Dr. Willson also admitted, without hesitation, that Dr. Mario Scandiffio, G. H. A. staff peditrician when the clinic was launched in 1937, was a capable physician. Dr. Scandiffio is now medical director of G. H. A.

As for the group's surgeon, however, Dr. Willson said he was not qualified for such broad privileges as he applied for at Columbia Hospital, of whose medical board the witness was and is a member.

Can't Use "Tyros"

Dr. Willson testified that he never saw Dr. Selders "in action." But the fact that he had taken his surgical residency at a hospital where surgery and gynecology were combined in a single department would have been reason enough to deny him the virtually unlimited privileges which he sought, Dr. Willson declared.

"Why did you make no investigation of your own?" asked Lewin.

"We made a good investigation," the witness responded. "Columbia is a wonderful hospital, with a low mortality rate, and we can't put any tyros on the staff."

8 Americans Held In Korea, Is Report

Dr. D. S. Lowe, Miss Alice M. Betts; O. Gaylord Marsh, and Herbert P. Blair were among those arrested. The four were listed as either Presbyterian or North Presbyterian missionaries.

(The United States Department foreign service list names O. Gaylord Marsh, of Washington State, as United States Consul-General at Keijo.)

Miss Betts was said to have been arrested February 28 on a charge of violating the military criminal code.

The British and American embassies were advised that Korean authorities seized the records of the Presbyterian treasurer and searched a number of houses.

The Tokyo newspaper Asahi quoted an announcement by the Korean governor saying the missionaries "under the dogmatic delusion that the holy war Japan is waging in China is a war of imperialistic aggression . . . have been skillfully innoculating with antiwar propaganda many ignorant Korean Christians. The missionaries circulated thousands of copies of extremely seditious antinationalistic antiwar prayer sentences and held antiwar prayer meetings throughout the peninsula."

No More Patchwork

Criticism from several sources has been leveled at the report of the House subcommittee investigating District streets and traffic. The Park and Planning Commission, for instance, frowns on the suggestion of elevated highways. But the subcommittee has shown a constructive approach in several instances, at least. Some of the recommendations are for improvements long advocated by The Post, such as a resurvey of traffic routing, additional traffic policemen and the requirement of off-the-street parking facilities for new commercial and apartment buildings. The Representatives also have recognized the Federal obligation to Washington by suggesting that the Government share the cost of a superhighway system.

The report also attacks the "piecemeal, patchwork planning of the past," and the "sad lack of coordination and long-range planning in connection with the traffic problem." To attain the needed coordination, however, it is important that any schemes take account of the highway planning survey being made here by the Highway Department and the Public Roads Administration. Twleve months in preparation, this survey required an exhaustive examination of the facts of traffic movement and parking habits and of the related needs. A preliminary summary is expected May 1.

Presumably the Highway Department's report will consider from all angles such major questions as overhead and underground streets and subterranean parking garages which are tentatively mentioned by the subcommittee. But, so far as can be determined, the House subcommittee has not had access to any material from the Highway Department's survey. The only data which the department has released were contained in the special report on which the President based the staggered hours of Federal employes effective March 31. Therefore, no comprehensive plan can be advanced yet, and any suggestions in Congress must be subject to serious revision. This does not mean that the planning study, when it is made public, need be followed blindly. Congressional thinking can fill in any gaps and serve as a check on any deep-rooted and inexpedient local prejudices. But as a basis of comprehensive action, the survey is an essential preliminary.

River Pollution

The Izaak Walton League of America will convene here today—the first time it has met in Washington. So it is an appropriate moment to consider stream pollution. The league fears that waste from Army camps, new cities and factories springing up in the defense program will be a menace to fish, not to speak of human health. Moreover, this appeal by the fishermen comes at a time when some of the people in southern Maryland are complaining of conditions in the Potomac.

The relative purity of the river at present can be judged best through findings by experts at the Washington sewage treatment plant, where a third of the organic matter in the sewage is removed. Tests show that the bacteria content of the water at Fort Washington, 3 miles below Alexandria, is about equal to that above the point where Washington sewage enters, and about the same, officials say, as water accepted as sufficiently pure for city water supply. As for the fish, except in an extraordinarily dry, hot summer, they can live anywhere in the river except at the points where sewers empty into it. But for human beings, swimming in the river near Washington is inadvisable and boating is not at its most pleasant between Alexandria and Fort Washington. Alexandria does not treat its sewage.

The Army will have to decide how much it should enlarge treatment machinery to take care of the presumably temporary extension at Fort Belvoir. But there will also be an increased tax on cities' facilities due to the defense program. Washington's plant, for instance, was designed to keep the river reasonably pure on a basis of 650,000 inhabitants. The present rapid growth of the city may thus create an unhealthy situation in the river unless the plant's capacity is enlarged. The great increase in Alexandria's population puts a new burden on the natural forces used for purification there and complaints doubtless will multiply. Sewage disposal in the whole upper Potomac should be resurveyed now to forestall possibly unfortunate results.

Breaking A Strike

At last official Washington has cut through the petty bickerings that have kept defense work in the Allis-Chalmers plant at Milwaukee at a standstill for more than three months. Summoning courage which has heretofore been lacking, Secretary Knox and OPM Director Knudsen yesterday ordered the company to reopen its plant and proceed with its work. This is the most favorable piece of news that has come out of the strike situation in several months.

In effect Messrs. Knox and Knudsen have undertaken to break the strike. "We must ask you," they telegraphed to heads of the company, "to notify your entire force to report for work and start operations immediately." They properly point out that adjustment of the differences between the company and the union can be ironed out while production of vital defense equipment is going forward. If that action appears to be harsh treatment of the union, it is only because the full story of this strike is not known by the public.

Hearings before the Wisconsin Labor Board have developed the fact that gross fraud was practiced in the balloting by which the strike was called more than three months ago. Representatives of the union have admitted that the ballot boxes were stuffed. Handwriting experts summoned by the State board discovered the duplication of ballots, and their finding is corroborated by a handwriting expert employed by the union to join in the investigation.

Reports reaching Washington are to the effect that 2,200 out of the 6,500 votes cast were fraudulent. If that is true, the strike was called by a minority of the employes and is therefore illegal under Wisconsin law. That State requires a majority vote before a strike can be legally ordered, but it gives the unions full control over the balloting. The Wisconsin board is expected to call for a new vote under its own direction, but that will not be necessary if the order from Washington is obeyed.

To date it is estimated that this strike has cost the workers $2,500,000 in wages. It has delayed work on new destroyers for the Navy by three months at a time when this type of fighting vessel is in the greatest demand by ourselves and Great Britain. And the Army's new powder plant is impatiently waiting for machinery from Allis-Chalmers to expand its output of that vital defense commodity. The strike had become a disgusting exhibition of irresponsibility before the latest data as to its origin came to light. Now it is evident that it involves a shocking abuse of labor's right to collective bargaining, for underlying these losses to the Nation and several thousand workers are stuffed ballot boxes.

Some action to end the strike had become imperative. Obviously the Government could not "crack down" upon the company because of the continuation of a strike called by fraudulent balloting. The Navy and the OPM have taken the only alternative in ordering that the strike be abandoned in favor of continued negotiations while the men are at work. The only weakness of this decision is that it was not made at least a month and a half ago.

Peter And Paul

Whether the young Peter of Yugoslavia would have been better prepared for his throne by a policy of resistance instead of surrender is a moot point. What he now risks is the prospect of a country divided against itself on an issue that might have united it. However that may be, we cannot dispute the ministers' courage in signing on Hitler's dotted line. They were courageous in that they have risked their heads, for thousands of Serbs must have sworn revenge upon them for their signatures. Yet the ministers are being called pusillanimous, because they seem to have affixed their names to the agreement out of fear of seeing their country overrun by Hitler's legions. But was this, in fact, pusillanimous? May it not be that the ministers were merely expressing their loyalty to the throne? For the man who was responsible for the Yugoslav signature is the regent, Prince Paul.

What inspired the unflagging determination of Prince Paul to see his country come to terms with Hitler will be a speculation for a long time to come. It is known that his overriding thought is merely to hand on the throne intact to the young King Peter when the King attains the legal age of 18 for taking his father's place; the place, that is, of the murdered Alexander. This will be on September 6. Prince Paul, unlike his brother Alexander, is a retiring person, a lover of books rather than of state documents, and only a sense of duty, it is said, keeps him at the helm at Belgrade. Possibly the determination to "buy time" till September 6 was the prevailing thought in his head as he was wrestling with his ministers. If this was his motivation, then the ministers' courage admits of no stain, though the honoring of a prince in such a way is perhaps difficult for Americans to comprehend, as is the legacy that Paul has made to Peter.

Priority For Policy

Priorities and bottlenecks are words to which we are becoming accustomed in our "total effort" to make our country the great arsenal of democracy. But the greatest bottleneck of all is never mentioned. And it is one that could be broken if we would only give priority to the policy which underlay the lend-lease authority—namely, to bring about the downfall of Hitlerism. This national policy is suffering from the competition of other policies some of which are based upon our failure to beat Hitler and others of which would impair our total effort.

Action is what the President has called for, and action now. The action he has in mind is harder work in the country's workshops. But organization comes before action if the full fruit of action is to be garnered. Yet all the organization that seems to have followed the passage of the Lend-Lease Act is the establishment of a kind of War Cabinet. It is for this inner Cabinet that Harry L. Hopkins is a kind of executive officer. And so far as can be determined, this inner Cabinet is responsible only for the linking of the arsenal with the beneficiaries of it. It has no authority to readjust national policies which stand in the way of the speedy and all-out attainment of victory.

For instance, the draft is destined to bring into being an Army of 4,000,000 men. Why is the Army being raised? Not for a new A. E. F., but to keep in this country in case of attack. In other words, the draft is based upon the possibility that the British might be beaten. Yet this great military establishment has to be equipped with the very defense articles which are so urgently necessary abroad in order to insure victory. What applies to military policy applies equally to naval policy. Prior to coming to the determination that our "ultimate safety," as the President put it, lies in the defeat of Hitlerism in the present war, we had embarked upon the building of a two-ocean navy. There was only one reason for the decision. It was that in winning, Hitler would wrest control of the Atlantic from the British. Yet the British need ships to win—chiefly merchantmen and corvettes—which our shipyards cannot build expeditiously because those yards at present are clogged with orders for the two-ocean navy. Now, if we are determined to prevent a catastrophe by aiding the British, both military and naval policies stand in need of readjustment. Otherwise we are helping to bring about precisely the situation we fear.

Thus there is no fused national policy, but several policies which are impeding the attainment of the major one. A reintegration of policy is the action that is required ahead of the action of moving "products from the assembly lines of our factories to the battle lines of democracy, now." And the President's first duty on his return from the Caribbean should be to give it the right of way. For the defeat of Hitler now is the national policy which he has hoisted above all others and which is supported overwhelmingly by the American people. Neither sacrifice nor hard work will of itself spell this needed all-out effort. Nor, with the best will in the world, can the War Cabinet break this bottleneck of policy. If the President would order the priority of priorities, however, he would guarantee the prerequisite of both totality and speed in the effort for which he has mobilized our country.

Canada In Vichy

The French Canadians whom Mr. Willkie has been addressing in Quebec are said never to have forgiven the French republic for ever coming into existence. They are more royalist than any king. Still France is their mother country, and the eloquent reminder of a France in bondage which they heard from the leader of the Republican Party no doubt stirred their racial memories. No doubt it aroused their spirit, too. At least we hope so. For politically as well as ethnologically the Canadians could do a great deal for the cause of freedom in France. One of the odd features of this war is that, while diplomatic relations between London and Vichy are suspended, the relations between Ottawa and Vichy are still intact. A French Canadian is the envoy. What kind of service he renders is known only to the governments concerned. But it is said that he played the leading part in persuading the British to let down the bars to the recent food shipment, with Admiral Leahy seconding his efforts through his own pleas to our State Department. Both the envoys are held to have throught of the shipment as a useful aid to the anti-Axis diplomacy. We hope they will both be justified by events, and that the spirit which animated both the Willkie talk and the reception he got from the French Canadians is the spirit which they have communicated to their Minister in Vichy. It is only a single-minded devotion to victory that can win a war against such a formidable foe as Hitler's Germany.

RED CLAY

This flesh, the prison of the soul,
Is wrought of earth and wind and sky,
And yet the red clay stains the whole
Which, lacking pinions, cannot fly.

The spirit has the strength to soar
Beyond that prison and its bars,
Leaving the heavy chains it wore,
Bright winging to the stars.

Economic Adjustment

I wish to thank Mr. Lloyd M. Graves for his very masterful article under the subject "The World's Great Undeveloped Human Resources" in The Post of March 18.

It is writers like Mr. Graves who bring out the facts and conditions of our economic nad industrial world maladjustment that start people thinking, not of our own immediate environmental and present conditions, but of the long view, covering the changes needed for a better world condition.

Let us have the opinions of writers all over the world so that through a series of discussions, we may arrive at some concrete plan of procedure. I am suggesting, what in my humble judgment, seem to be the most outstanding faults in our present economic maladjustment.

There are countries that are handicapped by insufficient means of supplying their needs, within their own domains. Also, there are other countries incapable of attaining a higher standard of living due to excessive concentration of their peoples, causing underbidding of each other for work, approaching slavery conditions.

In order to improve the standards of living of the backward countries, I would eliminate all trade barriers between any and all countries. This would permit the country that could produce an article better and cheaper than any other country to have free access to any market. All workers would be paid wages to the value of the work they produce, thereby giving to each earner a larger share of the world's goods, and enabling him to raise his standard of living. This improved standard will increase consumption and production, and would eliminate overproduction. There would be no necessity for ruinous competition, because those manufacturers who could not compete would have to discontinue production in favor of those who could. This would, at first, call for considerable readjustment, which would, however, in the long run, prove to be the only proper solution to the world's economic maladjustment.

The main point is that workers would be compensated for the value of what they produced, were it in China or in the United States. In this way the standard of living could finally reach a level of sufficiency that would eliminate pauper labor and slavery conditions.

There should be a world's production planning board to regulate production, with a branch located in each country. This board would be kept informed as to where the lowest markets are located. The production planning board should inform producers of the approximate quantities of articles that would be required. The gold dollar would become the universal exchange medium of equal value in any country.

There would also have to be taken into consideration laid down prices, hauling charges. Thus, if freight charges from one location meant too high a price, the article would necessarily have to be bought at some nearer market.

There would be no necessity for workers banding together as unions to force capital to pay them living wages, as all workers would receive wages to the value of his production.

Let's hear from others.

Air-Cooled Hours

A suggestion has been made that those Government departments and agencies which are housed in air-conditioned buildings be given the late hours. Is there not something worth thinking about in the suggestion. The accumulated heat in the late afternoon in the summer is something to remember in the old buildings that are not air-cooled.

Plaza Dormitories

I have just read the article in The Post of March 19, captioned "United States to Build Big Dormitory for Single Government Girls."

I am wondering if Defense Housing Coordinator C. F. Palmer ever had any first-hand knowledge of the "Government Hotels" described as "the ugly and shoddy Union Plaza Dormitories." It is true that they were gray and oblong and vine-covered, but they were never an eyesore to me.

Every building had a spacious living-room, well and comfortably equipped with piano and victrola, chairs and sofas and adjacent parlors where we could entertain our friends. There were two large dining rooms, one for the tenants in the lower group, and one for the upper group. Each building had a competent manager. There were entertainments and general good times.

These "ugly and shoddy" structures were real homes for many girls and women for a number of years. Most of the complaints came from the outside or from tenants who had never had as good living conditions before in their lives.

Traffic Suggestion

Rather as an aid to the Police Traffic Department, I propose that the American Automobile Association, the District Government, the Keystone Automobile Club, and the Board of Trade, together, establish a fund the purpose of which will be to hire from the Work Projects Administration relief rolls men capable of acting as traffic guides at various intersections throughout the District, principally at the most dangerous or the most strategic crossings. Their duties would be to guide pedestrians to safety, to prevent them from violating traffic rules; in this way such guides would be aiding motorists who wish to get on with their driving. I might suggest that the WPA also arrange to be part of this fourfold fund, so that the expense does not become a burden to any one group. I think this is a feasible plan, and one which would go a long way toward helping the Police Department and the Commissioners and the merchants and motorists improve traffic conditions in Washington, D. C.

Government And Strikes

The Government by tolerating closed shops on its projects has offered no objections to labor unions collecting dues from all applicants for employment who are not already members of the recognized union. This has no doubt encouraged such unions to make excessive demands for initiation fees from all citizens who desire to work. By this method a union is able to accumulate a large fund for political purposes as well as to finance strikes. Without funds, no strike could be called with any degree of success. It seems to me therefore that the Government itself is aiding indirectly in the prosecution of those strikes which are obstructing the production of vital war necessities, by allowing them to collect exorbitant sums from helpless men. At the same time, the cost of the work is increased. Perhaps this is all a part of Hitler's plans.

The Dachshund's Plight

I wish that political cartoonists would not use the dachschund, or any other dog, as a symbol for things German. I ask this because of known instances where foolish people (and there are many of them) have been wantonly cruel to innocent and uncomprehending animals because they were used as symbols of evil in political cartoons. Your cartoon of March 25 is the most dastardly insult anyone could give a dachshund. I most sincerely hope that it will not result in such acts of cruelty as a Midwestern occurrence of about a year ago, when a group of children, incited by anti-German talk by their very thoughtless parents, tortured a dachshund named Hans nearly to death.

As I write this, my little dachshund sits beside me. He knows nothing of politics, wars, or Germans, and cares less. All he wants is to be able to show me his loyalty and affection, and to enjoy a happy dog life in a kindly world. English is the only human language he knows, and he was whelped in America, as were many generations in his family before him.

The dachshund is descended of an ancient Egyptian hunting dog. He was later developed and bred extensively in Germany and Austria for hunting badgers (dachs—badger; hund—dog) and other small animals. He is one of the cleanest of dogs, affectionate, loyal and brave. Other dogs, owned and loved by Americans, though formerly bred in Germany, are the German shepherd, or police dog (bred by the Seeing Eye people for the very humanitarian purpose of helping the blind), the great dane, the doberman pinscher, the boxer, and many other fine dogs. Dogs know no nationality—they know only who loves them. A dachshund born here is as American as an English setter born here, and both are good dogs.

A better world it would be if a dachshund were born in place of every potential Hitler. So please do not revile a good dog in a political cartoon.

"Short Of War"

The man with a deep cancer who vows he will cure it "short of operation" is beginning a lingering and painful suicide. War, to a nation, is like an operation for an individual. To avoid it may be wise; to fear it may mean death. But a large part of the present feeling about war in this country is neither wisdom nor fear, but just plain folly. This is because it is based on the most monstrous popular delusion ever seen here: the belief that in 1917 we were fooled and cheated into war.

That the antiwar extremists are the dupes of this error stands out in all they say. We continually hear: "Let us not repeat the old folly;" "International bankers;" "British propaganda;" "No foreign war."

That the isolationist gospel is a myth follows from the preponderant testimony of those who were near to the events or who have really studied them. Selling the myth to the American people over this authoritative opposition is probably the world record for effective and false propaganda.

The public seems to be emerging from the infection, but much of it still remains. It is still harmful, and was nearly fatal when the embargo was under discussion in 1939. Some diseases cannot be cured until the focus of infection is eradicated. Cannot the refutation of the World War myth be intensified until only the especially foolish or prejudiced can have any patience with it?

Adventure In Greece

The sun was just going down and a proper breeze stirring when the brig Hercules, a collier-built tub of 120 tons, round-bottomed and bluff-bowed, weighed anchor and began to pick her way through the tangled shipping of Genoa Harbor. It was Monday, July 16, 1823.

The adventure had begun somewhat discouragingly. First of all, they had embarked, by some miscalculation almost incredible in view of the superstitions of their leader, on the evening of Friday, the 13th. Next day had been breathlessly hot, with never a sign of breeze to stir the glassy sea. At sunrise on the 15th the boats of an American frigate, anchored nearby, had come to tow them out of the harbor, but after lying becalmed all day in the simmering heat they had been obliged, when a wind blew up late at night, to put back to port again because the pitching of the ship upset certain of the passengers and frightened the horses.

As the sails began to fill out in the stiff breeze and the brig swayed and wallowed in the long swells, the slight figure in the blue cap and white trousers, standing a little apart from the others, looked back moodily toward the receding shore.

It would be misleading to suggest that Lord Byron set off to aid the embattled Greek insurgents out of a simple spirit of revolutionary fervor. The truth is that his motives were by no means so unmixed. For one thing, he had grown desperately tired of the country of his exile. "Lord Byron had once intended fixing his residence in Italy," writes Count Pietro Gamba, the brother of La Guiccioli and the poet's companion on his famous filibustering expedition, "but the political state of that country gave rise to feelings of disgust. He likewise had some thoughts of going to the United States of America."

Trelawney also, in his narrative, reports that Byron was determined to go somewhere, wavering between Peru and Venezuela, when the storm of criticism roused over his works in the United States turned him from our shores. With the collapse of the Carbonarist movement, in which through the Gambas he had become involved, he lost hope in Italian independence, while it is probable that the death of Allegra and Shelley's tragic end did much to confirm him in his resolution. Trelawney, with his customary modesty, takes credit for turning the pilgrim's restless thoughts toward Greece, though as a matter of fact Byron seems to have dallied with the notion before he ever met the Cornishman. At any rate, as soon as he had received from Mr. Bowring, the secretary of the London Committee (on which his friends Hobhouse and Kinnaird were active), the intelligence that his efforts would be welcome, he immediately began to straighten out his affairs.

Nor does Byron seem to have had, in the beginning anyhow, very much poetic enthusiasm for the project, romantic though it was. Lady Blessington, who had met the poet for the first time that April when she arrived in Genoa with her husband (and the handsome young Count d'Orsay), thought it extraordinary to see a man engage in a chivalrous undertaking . . . without any indication of enthusiasm. She had, it appears, "expected to find him a dignified, cold, reserved and haughty person, but nothing can be more different; were I to point out the prominent defect of Lord Byron, I should say it was flippancy and a total want of that natural self-possession and dignity which ought to characterize a man of birth and education."

In more than one way Lady Blessington was disillusioned in Byron; at 36 he had lost much of his legendary beauty; although he had thinned down since his reunion with Moore, his hair was gray and wispy and hung over his collar. But she was not alone in remarking his unromantic attitude toward the project on which he was engaged. Indeed he seems to have confided to most of his acquaintances during this period (all of whom wrote their accounts of it afterward, of course) his conviction that he was not to return. Somewhat wryly he remarked that he seemed to be cast in the role of Iphiginia in this second odyssey. And even after he had become established at Missolonghi, he wrote to Napier that "I can hardly be disappointed, for I believed myself on a fool's errand from the outset." Yet it is significant that he adds, "But I like the cause, at least, and will stick by it."

It was a cause that Byron had always liked—and always stuck by—even when that cause had no London Committee to support it. For he was never afraid of unpopular causes; he had taken the part of the Irish as warmly as had Shelley and supported Bonaparte as boldly as Hazlitt. And at the first news that a revolt was stirring among the Greeks he began making plans to help, though perhaps without that romantic enthusiasm which Lady Blessington and the egregious Trelawney seem to have expected.

Back in London the committee was immersed in plans—organizing, holding meetings, raising funds. Practical men, they knew the value of careful preparation. (When Colonel Napier arrived in London, they were too busily engaged in wrangling over the menu for their next public dinner to see him.) Mr. Bentham was arranging to supply the revolutionaries (who could not read) with books and Bibles. Mr. Hobhouse and Sir F. Burdet were making speeches for them in Parliament.

Meanwhile, the poet, in his impractical way, had chartered the brig and embarked. Whatever funds of his own he could turn into cash (some £10,000), he took with him, although he refused to accept a legacy Shelley had left him. La Guiccioli had been bundled off to Bologna, the Hunts to Florence. The Bolivar he sold to Lord Blessington. With Trelawney and Gamba and Bruno for his staff, eight servants (including Fletcher, who had been with him since his boyhood at Newstead, and Tita Falciere, who had been his gondolier in Venice), two dogs and five horses, Lord Byron sailed off to bring freedom to the Greeks.

Today And Tomorrow

Grasp The Nettle Firmly

THE STRIKE in the Bethlehem Steel Plant has provided an immediate test of the Dykstra Board which was set up only a week ago by an Executive Order of the President. At the very first meeting it transpired that official Washington is inclined to interpret the functions of this board in a way which is unnecessarily feeble and ineffective. Dr. Dykstra told the newspapers: "We must wait until cases are certified to us by the Secretary of Labor," which is of course correct, but the real question is: When must the Secretary of Labor certify a dispute to the Board? Must the dispute be certified before there is a strike, when there is a strike, or after a strike has been in progress for some time?

LIPPMANN

If the Executive Order does not lay down a clear rule in answer to this crucial question, then something is very wrong with it. The order declares it "to be the duty of employers and employes" to give the Department of Labor "sufficient advance notice of any threatened interruption . . . as will permit exploration of all avenues of possible settlement . . . so as to avoid strikes, stoppages, or lockouts." This rule laid down by the President is certainly binding on the Department of Labor. There is now a strike at the Bethlehem plant and the rule laid down by the President has obviously been ignored. The Executive Order states further that when there is a dispute which "threatens" to obstruct production, then the Department of Labor, if the threat cannot be "adjusted," will certify the dispute to the Board. The Bethlehem strike not merely threatens to obstruct. It does obstruct. It is, therefore, the clear duty of the Secretary of Labor to certify the case at once to the Dykstra Board.

THE QUESTION at issue is whether the purpose of the new machinery is to prevent strikes before they are called, or merely to settle them after they have been called. I venture to say that if official Washington does not at once and unequivocally construe the Executive Order liberally as calling upon the Dykstra Board to prevent strikes, the Board will be a total failure. It will not prevent strikes and it will not, for reasons which I believe can readily be demonstrated, even be able to settle strikes.

For the Board, representing labor, management, and the public, must have a clear rule on which all its members can agree without argument. There is only one such rule conceivable: that work shall not be interrupted while disputes are being adjusted. For on the merits of the disputes there may easily be differing views within the Board; and the sifting of evidence and the reconciling of conflicting claims require time and patience. Therefore, in order to do justice in particular disputes and yet not to let the defense program be interrupted, it is absolutely essential to insist that the Department of Labor and the Board and, if necessary Congress, take the position that to interrupt work by a strike or a lockout before every means of conciliation has been exhausted is to defy the authority of the Nation.

AT BETHLEHEM there is a strike which has been called, though the courts have not yet passed on the issue, though the Department of Labor has not had a chance to work out a settlement, though the Dykstra Board has not even considered the case. The Secretary of Labor should, therefore, at once certify the case to the Board and the Board should at once pass public judgment on whether "sufficient advance notice" of this "threatened interruption" was given, whether "all avenues of possible settlement" were explored, and if not, who was responsible. If that does not settle this strike, and establish a firm precedent for preventing other strikes, it will show to Congress and the country that legislative action is required.

Neither the President nor the Secretary of Labor nor the Board can afford to vacillate on the issue raised by the Bethlehem strike. If they do not insist that their paramount object is to prevent such a strike, if they let themselves be entangled in the effort to adjust the disputed questions behind the strike, they will ruin the machinery they have set up. They will make the Board a forum for interminable arguments in which the members will almost certainly become, under the influence of passions engendered by strikes, the advocates of special interests. They had better realize at the outset that a representative board of this character can hope to adjust disputes only if those disputes are not allowed to degenerate into strikes. Unless they start by agreeing that strikes are to be prevented, they will more likely aggravate disputes than conciliate them.

NOR SHOULD THERE be any doubt of the justice of following unequivocally the rule laid down by the President that conciliation must be exhausted before, and not after, work is interrupted. Production is not now a private affair as between management and labor; it is an imperative national duty. All that anyone has a right to ask is that his substantial rights, legal and moral, will be protected by the courts, the executive agencies and the Congress. In a time when men are being conscripted into the armed forces, neither labor nor management can claim the right to refuse to let the courts, the executive agencies and Congress administer justice in industrial disputes.

The nettle must be grasped firmly and promptly. We have the declaration of duty in the Executive Order issued last week. We have the Dykstra Board and the machinery for conciliating disputes. We have a strike in one of the most important of all the defense industries. This is the occasion to assert the authority of the Executive Order and of the Board and by asserting this authority either to establish the precedent for preventing the obstruction of defense or to disclose at once whether more drastic measures are required. If the Board is passive, we shall know that more drastic measures are required. If the Board is lucid and resolute, it will act at once to clarify and lead public opinion in Congress and in the country.

OF ONE THING there should be no doubt left in anyone's mind: that the country is not going to let itself be defeated in the battle of production and that having made its decision to arm itself and to arm the Allies, nobody here or abroad is going to obstruct the United States from carrying out its purpose.

The Bethlehem case is a clear test of that purpose. For while the merits of the long controversy between the company and the C. I. O. are a matter for patient and orderly judgment, the need to prevent the interruption of production is now beyond the realm of admissible argument. The test is at hand as to whether the national defense is to proceed without interruption by private interests—here by a union, tomorrow perhaps in another case by management—and it is of the utmost importance that the country meet the test without hesitating or flinching. This is the occasion when resolute action immediately will avert infinite difficulties in the future. When you grasp a nettle firmly, says the poet, it stings not. This too is the occasion when resolute action immediately will demonstrate to everyone here and abroad that the American democracy is in deadly earnest.

Marine Guidance

IT IS NOT generally known, but when Sir Arthur Salter reaches this country at the end of the week he will find ready-built a rough but effective framework for Anglo-American cooperation in the crucial shipping field. From the American standpoint, by far the most important part of this framework is the remarkable system of volunteer controls quietly arranged between the American ship owners and the Maritime Commission.

Some time ago, when a shipping shortage first threatened, the chairman of the Maritime Commission, Admiral Emery S. Land, met with representatives of the ship owners and warned them frankly that their vessels were a national resource which must be used in the public interest during the war period. The ship owners had long been aware that such a warning was inevitable, sooner or later. Possibly, at the backs of their minds, they remembered that the President has the power to requisition all shipping by declaring a national emergency. At any rate, they responded warmly to Land's warning, promising the fullest aid to the Government whenever it should be required.

Ever since then the system of volunteer shipping controls has been going full blast. At the heart of it are charts at the Maritime Commission, showing the positions of American ships all over the world, and lists of shipping priorities supplied to the Maritime Commission by the War and Navy Departments, the Office of Production Management and other agencies involved in the defense effort.

THE PRIORITIES lists divide all goods to be carried to and from the United States into three categories. A-1 priority is given to defense materials, such as tin, rubber and the like. A-2 priority is given to "good will materials." These are largely exports to and imports from Central and South America, which must continue to be carried if our economic relationships in the hemisphere are to be maintained, and Nazi penetration prevented. And A-3 priority is given to consumers' essentials, such as coffee for the American breakfast table. The lists show where shipments of the various classes of goods are waiting to be picked up, where they are to go, and how soon they must arrive.

Most of the goods are moved in the ordinary course of commerce, but whenever the priorities lists show a bottleneck developing, the controls system goes into action. The practical shipping men brought into the Maritime Commission by Admiral Land as his assistants study the lists and the charts of ship position. To take an actual case, they find that a freighter heading for Africa to pick up a shipment of cocoa beans will be better employed handling an ore shipment. Then they inform the freighter's owners, and the cocoa beans are abandoned to their fate and the ore is carried.

Although in many instances this means a sacrifice of profit, and although some of the ship-owners have grumbled rather loudly, no ship-owner has yet refused to accept the Maritime Commission's "guidance." Freight rates have lately become a serious problem, but the attitude of the majority of ship-owners seems to be so sensible that no long-term difficulty is anticipated.

The American volunteer shipping controls can easily be developed into over-all planning of shipping use. Indeed, a first effort in this direction is already being made in the form of gradual transfer of our intercoastal shipping to off-shore runs and assumption by trucks and railroads of the intercoastal vessels' former transport burden.

OVER-ALL planning of shipping use is already in force, of course, in Britain, where the ministry of shipping is the manager of the British merchant marine. The ministry's local agency is the traffic control division of the purchasing commission, which is charged with having cargoes at the ports ready for ships that put in, substituting land transport for shipping wherever possible and otherwise economizing British tonnage. Sir Arthur Salter will have the power to speak for the shipping ministry, and in view of his great record at the joint shipping board in the last war, will speak with immense authority. With both American and British machinery already in operation, it will be easy for Admiral Land, Sir Arthur and their subordinates to get together and lay out an Anglo-American shipping program, in effect pooling the two nations' shipping resources and using it to the best advantage of the war effort.

While it will be immensely helpful, laying out such a joint program will not solve the shipping problem. Even after the two nations' shipping resources have been pooled they will still be inadequate. But at least it will then be possible to tell precisely what the shipping problem is. Complete data will be available for the grave decisions that must be made. Convoying may or may not be resorted to. At the present it seems quite possible, since the Navy is reluctant to give the British the destroyers and the Maritime Commission does not wish to yield the merchant ships which might make convoying unnecessary. But whatever the ultimate choice, it will be informed and intelligent.

A Labor Policy

By Merlo J. Pusey

For A Firmer Governmental Stand

NOW THAT THE National Defense Mediation Board has begun to function, the next important step is to work out a labor policy. For the last eight years the Administration has followed a consistent policy of fostering unionism. Collective bargaining is now well established as the principle upon which all industrial relationships rest. But collective bargaining is, after all, only a general formula. In normal times management and labor could be left with the aid of the NLRB to adjust this formula to their own needs. But in this period of emergency the Government ought to be playing a far more positive role.

PUSEY

President Roosevelt outlined a rudimentary labor policy in his executive order creating the new Mediation Board. He declared it to be the duty of employers and employes producing defense supplies "to exert every possible effort to settle all their disputes without any interruption in production or transportation." He called upon both to give advance notice to the Conciliation Service and the OPM of any desired changes in existing agreements, wages or working conditions. The Administration will help the parties work out new agreements, and, if necessary, it will bring pressure to bear upon the disputants through the board.

IN OTHER WORDS, the policy now in effect is designed chiefly to bring together quarreling partners in the defense program and to induce them to agree. That approach to a delicate problem is both reasonable and constructive. But it does not go far enough. Many of the strikes now worrying official Washington should never have been ordered in the first place, and a straight-forward national policy would probably have prevented them from being called.

In dealing with strikes during a national crisis an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. The country is getting impatient over long-drawn-out efforts to mediate strikes that could have been averted by a firm stand on the part of the Government. At Walter Reed Hospital and again at Wright Field in Dayton, Ohio, for example, building-trades unions walked out on defense jobs because a few members of rival unions were working in the same vicinity. These were utterly indefensible strikes. Their only purpose was to give one group a monopoly on jobs sustained by public funds.

In fairness to labor and employes, the Government should declare this type of strike to be illegitimate. The Supreme Court recently deprived the Government of the most effective weapon it had against the restraint of interstate commerce to create a labor monopoly. But the Administration still wields a powerful weapon known as public opinion. A forthright speech from the White House condemning resort to jurisdictional strikes in defense industries would doubtless put an end to such outrageous tactics.

ONE OTHER PRINCIPLE must be invoked if national scandals on a wholesale scale are to be avoided. Here, Fort Meade is the best example. By all the rules of common sense the construction of cantonments at the fort should have been an open-shop job. The union could supply only 200 of the 8,000 carpenters needed to complete the work in double-quick time. Yet the army of semiskilled and unskilled workmen which enlarged Fort Meade's facilities was forced to pay tribute estimated at $400,000 to the carpenters' and laborers' unions.

Exploitation of this sort is disgusting to most men who earn their living by toil. The union could have adjusted its fees for the occasion or refrained from collecting initiation fees from temporary workers not interested in permanent membership. But the chief responsibility for this blunder falls upon the Government. In fairness to both taxpayers and temporary workers, it should have laid down a policy against the closed shop on projects requiring the employment of a large number of men for a short period.

For that matter, the closed shop is a dangerous practice wherever an employer is chiefly engaged in filling Government orders. No one should have to join a union to work for the Government, particularly when that work consists of preparing the Nation to defend itself. To be sure, the Government should not step in and disrupt the closed shop where it is already established in private industries. On the other hand, strikes to force a closed-shop in plants loaded with Government orders are obviously contrary to public policy.

THE WAR LABOR BOARD which functioned in the first World War laid down the policy that closed shops should continue to be closed, and open shops should continue to remain open. In other words, no union or employer was permitted to take advantage of the war to force a change in industrial relations. That rule as applied to manufacturing plants is still sound, for an all-out defense effort implies use of the Nation's entire man power, without regard for whether or not workmen belong to unions. Certainly a national crisis is no time to encourage exclusive labor agreements.

Clarification of the national policy in dealing with recalcitrant employers is likewise desirable. It is common knowledge that a few large companies are still holding out against the acceptance of collective bargaining. In these cases the employer must take a large share of the responsibility for labor disturbances. More prompt enforcement of the Labor Relations Act in cases of this sort would help. Courts as well as the NLRB ought to speed up their consideration of labor cases involving issues vital to the preparedness efforts. Then if defense work is delayed by the continued denial of the rights of collective bargaining, there should be no hesitation in taking over the offending plants.

IN BRIEF, the situation calls for a firmer policy on the part of the Government in dealing with both recalcitrant employers and unions. The Government has gone a long way in telling employers what is expected of them, but the unions have been given no clear-cut idea as to what their responsibilities to the Nation are. Intolerable strikes are still dealt with as legitimate labor disputes. So long as this spineless policy remains in effect general appeals for cooperation are not likely to prove effective.

In World War I, President Wilson took over several plants. Workers who refused to accept the principles and decisions handed down by the War Labor Board were barred from employment in war industries and denied the benefits of the United States Employment Service. Probably no comparable threats from President Roosevelt would be needed to counteract the current wave of strikes. A statement calling a spade a spade would doubtless be enough.

Official and unofficial opinion seems to be taking shape around a three-point Federal policy: (1) Establishment of the collective bargaining process should be hastened where recalcitrant employers are still holding out against it. But this should be done by legal means and not by strikes which halt work on defense supplies. (2) Jurisdictional strikes affecting the armament program should be outlawed by the pressure of public and governmental opinion. Strikes of this type are an act of disloyalty and should be unequivocally branded as such. (3) No strike should be called to enforce a closed shop upon a defense plant. Closed-shop agreements now in effect in manufacturing industries should remain undisturbed, but all emergency construction work for the Government should be open to nonunion men without discrimination.

SET UP as a national policy to guide the Conciliation Service and the new Mediation Board, these proposals would at least clear away a good deal of the confusion now pervading the strike problem. In fairness to its own officials who are attempting to keep workers on the job in defense factories, the Administration ought to define its attitude in more definite terms. If legislation is needed for that purpose, there is not the slightest doubt that Congress will gladly enact it. Indeed, Congress may be expected to take the initiative if forthright leadership from the White House is not forthcoming.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Public Relations Need

NOW, IF I WERE given the task of cleaning house in the American Federation of Labor, the second thing I would do, after throwing out the crooks who infest many of the local and international unions and bouncing the gangster George Browne out of the executive council, would be to go after the official press of the organization. This press, with few exceptions, has become a controlled voice by which men who have sins and errors to hide are able to raise a clamor for the purpose of kidding the rank and file members. The rank and file pay for the support of these papers as one of the duties of membership, but the union bosses use them to protect and promote themselves.

But it is the A. F. of L. itself which stands in the worst need of a public relations man and a wise, courageous press.

At present the workers in the A. F. of L. unions are paying a good salary to Philip Pearl, of Washington, to do their public relations work. How well he has done his task for them may be judged by the fact that the A. F. of L. has had in the last couple of years about the worst press that has been had in this country since Ferdinand Pecora had Wall Street in the grease.

THIS PUBLIC RELATIONS job is one of the most difficult in the United States today, and, as one who has some experience in the newspaper business, I can say that the task calls for wise counsel and frank facing of facts more than ghosted speeches and abusive press handouts. And someone certainly has been giving William Green very bad advice on public relations in the last couple of years. Obviously, the A. F. of L. recognizes its own need of public relations counsel, for otherwise Mr. Pearl's job wouldn't exist. The mistake was made about two years ago when, suddenly, it was revealed that the A. F. of L. was badly poisoned by a corrupt condition which had been allowed to run for decades and was now dangerous to the very life of the organization.

But what counsel did Mr. Green follow then, if he took any counsel at all? Why, instead of admitting the facts and announcing that the A. F. of L. had been guilty of honest neglect but would try to clean up, Mr. Green first tried the old, pompous, bulldozing tactics which had worked so well for years, and when these failed, raised the cry of "labor baiting." In other words, anyone who tried to drag the crooks off the necks of the rank and file members was an enemy of labor.

Mr. Green got off on that track, and he hasn't been able to untrack himself since, whereas a wise counselor would have taken a leaf out of the book of Ivy Lee, who startled the world years back by advising the Rockefeller family to come clean and then square.

Last year Mr. Green issued a series of articles in which he undertook to turn aside the revelations of criminality more by abusing the accuser than by denying the allegations. Mr. Pearl tells me he did not exactly ghost this copy but that he did "look it over," which means to me at least he should have checked the facts for accuracy. But Mr. Green was allowed to say that the accuser (meaning me) was a member of a C. I. O. union, which was probably false, and that he did not know of the criminal past of George Scalise until he saw it in these dispatches, whereas, in fact, he had indorsed Scalise's appeal for a pardon long before the record was printed here.

THAT IS THE sort of public relations work which the rank and file of the A. F. of L. are getting for their money. For the rest of it they are getting a weekly column by Mr. Pearl available to all the little papers of various unions in which he ignores charges and facts to defend Green's prestige and his own job of abusing the accuser.

I don't believe the rank and file of the A. F. of L. are fooled by this. Ivy Lee was no friend or hero of mine, but he made a discovery in public relations that has been used with marvelous results ever since. His method was an open confession and a pious resolve, and the A. F. of L. can find no better formula.

Miller Named Head Of Traffic Control

The Commissioners yesterday named Inspector Arthur E. Miller head of all traffic-control work in the Metropolitan Police Department.

Miller succeeds Inspector William E. Holmes, whose retirement is effective on April 1. The vacancy in the ranks of the inspectors will not be filled. The $4,500 salary will be used to hire two additional privates.

Up To Congress

By Mark Sullivan

The Need For Action On Strikes

THE STRIKES are up to Congress. A large majority of Congress are willing to act, even eager to act. But Congress is faced by the tragic dilemma that faces everybody.

SULLIVAN

For the sake of impressing the world that America has national unity about the war, for the sake of preserving the morale of Britain and the other democracies, for psychological effect upon neutral countries, for encouraging conquered peoples—for these and other reasons. Congress wishes to make an impression of solidarity behind the President's war position. It wishes not to take up any measures that the President may not desire taken up, nor measures likely to excite controversy. In this spirit, Congress refrains from doing anything about strikes. Yet, ironically, these strikes are by far the greatest detriment to our defense and to our contribution of help to Britain.

It is not merely that the President does not ask for legislation about strikes—he makes it clear that he does not want such legislation. He speaks lightly of the effect of the strikes, saying they affect only a small fraction of the total defense effort—which Presidential statement is well met by those who point out that many of the strikes take place at key points, at bottle-necks; that the carburetor is only a small fraction of an automobile, but that an obstruction at the carburetor stalls the car.

MOREOVER, from the standpoint of the President, and especially the standpoint of the more "leftist" New Dealers who have weight with the President, the strikes are not looked upon exclusively, hardly even primarily, with a view to their effect upon production of war goods. The war aspect to the strikes overlaps upon the domestic policy of the New Deal to build up labor into a powerful political force.

In the nature of the case, such New Dealers do not want the strikes interfered with, because they must look upon the strikes as a means for further gains of power by labor, especially C. I. O. They do not wish Congress to act upon the strikes, because they know that if Congress embarked upon labor legislation, it would enact amendments to the Labor Act, reducing the powers which the Labor Board took to itself under the Labor Act as originally adopted. That Congress would do this, there can be no doubt. Nine months ago, before defense became important the House passed such amendments by a vote of 258 to 129. (The amendments did not come up in the Senate.)

That labor, especially C. I. O., is in the saddle within the Administration, Congress knows, as everybody knows. The mere presence of a vice president of C. I. O., Mr. Sidney Hillman, in the headship of defense management, coequal with Mr. William Knudsen, is a sign sufficient to everybody. What is written here does not impute to Mr. Hillman any particular views about the current strikes, nor about Government policies generally—he is not commonly regarded as among the more extreme radicals. But the mere fact of Mr. Hillman's position and power, and the support given him by the President, is a symbol to everybody who gauges political atmospheres.

MR. HILLMAN has two responsibilities. As one of the two equal heads of the Office of Production Management, his responsibility is to produce war goods. As vice president of C. I. O., still keeping his C. I. O. salary, his responsibility is to that organization. That the two responsibilities must interfere with each other as respects the C. I. O. strikes, hardly needs saying.

That one man must not hold two trusts which conflict with each other, that he must not be on both sides of one transaction, is one of the most fundamental rules of law, resting upon the common sense of the average man, and expressed in the Biblical injunction that no man may serve two masters. The conspicuousness of the violation of the spirit of this rule in Mr. Hillman's case is a clear signal by Mr. Roosevelt to Congress of the place he wants labor to have. Mr. Hillman's political affiliation is the American Labor Party—he is a member of the executive committee. That political party has in Congress just one member. Yet the other 530 members are expected to defer to the political position which Mr. Hillman symbolizes.

Of Mr. Roosevelt's wish to keep labor matters within control of his own Administration, there is evidence in his recent order appointing a labor Mediation Board—evidence so plain, yet so indirect, as to be almost humorous. The new board can take notice of a strike only after Secretary of Labor Perkins tells it to—after "The Secretary of Labor certifies to the Board . . ." And if any naive person thinks the new board has power within itself, to initiate action, such guilelessness is rebuked by that section of the President's order which says: "Whenever a controversy or dispute which has not been certified to the Board by the Secretary of Labor is brought to the attention of the Board, it shall refer the matter to the Department of Labor."

At all times, the Secretary of Labor is a bottleneck holding labor matters within the Administration.

ONE WONDERS if the deference of Congress to the Administration's wish to keep labor matters within its own control, and out of the hands of Congress, accords with public opinion.

Ranks Filled In Since Flanders, 'Ladies From Hell' To Carry On

By J. Norman Lodge

Associated Press Staff Writer

London, March 26.—Depleted in the British retreat from France last June, the famed Scottish Black Watch has been reformed and again is on war duty as a regiment of the Fifty-first Highlanders Division.

The black-tartaned "Ladies From Hell" for more than 200 years have helped to make British history; wherever Britons have fought, there usually has been at least one battalion of the hairy-legged highlanders.

Where they will fight next they don't know, but as an officer said, "Fight it'll be, laddie, with such a bonnie lass as queen." (Queen Elizabeth is Scottish.)

Theirs is the only regiment of the British army allowed to wear the red hackle of courage. The hackle—a tuft of red feathers that dangles from the tam-o-shanter—was won against the French in 1795. French cavalry overwhelmed the red-coated regulars, captured two of their cannon, and turned them on the British.

Only the Highlanders' lines held. The red hackle was made their official decoration by a war office memorandum of 1822.

Organized in 1729 to keep the peace in northern Britain, the regiment has fought from Africa to Flanders and from India to North America.

The Watch was decimated in covering the British retreat from France last spring, only a few hundred of the kilties escaping to form the nucleus of the present regiment.

Other regiments in the present Fifty-first division are the Seaforths, Argyll and Sutherlands, the Camerons and the Gordons.

Earl Crawford formed the first unit of the Black Watch. He was a Lowlander and had no clan regalia or tartan. He ordered dark kilts to set his retainer apart from the red-coated regular British army.

Their duty of watching other clans combined with their dark kilts to give them the Gaelic name "Am Freiceadan Dubh," or Black Watch.

The Watch first saw foreign service in the Battle of Fontenoy in Flanders in 1745, when their unorthodox fighting upset the French, even though the British and their Allies eventually lost.

It was at Fontenoy that Adam Ferguson, chaplain of the regiment, told his colonel, "Damn my commission," and led a group of highlanders into the fray, his double-edged sword swinging.

The Black Watch fought against the French in colonial America in 1763.

Of 53,000 Highlanders who went to France with the World War British Expeditionary Force, 10,024 were killed and 24,000 wounded. Along with its Canadian battalion, the regiment won eight Victoria Crosses.

Lucile Sheppard Busy With Wedding Plans as College Holiday Begins

By Hope Ridings Miller

ARRIVING in Washington early this morning on spring vacation from her studies at Radcliffe College, bride-elect Lucile Sheppard will be one of the town's busiest young ladies for the next two days. With plans completed for her marriage to Arthur H. Keyes, jr., on Saturday afternoon, she will plunge into a seemingly endless schedule of dress-fittings and trousseau-selectings before noon today.

But there's one thing about it—the personable and pretty daughter of Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard won't have to go through a whirl of prenuptial fetes. Since the whole wedding calendar has had to be worked into a college vacation, Miss Sheppard voted out the usual run of parties some time ago. There will be only the rehearsal dinner on Friday evening—small affair given by Senator and Mrs. Sheppard for members of the wedding party and some of the out-of-town guests.

Set for 4 o'clock at the Sheppard home, at 1814 Nineteenth Street, the wedding is to be witnessed only by relatives and some of the bride-elect's classmates who are coming to Washington especially for the ceremony. For the small reception at 4:30 there will be some additional guests, including members of the Texas and Vermont Congressional delegations, and a few close friends.

Mrs. Connie Mack, jr., who has been in California for some time, is expected to arrive in Washington tomorrow afternoon. The former Susan Sheppard, she will serve as her sister's matron of honor and only attendant. Following her sisit in Washington, she will return to her home in Philadelphia.

Robinson Keyes, of Ithaca, N. Y., who will be best man for his brother, will be accompanied to Washington by his wife. They also are expected to be here tomorrow.

Mrs. Charles Edison to Be Here

Mrs. Charles Edison, wife of the Governor of New Jersey, is on the list of out-of-town guests scheduled to attend the wedding. She is a cousin of Miss Sheppard's fiance. If the Governor can get away from his duties, he will accompany his wife to Washington and also will be present at the ceremony.

Arthur Keyes, sr., will come from his home in Rutland, Vt., for the wedding, as will Edwin Keyes, uncle of the prospective bridegroom, and the latter's grandmother, Mrs. George Emery, also of Rutland.

Several former college classmates of Miss Sheppard are to be among those witnessing the ceremony. In the group will be Miss Jane Fenton, of Rutland; Miss Christine Marting, of New York City, and Miss Marva Peterson, of Rye, N. Y.

Following the reception, Mr. Keyes and his bride will be off to Nassau for a brief honeymoon trip. Later, they will return to their studies—the bride continuing work on her M. A. degree at Radcliffe and her husband completing his course in the graduate school of architecture at Harvard University.

The Listening Post:

When social Washingto turns out full force for the fashion show and tea dance at the Brazilian Embassy this afternoon, it will see at least 15 Power's girls modeling the latest fashions of the season. That, at least, is what Countess Ilinska, the well known New York designer, told me yesterday afternoon at Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell's tea. I might add that the Countess herself looked a good deal like a fashion model, in a softly draped black crepe frock with a knitted blouse beneath a brief jacket. One of those natty black pillbox hats set well back on her pompadour further accented her attractive ensemble.

In Washington with Mrs. Hortense Odlum, former president of a well known New York store, Countess Ilinska will have a number of her own creations on display at the show. Mrs. Odlum, incidentally, is an old friend of Mme. Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, and today's event at the Brazilian Embassy is a culmination of a plan the two have had in mind for some time. Proceeds, as you know, will go in full to the American Red Cross. Mrs. Odlum, by the way, told me yesterday that since she retired from the presidency of the New York shop, she has devoted practically all her time to charity drives. She added that she is serving on so many benevolent boards now that she is busier than she was when working 14 hours a day to get her shop on a paying basis. She and Countess Ilinska will return to New York tonight. Later in the spring they hope to get back to Washington for a longer visit.

More Than Spectators . . .

Russell Vinton Lewis.

. . . are Mr. and Mrs. Martin Vogel, jr., who take a hand at cocoanut croquet—something new for honeymooners in Florida. The former Peggy Townsend and her husband, whose marriage took place early this month, are at the Pancoast Hotel, Miami Beach, Fla.

Mrs. Stone to Be Guest of Honor At Luncheon April 3

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given on Thursday, April 3, by Mrs. Parker West. Mrs. West will entertain again at luncheon on April 9, for Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador.

Mrs. West, who is secretary and treasurer of the Friday Evening Dancing Class, announces that the next three meetings of the group will take place tomorrow, April 18, and May 9, which is the final date in the series. A "Dutch treat" dinner will be held tomorrow at the Willard before the dance.

About the Town

—with Dudley Harmon

TWO VISITORS to Washington who should have an interesting story to tell are the Marquis and Marquise de Talleryand. They will arrive today to spend 48 hours with Countess Laszlo Szechenyi. The couple returned to this country only a month or so ago from their estate near Paris.

DUDLEY HARMON

The Marquis is a descendant of the famous Prince Talleyrand, who was Napoleon's Minister of Foreign Affairs. His wife, an American, is the former Miss Lelia Emory, of New York. One of her sisters was married to the Grand Duke Dmitri and both are well known in France. Donna Julia Brambilla will give a luncheon tomorrow for the Marquis and his wife.

IF YOU THINK the British Embassy in Washington is big, you haven't heard about our own embassy in London. We have over 40 military and naval attaches alone, not counting the regular diplomatic staff . . . It may be some time further before the new appointees to the French Embassy arrive here. They were named almost two months ago, but one or two returned to Paris to dispose of their furniture there, and it takes weeks and weeks to get back to the unoccupied part. Even an American air attache had to wait two months to get permission from the Germans to leave the occupied section.

FRANCES ANDREWS will be married to Ben Dillingham April 26 at the Church of the Heavenly Rest in New York. It would be practically impossible for the wedding to take place in the quarters of her father, Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, Commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Two battleships are under construction practically next door and the noise, friends say, is deafening.

A reception at the Colony Club will follow the ceremony. Mimi Scott, of Washington, is to be a bridesmaid, and the ushers will include Harvard classmates of Mr. Dillingham. The latter will arrive in New York April 15 from Honolulu. The couple will make their home in Hawaii after their marriage. Mr. Dillingham's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dillingham, are about the best known family on the islands. An amusing sur-realist portrait of Mrs. Dillingham shows her completely enveloped in letters of introduction—symbolic of the hospitality with which she greets all friends of friends who arrive in Honolulu.

THE STAID Metropolitan Club will give a dinner in honor of Lord Halifax on Tuesday night. It is rarely that a foreign envoy is so honored by the club.

Donna Brambilla Gives Luncheon

Cancels Engagements

Senora de Munilla, wife of the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy, has cancelled all of her social engagements because of illness.

Mrs. Cowell Gives Dinner In Honor of Countess Ilinska

Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell was hostess at a dinner at the 1925 F Street Club last evening in honor of Countess Janusz Ilinska, of New York. Count Ilinski, who is a member of an old Polish family, is in England and fighting with the British. After fighting on his native soil until Poland fell and taking part in the Battle of Flanders, Count Ilinski, escaped to England.

Countess Ilinska is a Russian who has won fame as a designer. She is helping to stage the fashion show at the Brazilian Embasy today.

Guests at Mrs. Cowell's dinner party last night included Mme. Procope, wife of the Minister of Finland; Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, the Assistant Air Attache of the British Embassy, Brig. C. L. Lindemann; the Second Secretary of the Rumanian Legation, Laurence Bungardeanu; the Second Secretary of the Polish Embassy, George Wendelowski; Maj. and Mrs. Robert Stewart-Richardson, and Mrs. Hortense Odlum, of New York.

Others there included Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Mrs. George T. Pettengill, Mrs. Lionell Atwill, Major and Mrs. Edward Clark, John Logan, Griffith Warfield, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest J. Swift, Major Burdette Fitch, Rafael Lepkowski, Mrs. Randall Hagner, Alfons Landa, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Chetwynd, Countess Cassini, Mrs. Crosby Miller, Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Clarence Hewes, George Vournas, Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken, Chester Flather, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. Emmons Smith, Chester Flather, Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, Maj. Winant Johnson, Merritt Swift and George Williams.

Earlier yesterday Mrs. Crowell entertained at a small tea for Countess Ilinska and Mrs. Odlum. Guests at that event, which took place at Mrs. Cowell's home on Tracy Place, were members of the press and a few others.

Comdr. Heineman And Wife Honored

Lieut. Commander William F. Bullis and Commander T. Garland Murrell entertained at a cocktail party yesterday in honor of Commander and Mrs. P. R. Heineman. Commander Heineman will leave shortly to join the fleet on the West Coast and Mrs. Heineman will probably make her home in San Diego.

The party took place at the home of Commander Bullis, 2115 Yorktown Road. The guests were mostly members of the Navy circle.

Castros Give Farewell Party For Escalantes

As a farewell to the Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Escalante, the Minister of El Salvador and Senora de Castro entertained at a cocktail party yesterday. Senor and Senora de Escalante will sail next week to return to Venezuela. Their daughter, Senorita Maria Theresa Escalante, will accompany them.

The residence of the Minister and Senora de Castro looks more like a private home than do most legations. An attractive stone house on Ellicott Street, just off Connecticut Avenue, it is surrounded by a large lawn.

The hostess received just inside the entrance to the drawing room, with Senora de Escalante at her side. Senora de Castro wore an off-white frock of heavy crepe with a little emerald-green jacket outlined in gold. The guest of honor had chosen a spring print, brilliantly flowered, and with this she wore a green turban trimmed with a cluster of purple flowers.

The daughters of the Minister and Senora de Castro were on hand to assist their parents in seeing that everybody had a good time, and there were quite a few of their younger friends at the party.

Latin Diplomats In Group

Many were present from the Latin America diplomatic ranks. The Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, was accompanied by his wife. With her navy blue and white polka dotted dress she wore a silver fox cape. They chatted with the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoris—she was in a blue ensemble with a black veiled hat.

The Honduran Envoy and Senora de Caceres threaded their way through the throng. The Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos were also present, as was the Minister of Costa Rica, Luis Fernandez.

On the porch of the legation a bar was set up. A huge platter held a pineapple, which had been scooped out and filled with mayonnaise in which the guests could dip shrimps. Sliced carrots and radishes were other hors d'oeuvres.

The tea table was centered with pink carnations and other spring flowers, and was spread with a variety of good things to eat, including several large frosted cakes.

Msgr. Michael Ready was accompanied by Carlos Siri, a young South American who is translating dispatches of the Catholic News Service for Latin American papers.

Others present were the Misses Marion and Mary Theresa Norris, with their parents, Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris; Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Dr. and Mrs. William F. O'Donnell and Mrs. Ricardo Alfaro, wife of the former Minister of Panama.

Chilean Envoy Gives Reception For Visiting Ski Champions

By Carolyn Bell

Ski champions from the snow-capped Andes managed to throw social Washington into something of a dither yesterday afternoon when the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Michels entertained at a reception in their home between 6 and 7 o'clock at the Embassy.

"He looks like a Scandinavian movie-actor," said one young lady upon meeting handsome blond Canuto Errazuris, who is captain of the Chilean ski team that has been traveling over this country. Young Errazuris, who has twice broken a world's record, was limping about with a cane because of an injured foot. This team has been taking part in competitions in New England and the Middle West. They will sail Friday for their homeland—completing a triumphal tour.

Nelson Rockefellers Pose for Pictures

Spring flowers centered the table where sandwiches, canapes and cakes were arranged.

Creating a great deal of interest were Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller, who were posing for pictures with a number of Chilean skiiers. Mrs. Rockefeller was smartly turned out in a black suit and turban swathed in veil. Mrs. A. A. Berle was there, and others glimpsed were the Counselor of the Embassy and Senora de Gazitua, the Air Attache of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Saenz and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke.

The reception had been set for a late hour. The Ambassador presented several distinguished men with decorations at 5 o'clock. He conferred the Order "Al Merito" upon Dr. Thomas Parran, Dr. Arestades Moll and Dr. Tomas Cajigas. The Red Cross of Chile delivered several medals of honor, first class. Receiving them were Dr. Leo S. Rowe and Joseph Hamlen. Also decorated, second class, were James Nicholson, Mrs. James K. McClintock, Mrs. Alta Elizabeth Dines, Malcolm Davies and William L. Breese.

Senorita Torres, Visitor From Chile

Wearing a bright red jacket and hat, Mrs. Claude Pepper was chatting about the whirl she and the Senator had in Canada, where they visited recently. They were the guests of Col. James W. Flanagan at his estate, Divadale, near Toronto, and were widely feted.

Wearing an amazing confection atop her blond pompadour was Senorita Lucy Torres, a visitor from Chile. The hat, or what there was of it, was of black straw covered with two large roses and smothered in pink maline that extended under the chin and down her black frock. Others there were Miss Aileen Havlin Harris in a smart beige and black ensemble, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Duggan, Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Walmsley, Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Satterthwaite, Mr. and Mrs. John Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris.

Mrs. George Thorpe poured tea during the afternoon. Also there were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, she in a smart gray suit; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Trewblood, Col. and Mrs. Robert Davis and their two daughters, Miss Barbara Davis and Miss Dita Davis; Enrique Zorilla, one of the members of the ski team, brought his pretty blond wife along with him on the tour. Yesterday she wore a gay printed frock. Others of the team there were Julio Errazuris, Luis Mitrovich, and Luis and Julio Zegers.

The First Secretary of the Chilean Embassy, Don Abelardo Silva, chatted with several young ladies. Also there were Miss Patricia Grady, Edward Robbins, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas and her daughter, Miss Anita Cajigas, wearing a lovely fur jacket; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Britten and many others.

Mrs. Martin Vogel And Baroness Give Luncheon

Mrs. Martin Vogel and Baroness Stackelberg entertained at luncheon yesterday, later taking their guests on to the lecture given by Miss Emma Mills at the Sulgrave Club. The talk was the second presented by Miss Mills here this month. Her subject yesterday was "Flashlight on America." Proceeds from both talks are to be turned over to British War Relief.

Both Mrs. Vogel and Baroness Stackelberg were on the committee of sponsors for the Mills lectures. Others included Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Francis Biddle, Mrs. Vernon Kellog and Mrs. Charles M. Lea.

Brisk Walk A Tonic for Spirit, Figure

By Ida Jean Kain

If you want a tonic that will get you out of that end-of-winter slump, you can't do better than to walk regularly. You will find that it takes the sag out of your spirits and your figure.

Walking is more than an exposure to fresh air—you could get that simply by flinging open the windows, or riding along in the car with the windows down. But if you are to use more oxygen, you have to put your muscles to work so that they need more.

A long walk is much better for you than several short jaunts. You have to allow enough time to stimulate the circulation and send the blood into the muscles. An hour or so of walking is the means of relieving nerve tension incurred in sedentary work. In sedentary occupations, the blood is kept in the brain centers for hours at a stretch and prolonged, mild exercise drains the brain centers, sends the blood into muscles and skin, and releases tension.

Watch Your Step

For the business woman who has been sitting at a desk all day, or the housewife who has been staying too closely at home, a good long walk is an excellent change of activity. There is no great physical effort connected with walking—it deserves its name, "constitutional."

To turn this activity into a figure program, you have to watch your step. But you should do that anyway. When your figure is out of alignment, it not only detracts from your appearance but also causes you to tire easily for you are exercising with your muscles in the wrong positions.

The posture rule of standing—or sitting—as tall as you possibly can should be enough. When you stretch yourself out to your full length there is no slack for such posture mistakes as leading with the chin or letting the figure sag in the middle. Try always to push up with the top of the head, stretch the neck—keeping chin level—lift the chest, and pull up with all those lazy midriff muscles. Standing tall covers all those things. There should be no tension, however, and shoulders should be relaxed, and arms and legs allowed to swing easily.

Speed Burns Calories

If you are trying to reduce, you will be interested in knowing that the faster you walk, the more calories you burn. Walking at the rate of 5 miles an hour takes more than twice as many calories as walking at the rate of 3¾ miles per hour.

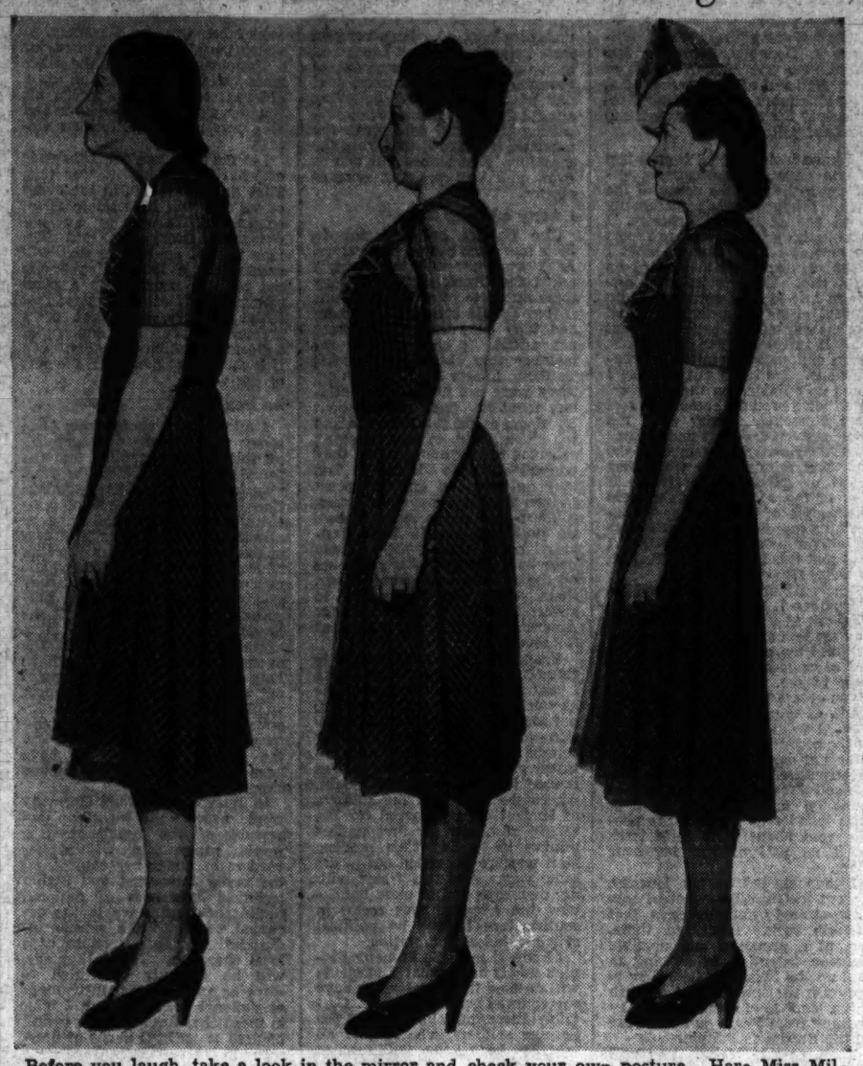
How Posture Can Transform the Figure



Before you laugh, take a look in the mirror and check your own posture. Here Miss Mildred Wedekind, visiting beauty expert, demonstrates two outstanding posture faults. Left—Shoulders hunched, stomach protruding, feet out of line, chin jutted out—this type never gets a job. Or if she does, she always claims to be perpetually overworked and downtrodden. Center—A whack on the shoulder and a bit of advice about the aging coiffure turns Figure 1 into the chesty, militant, domineering woman. Just try to tell her something—she knows it all. She thinks she's standing straight but note the exaggerated effect of her derriere. Right—Head up, double chin gone, heels of feet together, head, shoulder and feet in perfect alignment both body and face are youthful and graceful. This is the correct posture for standing, walking or sitting

Teach Yourself to Play Piano

Music, what enchanted moments it creates for you and your listeners! You are the weaver of magic spells when you play the piano. A dreamy waltz and you lull your grateful hearers into a restful mood—a gay march and toes are tapping.

There needn't be any drudgery about learning how to play. You can easily teach yourself.

Right from the start you make rapid strides in reading notes. A "life-size" chart pictures the most used part of the piano keyboard and with each keyboard is the note that is its symbol in music.

Soon you're playing tunes, learning waltz and march rhythms. Then to play popular hits by a simple short-cut method. Instead of playing the often complicated accompaniment to the melody with your right hand and, with your left, play chords indicated by the guitar diagrams on your music.

This easy way to play popular hits is fully explained in our 24-page instruction book, "A Short Cut to Piano Playing." Includes the keyboard chart and table of chords. Explains musical terms, time values. Has six favorite tunes.

Send 15 cents in coins for our instruction book, "A Short Cut to Piano Playing," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of instruction book.

Posture, Makeup Combine to Give Beauty Illusion

POSTURE is the basic step to beauty, according to Miss Mildred Wedekind, who is representing a series of daily beauty and fashion shows being held at a local store this week.

Miss Wedekind

"However, to achieve perfection or the illusion of great beauty," said Miss Wedekind, "make-up and coiffure must be in complete harmony. That means that the hair-do must be expertly chosen and deftly applied.

At one of her recent lectures she brought out the fact that you can wear any color dress or hat you desire. Also, she pointed out that a blonde, brunette, titian or gray-haired could wear effectively the exact shade of rouge and lipstick. The secret lies in the different color tones of foundation creams and powders.

"It isn't important that your posture is erect one day and that your face is properly cleansed and made-up now and then," explained this comely expert. "It's the day by day habits that count most. First of all to be lovely all the time, your posture must be perfect always. Secondly, you must be fastidious about your make-up every moment."

Miss Wedekind, also warned against the over use of creams. She thinks it is better to remove cleansing cream immediately after applying. Otherwise the grime may settle in the pores. Also, remove your rich emollients before retiring for the night. Leave only a very thin film on the face, for the pores need an unhampered chance to breathe during the night.

Unfinished House

Mrs. John Adams, who lived in an unfinished White House, was not amused by her fate. About the house, she wrote that it was "surrounded by forests but wood was not to be had, because people cannot be had to cut and cart it—the great unfinished audience room I make a drying room of, to hang up the clothes in. The principal stairs are not up, and will not be this winter."

Heartbroken When Husband Left Her 10 Years Ago For Another Woman, Wife Regained Peace of Mind And Zest for Living by Keeping Endlessly Busy

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Permit me to add a few words, out of my own experience, to your advice of March 24 to "Vera"—the young woman who has been sunk in despair ever since her husband left her three years ago to get a divorce and marry a "shrewd, wicked, indescribably homely old maid . . ."

My sympathy with "Vera" stems from personal understanding of her suffering. I went through much the same thing. I, too, was terribly lonely in consequence. I, too, gave up all my old friends following my divorce—because they carried tales back and forth between my former husband and me, keeping me miserable with reports of what he and his new wife were saying and doing. So I gave them up, just as "Vera" did. And I think I acted wisely. I have learned since that the world is full of nice people—all just as nice (and some even nicer) than the "friends" I relinquished along with my husband.

My advice to "Vera" is to cut the whole chapter of experience out of her memory, until she has outgrown its power to hurt her. She can do this by refusing to be alone and unoccupied. She must fill her life with "things to do"—whether or not she enjoys doing them at first; until she goes to bed so tired at night that those taunting phantoms of the past cannot keep her awake and suffering. She is young! That should solve everything. Why not another marriage and possibly children?

This could not be my solution, as I was no longer young when my husband abandoned me. But there was work to be done, fields of learning to explore, people to help, myself to "make over"—and I have been so busy with these projects in the past 10 years, following my divorce, that I have actually savored life more fully and adventurously, on my own, than I ever could have as my husband's wife. In fact, the life in which I thought myself so content, before a "repulsive old maid" stole my husband, now seems rather dull and flat, compared to my present design-for-living.

I was known as a beauty, and I must admit I considered myself a rather "dashing" personality, so the loss of my handsome husband to a plain, scene-making, coarse-natured woman (older than I), was a terrific blow to my self esteem. But I have long since recovered from the shock—and so can "Vera" recover, if she will substitute for her sorrowful memory-pictures of the past, new pictures of happiness yet-to-be. I can assure her, from experience in overcoming heartbreak, that happiness comes in many guises to those who learn to keep an open-handed attitude toward life. Sincerely. FIFTY.

Argument in Favor Of Widely Spaced Babies

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In your columns of February 28, March 4 and March 6, the question was discussed as to whether five or more years' difference in ages, between a first-born and second-born child constitutes an insuperable barrier to happy fraternal association. Some of your correspondents seem to think it does. I would like to give my opinions.

The psychological attitudes growing out of family size and family relationships are fairly well defined. Certain psychologists, such as the late Dr. Otto Rank, profess ability to tell the place in the family circle of any given individual, simply by studying his psychological reactions. There is apt to be one attitude characteristic of the eldest child; another characteristic of the youngest child; still another for the only son or daughter, and, also, a characteristic attitude for the unfortunate "middle" child.

The most frequent pattern is that of jealousy toward the next older or next younger brother or sister—an attitude which, if not wisely handled by parents, may establish an unpleasant personality trait for adulthood. The bossy older sister, the condescending-to-girls brother, the spoiled youngest, are readily recognizable "types" among children, and their adult corollaries are equally well known. All are products of emotional reactions to family relationships.

With the exception of "multiple birth," no child is equipped, from the viewpoint of age, to cope on identical or equal terms with a brother or sister. Even the traditionally recommended two years' "spacing" is apt to constitute a considerable psychological barrier to the establishment of mutual interests. And it is possible for the child born into a large family to be quite as lonely as the "only child." It is, of course, also possible for a family group to so enclose itself, with emotional dependence one upon another, that individual members experience great difficulty in negotiating normal emotional relationships outside the family circle.

Yet, even in the most skillfully managed family situations, adjustments have to be made. And the normal child accepts his brothers and sisters without undue emphasis upon either affection or dislike, and seeks friendships outside the family, among members of a contemporary age group.

Certain of your correspondents argued against having children born five or more years apart, yet some authorities hold five or six years' "spacing" to be most desirable. These authorities reason that the older child, having attained the importance attached (in his mind) to school attendance, will not feel a need to compete with the infant newcomer for parental attention. And, also, that the baby will mature without feeling the older child as an ever-present hindrance to his developing ego. Sincerely yours, W. P. M.

Decorator's Touch Gives Rooms Oomph

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Bright Ideas

WE can spot an interior decorator's hand in one glance at a room. By that we don't necessarily mean a professional interior decorator . . . plenty of housewives are decorators in their own right simply by virtue of reading and effort. The decorator's touch is what takes a room out of the dumps, lifts it up from the ordinary, gives it a flair and a fillip. For most fine decorators use classic furniture of enduring design, preferring to let less permanent furnishings interpret fashion's foibles—color, curtains, slip covers, accessories. Any of us could do the same thing with a little concentration on our own decorating problem. Some of the bright ideas we've noted in our rounds of exhibition rooms done by the country's leading decorators include:

Kelly green taffeta swag and side curtains over white ruffled bobbinet under-curtains for a bedroom with French provincial furniture, a flowered broadloom rug, wall paper in green and eggshell in a drapery design.

Yellow flowered chintz, miles of it, for a bedroom with white walls and mahogany furniture. The twin beds had upholstered headboards of the chintz with chenille spreads in white.

Turquoise linen draperies in a pine panelled living room with maple furniture and upholstery in dark reds and in a floral linen on a turquoise ground.

Defense and Decoration

Defense and decoration are working hand in glove these days, according to the manufacturers. The same looms that make lace curtains, for instance, are being adjusted to fill Government orders for millions of yards of mosquito netting. Fortunately there are, so far, plenty of looms and plenty of cotton to make both, so no shortage of either lace or mosquito netting is anticipated.

Over the Coffee Cup with Tom Wilkins

The man that hails you Tom or Jack,
And proves, by thumping on your back,
His sense of your great merit,
Is such a friend that one had need
Be very much his friend indeed
To pardon or to bear it.
—William Cowper (c.1775)

It may be fun to be fooled about some things, but not about coffee. Wilkins lifts you up and never lets you down.

Women Hear Talks On Orient

U. S., Britain Hold Key to Far East Peace, Lecture Audience Told

By Jessie Ash Arndt
Post Club Editor

Peace in Southeastern Asia will have to be implemented after aggression has stopped and the only instrument in sight for that implementation is the collaboration of the British Commonwealth and the United States.

This was the statement of Dr. Robert Aura Smith, former New York Times correspondent in the Philippines, speaking yesterday at the fourth in the series of Far East lectures being sponsored by women's groups at the Shoreham Hotel. His subject was "Political Stresses in the Pacific."

"Southeastern Asia has enjoyed for 40 years a stable and productive political equilibrium," said Dr. Smith. "Four colonies of four Western democracies were able to live in peaceful relationship wtih each other because of the peaceful relationships of their mother countries. Four democracies carried on the functions of empire and carried them on advantageously until that equilibrium was destroyed by the overrunning of two of those countries in Europe, and by Japanese aggression against their colonies in Asia."

He also discussed the effect of colonial policy on the standard of living in each of the colonies; praised American administration in the Philippines and, in answer to questions, expressed himself strongly as opposed to carrying out the terms of the present independence legislation. It is his belief that "conditions have changed until there is no longer an issue as between Philippine independence and American sovereignty—merely an issue between American sovereignty and Japanese sovereignty."

Sharing the program with Dr. Smith was Sir George Sansom, who spoke from a background of long residence in Japan, on "Japan from the Historical Viewpoint." Sir George declared it was a mistake to think of Japan as a country in which the people are only waiting for a chance to upset the present totalitarian government and so to end the hardship and oppression which they suffer.

The feudal system, the main features of which have remained the same for centuries, has built up in Japan a strong and dominant ruling class and a disciplined and unified lower class, he said, with a long tradition of hardship and sacrifice.

The present government is not foreign to Japanese sentiment, nor without historical antecedents, he said. Democracy and the basic concepts of freedom on which it is founded in the Western world are something unknown to the Japanese, he declared, asserting that "Japan, despite the modern growth in communications, is still geographically and culturally remote from Western countries."

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, chairman of the lecture series, presided at the program. Mrs. Stanley F. Reed introduced Sir George and Mrs. Mason Gulick introduced Dr. Smith.

A luncheon followed the program, with Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, Mrs. Edward Sonneborn and Mrs. James T. Hartnett as co-chairmen. Mrs. Raymond Clapper is general chairman of the lecture series.

Women Flyers' Organization Receives Charter

Underwood & Underwood

The Washington Chapter of the Women Flyers of America received its charter yesterday at a meeting at which Miss Cynthia Davis (left) was hostess, at the home of her father, Dwight F. Davis, on Decatur Place. With Miss Davis, a member of the national governing board, are Miss Jessie R. O'Connell (center), national secretary, and Mrs. Anne S. Kinnie, chairman of the Washington chapter

The Washington Chapter of the Women Flyers of America yesterday received its charter from Miss Jessie O'Connell, of New York, codirector of the national organization. It was accepted by Mrs. Anne S. Kinnie at a tea for members of the new group here, given by Miss Cynthia Davis at the home of her father, Dwight F. Davis, 2145 Decatur Place.

The young women were organized last month to take ground school instruction in aviation. They have been given the use of a room at Holton Arms School and are paying for their own course and working for their licenses. Following this, they expect to take the 60-hour course in parachute rigging. This will equip them to re-wrap parachutes, which must be done every 60 days when the parachutes are not in use.

Members of the chapter include: Mrs. Nannie Burgess, Miss Rose Bulloch, Miss Dorothy Carr, Miss Inez Demonet, Miss Isabelle Dodge, Miss Virginia Campbell, Miss Edna Collins, Mrs. Helen Hamilton, Miss Margaret Gordon, Miss Norma Gilham, Miss Wilma House, Mrs. Anne Kinnie, Miss Cynthia King, Miss Eleanor Kosch, Miss Lenore Lennon, Miss Bertha Klann, Miss Thelma Myers, Miss Alice McClurg, Mrs. Sutherland Mayo, Mrs. Jane McIlvaine, Miss Elizabeth Kelly, Miss Martha Roger, Miss Lillian Sheets, Miss Claire Sessford, Miss Betsy Sanders, Miss Juanita Sharp, Miss Gladys Wilner and Miss Ruth Wells.

Geographers Have Speaker

Dr. Millicent Todd Bingham spoke at the meeting of the Society of Woman Geographers yesterday on her experiences during astronomical expeditions with her late father, Prof. David Todd. Her subject was "Chasing Eclipses."

Dr. Bingham accompanied her father on scientific journeys to Tripoli, in North Africa; Singkep, in the Dutch East Indies; Siam, Russia, Peru and Chile, Japan and Singapore. In addtion, she has traveled widely in many other parts of the world. A noted geographer herself, she has lectured at the University of Grenoble, in France, and has given lectures on urban geography at Columbia University and Sarah Lawrence College.

Like her distinguished mother, who was the editor of the Poems and Letters of Emily Dickinson, Dr. Bingham is a well-known author, her publications being in both English and French. She is the wife of the eminent psychologist, Dr. Walter Van Dyke Bingham, whose work on the Defense Program has brought them to Washington "for the duration."

Program Planned For Izaac Walton Auxiliary Visitors

The Washington Branch of the Women's Auxiliary to the Izaak Walton League of America is planning entertainment for the wives of Izaak Walton members who are coming to Washington with them for the three-day national convention, opening at the Willard Hotel today.

Following registration and luncheon, there will be a trip this afternoon to Mount Vernon, via Arlington and Alexandria. A wreath will be laid on the tombs of Martha and George Washington by the presidents of the three women's auxiliaries, including Mrs. Lewis Radcliffe, president of the local organization.

Tomorrow the delegates will visit the White House and other points of interest and will attend the annual banquet with the men in the evening.

Saturday morning the women will see the Capitol and call on members of Congress and, in the afternoon, from 4 to 6, will be guests at the first anniversary tea of the Washington Auxiliary, at the home of Mrs. Radcliffe, 5600 Thirty-second Street.

Rep. Smith Urges W. C. T. U. To Help Guard Service Morals

Representative Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, addressing the annual meeting of the District W. C. T. U. last night at the Roosevelt Hotel, urged members of the organization to cooperate throughout the country and help provide clean and wholesome recreation for soldiers and sailors, both in camps and in communities around camps.

"Soldiers and sailors are pretty much like other people," she said. "Good influences and development of decent environments help them to continue as they did when in their own homes."

Mrs. Smith urged women to become more active than in previous years. She spoke of her own election and of her support of all defense measures in Congress, including the land-lease bill recently enacted and the $7,000,000,000 appropriation—the second largest single appropriation in the history of the country.

She explained that perhaps her support was influenced by the fact that her State, Maine, had 600 miles of Canadian border, and a much longer coast line.

Discussing Maine's leadership in the temperance movement, she spoke of the effective work of the Christian Civic League, of which Frederick W. Smith has been the executive secretary for many years.

"You will rejoice with him in recent gain in prohibitory sentiment as shown by the annual town and city local option elections throughout the State," she said. "In 1940 these referendums were held in 504 communities as required by law. Twenty-three towns voted to discontinue their State liquor stores. Forty-four discontinued their "beer parlors," so-called. Seven cocktail lounges were abolished. It is significant that no town, not having these liquor services in 1939, voted to open them in 1940. The gain was wholly on the dry side.

"My State has a unique place in temperance history. It was the birthplace of Neal Dow, the father of the "Maine law," the first prohibitory legislation to go onto the statute books of any State. General Dow was much beloved by the temperance and Christian people of the Nation, but not highly regarded by the liquor interests. He continued his work until the prohibition law was embodied in the Constitution of his native State. This also was pioneer work. It had never previously been made a part of the fundamental law of any State or nation."

Miss Elizabeth A. Smart, national legislative director of the National W. C. T. U., also spoke briefly, declaring it was "time to recognize that there are psychologic, as well as economic, area factors in society involved in the problem of implementing our effective reaction to present world conditions, if we are going to preserve democracy. It is unrealistic to ignore the part alcohol plays in conditioning these psychologic factors," she said. "Definitely, its contribution, if you would call it such, is and always has been toward the breakdown of morale."

Text of Donovan's Talk, Telling of Travels in Warring Nations

Text of the address of Col. William J. Donovan, broadcast last night over the Blue Network of the National Broadcasting Co., The Columbia Broadcasting System, and the Mutual Broadcasting System, follows:

I have just returned from a trip which gave me a unique opportunity to inspect the scene of the war. I hope I made reasonably good use of that opportunity. I am speaking to you now to report to you as fellow citizens what I have seen and felt and heard on that trip. Let me at once disclaim any idea of speaking as an expert or as an authority. And let me say at the beginning that I shall refrain, as far as possible, from expressing opinions or conclusions. I do this not because I have no opinions on the subject I shall discuss, but because I feel that I should, insofar as I am able, present the facts upon which the American people must make up their minds as to what they want to do for themselves. If any of my experiences can help the people of this country to determine more clearly what course is left for them to pursue, then I feel that it is my duty to tell them of those experiences.

I left America for England on December 7, 1940. I had been in England in July and August and had made a study of the situation at that time, so that I had a standard of comparison for what I was now to see. In England I was given access to the various studies made of the different theaters of war. I went through many parts of the country, not only to see the effects of bombing, but to see how factories were run, to observe how the activities of peace and of war went on together, and to look with wonder at the way the people went about their daily tasks as if no pall of war lay over them.

I then started on my journey. I went to Gibraltar, where I saw how strongly fortified was that historic rock. I learned there, too, of a proposed and possible German intention of seeking to seal up the Straits of Gibraltar to prevent the passage of British ships, and to do this either by striking from Spain or by the use of the Straits to Britain.

Then, east to Malta. You will remember the Italian claim that Malta would fall within two weeks. Malta, however, still endures after something over 120 bombings, and is still serviceable, as you saw in the papers the other day, as a repair base for cruisers and destroyers.

Greeks Very Tough

From Malta I flew to Cairo, where I went out onto the western desert, spending some two weeks with Gen. Wavell's command. What I have to report to you about the African campaign is this: that the British have done a superb job—a better job than they have let the world discover. It is doubtless true that the Italians haven't got their hearts in this war. But the British victory resulted not so much from lack of tenacity on the part of the Italians as it did from superior generalship and power of maneuver on the part of the British. The British made the desert their ally. The Italians were afraid of it. They shut themselves up in miniature Maginot Lines, each of which was taken in turn.

From Cairo I went to Greece, where I had the chance to see the whole front, spending a week on the long line stretching from Koritza to Klisura. Everywhere—on the front and behind the front and behind the front—conditions were the same. The Greek soldiers were very tough, indeed, and in good health, and this was true whether they were the tall mountaineers or the short, blocky fellows from the valley. It's astonishing, the job they have done. They really made their fight there with a rock, a mule and a gun: a rock for a parapet; a mule to carry the stores, and a gun or a rifle or a cannon for a weapon. The Greeks had no big war machine; they had no tanks. Except for the aid given them by the British in antiaircraft and antitank guns, they lacked almost all the weapons that are required in modern warfare. And yet, they went into the fight.

And out of this I learned one lesson which I want to report to my fellow citizens here. It is this: If you are going to have machines, you have got to have the best machines. Second best won't do. If you can only get second best, it's better to have none. Because if you have machines you rely upon them. And if they are second best machines you rely upon them too much and you are overwhelmed by the best. But if you have nothing, then you rely upon nature and upon your own physical resources and your own brains; and if you have brains and courage, you find a way to deal with a machine.

This war has already disclosed that people can be too strong in their belief in Maginot Lines and in making Maginot Lines out of concrete and out of oceans and out of machines, and believing absolutely in the machine and forgetting that man, who made the machine, if put to it, can whip the machine. And before this war is over, you will see this demonstrated.

Liberty a Living Thing

The Greeks believed not in their machines but in themselves. As I went through the front, I asked the Greek soldiers if they were afraid to meet the Germans if they should come against them and they answered. They were not afraid. I shall always remember this about the Greeks: To them, liberty is a living thing. They were not at all self-conscious about it. They talked about it. Some might think they talked too much about it, but they weren't ashamed to talk about it and they weren't afraid to die for it. You may be surprised and interested to hear that, as I met these Greek soldiers—not alone in their battle positions, but in their first-aid stations, where many of them have been brought after six hours on the stretcher—wherever I met them they would manage to cheer; first for Greece, then for America, and then for President Roosevelt.

From Greece I went north to Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, where I saw the Nazi military machine at work, seeing how it was used, not for fighting, but for intimidation—to impose upon weaker countries Nazi economic and political philosophy. It was just as it used to be in our school books, where we read that the soldiers of ancient days prepared for the taking of a city by first undermining its walls. This modern Nazi warfare is carried out in the same way. And this I saw with my own eyes and at close hand—how the advance was made in southeastern Europe by political sapping and disintegration.

I know it must be in many people's minds as to what Yugoslavia will do now that her leaders have surrendered her to Germany. Certainly there must be many of the Serbian soldiers, who despite all that has been done, will seek to give some aid to Greece in her defense. Let me tell you why I think this.

In Yugoslavia, as in all these countries, I went to the military academies because it is usually in the army that you find the essence of the national spirit. Just before I left some of the younger generals, who had been junior officers in the World War, took me to a room that was kept as something apart. The only thing in that room was a map of the old Serbia standing on an easel. On that map, in blue lines, were marked the various positions of resistance taken by the Serb army as it was driven back by Germany in the last World War. And those Serbian generals took pride in the fact that they had held their army intact and had taken it out and joined with the Allies in Salonika and that the army was returned intact. I wait to see what the Serbian soldiers will do.

Differences Submerged

Back to Turkey, where I found that the Turk, although not equipped with modern arms, and not prepared to carry on an offensive at this time, was proud of the fact that Turkey was an ally of Britain and proud, too, of the fact that the Turks would be the defenders, as they expressed it, of the Gate.

Then to Palestine. I had intended to go into Syria, but was stopped by German intervention. In Palestine I saw battalions made up of companies of Jews and of Arabs, together, their political differences submerged in the need of common defense. Then on to Bagdad, where I had an opportunity to see something of the propaganda efforts of the Germans to incite rebellion among the Arabs in Irak and in Syria.

Then back to Africa; finally through Malta and Gibraltar, to Spain and Portugal, and back again to England, and then home by air by way of Portuguese West Africa and Brazil and Trinidad to New York. And in all of these places that I went to I had the opportunity of talking with many different kinds of people—leaders of government, economists, generals and private soldiers, with the ordinary people of the different countries. And everywhere I went I asked the questions which you would have asked.

I asked everywhere the question, "What would be the result in Europe of a triumphant Germany?" All answers came to the same thing, but there were two answers which were almost identical in their wording. These answers came, one from an important figure in a country, not then taken over by Germany, in which certain leaders wished for a German victory, and the other from an important person in a different country who feared his country would be taken over and who was against a German victory.

Let me give you the substance of what they said. It was this: That Nazi Germany, in the event of victory, will consolidate all of continental Europe as an impregnable stronghold; that Hitler's talk of an empire that will endure for a thousand years is not an idle boast—it is a plain statement of Nazi aspiration; that Hitler's grandiose concept of a greater Germany is a concept of a Germany which will defy, even if it should not dominate, the rest of the world.

An Iron Hand

I asked these people how Germany would seek to accomplish all this and they replied that the foundation upon which the Nazi plan to base their military domination is the development of agricultural production in Europe by allocating to France, or to others of the subdued countries, the task of meeting the food needs of the new area. In other words, they said that Nazi Germany is pursuing now a policy which, if she is victorious, will cut off a large share of the market which the overseas exporting countries have long enjoyed. I need not point out to you that the consequences would be disastrous to the economies of the great farming countries like Argentina, Canada and the United States which have been so dependent on European export markets.

In Europe itself Nazi Germany would become the workshop and arsenal of the continent. She would concentrate within her borders or under her control, all the really important and highly technical industries of national significance and leave to the occupied countries the simple industries and the operations of a local character. Trade, they say, will be partially controlled to serve as an important instrument of national policy—which I took to mean that foreign trade would be used as an instrument of pressure to serve Nazi Germany's military and economic interests, while Germany herself would control the heavy industries and keep abreast of the development in mechanized warfare, thus maintaining at the peak of its power the great war machine in which she places all in trust.

Nazi doctrine, so these men told me, is based upon the firm conviction that he who controls the productive capacity of Europe will remain its future master; that the cardinal feature of Nazi policy would be to retain an iron hand over every industry engaged in the production of instruments of war in all the conquered and occupied countries.

By this act, the German leaders believe that they would make permanently impossible any successful resistance in Europe to the Nazi machine.

And then I asked: If this were done, what, in the opinion of the men I talked to, would be the effect upon America? Would it mean that Germany would attempt to invade America? And to this came the reply—"If you mean by an invasion a movement against America by a military force—no. But if you mean by an invasion an attempted economic isolation of America—Yes."

And I asked: How could this be done? And they said, "More than any other country, the United States would have to bear the

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Must Make Up Mind on Convoys—Donovan

brunt of this new economic order. She would have to bear it, first, indirectly, through South America. South America, being dependent upon European markets, would have to deal exclusively through Berlin, and the economic restraints of Berlin would expand into South American political life. Secondly, the United States would have to bear the brunt directly because a German dominated Europe, with its whole industry under government direction, and under a comprehensive governmental system, would have the American economy based upon individual enterprise at its mercy. As a result, the United States would ultimately have to create its own governmental trade monopoly, so that, as a consequence of the nature of the Nazi control, the very system to which we most object would be imposed upon us.

And when I appeared to be incredulous of such a scheme, it was stated to me time and time again that this was no mere theory and imagination; that it not only represented a considered policy, but corresponded to actual German experience with the Soviet trade monopoly. And when I heard all this, I said that it only confirmed my belief in the soundness of the instinct of the American people that a victorious Germany would mean a grave danger to American free institutions.

Now, how is all this to be brought about?

What are we up against?

People sometimes think of the war as one which has settled down into a contest between England and Germany. But, from the Nazi point of view, this isn't the way to look at it. To Germany, England is only one of a series of obstacles which stand between her and world domination. To Germany, each country which she overruns serves two purposes: It is an acquisition in itself; and it prepares the way for the next act of expansion.

Threat to America

Look at your map and you will see what happens. By taking Austria, Germany outflanked Czechoslovakia. By seizing Czechoslovakia, she prepared for the attack on Poland. Holland and Belgium were steps in a campaign against France. By occupying Norway, she acquired submarine bases for the attack on England. French ports and airdromes, too, are now serving against England. The infiltration into Rumania and now the surrender of Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, the pressure on Spain, the unrest in the Arab world—all these are not ends in themselves. They are attempts to occupy strategic and outflanking positions, both military and economic—yes, and psychological—which will help Nazi Germany to strangle or attack England. Just as she used Russia against Poland and Italy against France, so she is encouraging Japan to action in the Far East.

The difference between England and the other obstacles in Germany's path is one of degree. England is infinitely the most important obstacle. If England falls, Germany has no one to fear in Europe or the Middle East. She can deal with Russia at her leisure. She would obtain at a single stroke every port, airdrome and transatlantic terminus in Europe. She would obtain the French and Italian fleets. Certainly the British fleet bases. And this not only in Europe, but in Africa.

On my trip home, at Bolarna in Portugese West Africa, I saw a German airdrome, not now in use, but from which flight could be made to Brazil as we made it, in an overnight trip. Germany always tries to outflank. By defeating England, she would outflank the Atlantic from Narvik to Cape Town. Possession of the whole East Atlantic seaboard would give her the bases she needs to push her plans further. Meanwhile, in the Pacific, she could call Japan into play.

A beaten England means a threat to America from the east, the west and in the south.

But England is not beaten, and it is because England is not beaten that America is not yet threatened. England is holding against Germany the line of the Atlantic on the west. Through defeat of the Italians, she is clearing up the flanks of the Red Sea. On the south she holds definitely a line running from Lagos along the north of French Equatorial Africa to the Sudan in Egypt, and thence extending northward to Greece and Turkey. In the western Mediterranean she holds the bases of Gibraltar and Malta and can take convoys past Sicily (which, as you saw in the papers yesterday, Admiral Cunningham had just done) to the eastern Mediterranean, where she has bases at Bengazi, Crete and Alexandria.

England Stronger

England is much stronger than when I last saw her in the black days of the summer of 1940 after the fall of Dunkirk. Each week the situation improves. But not until 1942 will England be fully armed. This year is a year of difficulty and of danger. England does not fool herself. She has not only to protect her own defensive and offensive forces, to protect her sea-borne traffic, but to provide also all the materials she can for Greece and Turkey.

In the lease and lend bill, this country has taken a momentous decision. We have announced to the world, as well as to Germany, that we intend to support England.

In order to translate that legislation into concrete a ssistance, we have appropriated $7,000,000,000. We are in the position of being a supply base from which supplies go to expeditionary forces in China, in the Middle East, and in England.

One thing must be clear to us. It is going to mean nothing in winning the war unless the goods we produce and ship reach their destination. But due to thinness of protection, ships are sunk and goods are lost. These shipping losses come from submarines, airplanes, mines and raiders. It is an essential part of German tactics to throttle the American supply. We have got to make up our minds what we are going to do about it. Are we going to deliver the goods?

This question must be answered now. Are we prepared to take the chance? For there is a chance. There is a danger, and whatever we do we must recognize that the danger of attack exists.

Personal Opinions

In the passage of the lend-lease bill alone we have done two things which could be considered acts of war. One is to authorize the building of fighting ships to be delivered to England. The other is the provision for the refitting and repair of British ships in our yards. Germany has ignored those acts, as she has many others the past year and a half. But we must not delude ourselve into thinking that she hasn't stored it up against us. We'll have to pay for it. We see in the papers that German raiders are in the South Atlantic, and that there are rumors of their presence in the North Atlantic. They may be there to frighten us and stop us. As a self-governing people, we must determine for ourselves what is the right thing for us to do. And having decided, we must them accept the consequences.

Here, perhaps, you will expect me to express my personal opinions. I do so because after what I have seen of the fate of Balkan nations I feel I must do so. There are men in this country as there were men in other countries in western Europe and the Balkans, who believe, or who say, that it is for us to choose whether or not we will be attacked by Nazi Germany; who believe or who say that we can avoid attack if we will avoid provocation. A dozen European countries prove the foolishness of that belief. We have no choice as to whether or not we will be attacked. That choice is Hitler's, and he has already made it—not for Europe only, but for Africa and Asia and the world. Our only choice is to choose whether or not we will resist. And to choose in time—while resistance is still possible, while others are still alive to stand beside us.

I know there is a question in your minds as to what the situation is in the Mediterranean. Let me ask you to look at your map. We usually think of the Mediterranean as a mere arterial highway running from east to west. But don't look at it that way. Take a line running north and south. Then you see the Mediterranean as a "No Man's Land" between two lines on a strategic front running from Spain to the Black Sea. Germany holds the northern or European line, except at the two ends—Suez and Gibraltar. Britain has control of much of the southern or African line. She holds an important salient in Greece, while the Italians still retain a foothold in Tripoli, and Germany threatens French North Africa. Two principles control the strategy of the Axis powers in this sphere of war: (1) from an offensive standpoint to weaken England's power of resistance by preventing her ships from using the Mediterranean; (2) from a defensive viewpoint, to protect Germany's own supply of fuel, goods and food in southeastern Europe and to deny to England any foothold in that section. That may explain Germany's movement now against Greece. Ruled by these two principles, Germany is setting up certain options depending upon eventuality. She may exercise any one or any group of these options. But whatever may happen, all of them are but a portion of one central plan based on her often-announced military theory that she will try to confine military operations to but one front and will do all in her power to maintain a quiet and tranquil Balkans. So we see that it is a fight for domination of the Mediterranean. Britain must gain control of the narrows and keep Germany out of the Aegean Basin. Once she gets freedom of movement there and obtains domination in the air and on the sea, the Mediterranean will give her lateral communication within this theater.

Let's keep this in mind—Germany is a formidable, a resourceful, and a ruthless foe. Don't underrate her—if we do—we deceive ourselves. Her victories have brought her new military and industrial strength. She got the jump at the start of the war. And has held it. But not yet has she met a full test. And until this test comes, it is better not to overrate her. Her greatest gains have been made through fear. Fear of the might of her war machine. She has so played upon that fear and her recent diplomatic victories are its product.

But now, storming down the Struma Valley she encounters the soldiers of Greece and of Britain. It seems even more foolish for Greece to stand against Germany than it was for her to stand against Italy. And England, in electing to fight beside her ally, is doing a very dangerous and very daring thing—but a very fine thing.

Military experts will tell us there can be but one result—they point to the number of German divisions and the power of her armored force. But if statistics win wars, both England and Greece would have been defeated long ago. There is a moral force in wars, that, in the long run, is stronger than any machine. I have seen these men — these Greeks and Britons — in their fighting. Whatever the result in that field, Germany will know she was in a battle. And I say to you, my fellow-citizens, all that Mr. Churchill has told you of the resolution and determination and valor and confidence of his people is true.

U. S. Faces Choice, Donovan Says

ognize that the danger of attack exists."

The recipient of the Congressional Medal of Honor and other decorations for his World War heroism, Col. Donovan drew upon his experience as a military man to evaluate the problems of the war.

Secretary Knox, in introducing him, said Col. Donovan would make an "unofficial report to the American people" on his secret mission of observation through 25,000 miles of "front lines" in Europe, Africa and Asia Minor.

The "report" dealt optimistically with Britain's position on land, at sea and in the secret corridors of diplomacy. But he added that England, in dispatching troops to fight beside the Greeks, "is doing a very dangerous and very daring thing—but a very fine thing."

"Military experts," he said, "will tell us there can be but one result—they point to the number of German divisions and the power of her armed forces. But if statistics win wars, both England and Greece would have been defeated long ago.

"I have seen these men—these Greeks and Britons—in there fighting. Whatever the result in that field, Germany will know she was in a battle."

Col. Donovan predicted, from his contact with Serbian generals, that a Serbian volunteer army would join the Greeks in the field now that the leaders of Yugoslavia "have surrendered her to Germany."

Turkey, he said, while not prepared "as yet" to take the offensive, is definitely "an ally of Britain" and determined to defend the Straits. In Palestine, he added, he found battalions of Jews and Arabs serving together, "their political differences submerked in the need of common defense."

Traffic Safety Plan Mapped As Defense Aid

On the theory that every traffic accident involving death or injury to an industrial worker directly affects the national defense program, 50 organizations throughout the country have united in support of a standard highway safety program, the Automotive Safety Foundation announced yesterday.

Norman Damon, director of the foundation, which has offices here in the Tower Building, Fourteenth and K Streets Northwest, estimated that more than 15,000,000 persons are represented by the groups.

"We know," he said, "that every accident resulting in injury or death to a defense worker or a man available for military service directly retards the defense program. Last year, 16,000 workers in trade and industry were killed in traffic.

"And perhaps even more important to defense production," he added, "were the 600,000 traffic injuries suffered last year by industry workers."

Pointing out that the Nation's system is the "conveyor belt" for transporting workers and materials, Damon declared:

With America's economy, more than any other nation, geared to highway transportation, safe and orderly traffic will measurably increase our productive efficiency.

The organizations supporting the move for a standard highway safety program include both automotive and industrial groups.

Brakes Applied in Fatal Car Crash, Is Belief

That Lloyd H. Frazier, 22-year-old motorman killed early Tuesday in a streetcar crash at Seventh Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, applied the brakes of his car, but neglected to turn off the electric controller was suggested by investigators yesterday.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald again postponed setting a date for an inquest, to await completion of inquiries by police, the Public Utilities Commission and Capital Transit Co.

Inspector Arthur E. Miller, police traffic inspector, said evidence thus far indicates that Frazier did apply his air brakes, but apparently forgot to shut off the electric power which drives the car.

He recalled testimony of Harry E. Walters, Frazier's conductor, that a sharp, hissing sound was heard as the car approached the intersection.

"This would indicate," said Miller, "that the car brakes were on, but that the continued driving pressure, due to failure to turn off the electric controller, broke the air lines."

He added that the front end of Frazier's car was so badly wrecked that the theory probably is incapable of proof.

The PUC reported that its inquiry will be concluded today or tomorrow. Following consultation with other investigating agencies, the date for a coroner's inquest may then be set by Dr. MacDonald.

Easter Lilies Are Plentiful Despite War

The flowers that bloom in the spring were among the first casualties of Europe's war, but thanks to Government experiments America will have no shortage of Easter lilies.

With Holland and Germany, the world's bulb-growing centers, blockaded by Britain, the Agriculture Department revealed yesterday that the United States has been cut off from the sources of 90 per cent of its tulips and almost all its hyacinths, lillies of the valley and crocuses.

But the trumpet-shaped symbol of purity, the Easter lily, now obtained almost exclusively from Japan, will soon be an American flower.

Developed at Beltsville

White, crimson, orange and golden blooms, superior to the Japanese variety, have been developed through the cultivation of more than 10,000 hybrid strains at Beltsville, Md., during the last five years.

A commercial bulb industry has been launched in Louisiana and California, officials announced, adding that in two years there will be no need for the 26,000,000 bulbs imported yearly from Japan. The United States will be lily sufficient.

Not so, however, with the small, bell-shaped clustered blossoms, which fable holds first grew from the blood of Hyacinthus, a Greek youth killed in a game of quoits with Apollo.

Hyacinth bulbs are virtually impossible to obtain in the United States today. Only 50 could be imported in 1940 from Holland, which in 1939 sent more than 19,000,000 to this country.

The tiny, many-colored crocuses, which herald the approach of spring, are equally rare. Holland shipped more than 15,000,000 crocus bulbs to the United States in 1939, but only 550 in 1940.

Nazi Bulbs Blocked

Nor will bridal bouquets of dainty white lilies of the valley grace many American weddings this year. America's annual purchase of 9,000,000 bulbs from Germany has been eliminated completely.

Chinese Relief Poster Contest Gets Under Way

A poster contest for art students in public and private schools in Washington and vicinity opened yesterday under auspices of the United China Relief Association.

The contest is in charge of Miss Ann Fuller Abbott, of 1143 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

A first prize of $25 was donated by the Chinese National Salvation Association and a second award of $10 by Lees' Association. A total of 21 honorable mention prizes—objects of art—were contributed by the following Chinese merchants of Washington:

Tuck Cheung Co., Lotus Restaurant, Far East Restaurant, Mon Sang Co., On Leong Merchants Association, High Yuen Co., Chinese Lantern Cafe and China Inn. The honorable mention prizes were collected by Dr. C. C. Hung, of the Chinese Community Church of Washington.

Details of the contest have been sent to all public and private schools.

Fish Print in Sand Believed Made Half Billion Years Ago

A jellyfish that rested on the sand half a billion years ago has given Smithsonian scientists what they believe to be the earliest record of animal life on earth, the institution reported yesterday.

Although scientists have guessed that there must have been countless generations of animal evolution before the 500,000,000-year-old mark, all they had found before the jellyfish record were markings in sandstone which might have been made by crawling worms.

Steak on the Hoof (Without Mushrooms) Pride Of Col. Cy Compton, Rodeo Showman

Special Breed Of 'Ornery' Steer To Take Part in Show

Genial Gene Autry, cowboy-crooner is the star of the show and 15 beautiful cowgirls probably will get the most attention from the cash customers, but 64-year-old Col. Cy Compton will be the happiest performer tonight at the opening of the "World Championship Rodeo" at Uline Ice Arena.

The white-haired Colonel (well, they call him Colonel) rode with his old friend "Buffalo Bill" Cody in his show for 20 years and played in Washington with the famed Indian fighter 45 years ago, in 1896.

"It sure looks a heap different now, though," he mused yesterday. "Can't even find the place where the dern show played then—think it was on F Street."

Cy is "sure happy to be back," he said five or six times. His act is an "unprecedented achievement" of handling the "longest lariat in the world," that uncoils at 150 feet, and lassoing therewith ten running horses at once.

Steers Thrill Him

What interests him most in the show is not the daredevil riding of 150—count 'em—stellar cowboy contestants or the death-defying stunts of 15—they're already counted—beautiful cowgirls, but a new herd of steers just acquired by the show.

The steers, according to the Colonel are of the wild Brahma variety, "the wildest, fiercest critters alive," a new brand bred from the sacred oxen of India and Texas longhorns.

The cowgirls, he admits, are O.K. There is Mary Parks, who last year won the world championship in Boston for bronco riding, who was born on a ranch and has been riding since she was 3, and who is the show's star at riding bucking horses.

And there is Georgia Sweet, a South Dakota lass also born on a ranch who has been in a circus and rodeo since she was 15, and who is the star trick rider.

Also there is beautiful Mildred Mix Horner, "the greatest of all women bronco busters;" little Ellen Hammerschmidt, of Texas, and ten other equally gorgeous cowgals.

Cy is proud of his cowboys. "They're the real McCoy," he says. From ranches in Texas, Oklahoma and Montana, they pay their own expenses and earn only what they win in the riding contests.

Star Autry's pet specialty is leaping through a flaming hoop while astride his horse, Champion, an act he introduced on the President's Birthday Fund card at Fort Myer two years ago.

The show opens tonight in the clay-floored arena, at Third and M Streets Northeast, and will play for 11 days, with matinees on Saturdays and Sundays.

Cigarette Believed Possible Cause Of Fatal Fire

The theory that a lighted cigarette dropped on a bed caused a three-alarm fire at the Grand Hotel, 606 F Street Northwest, was advanced yesterday by District Fire Marshal Calvin Lauber.

Lauber said the blaze early yesterday could have resulted from the cigarette of a lodger who was burned to death. He said the fire started in the man's sixth floor room but he had not definitely determined the cause.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald witheld a death certificate until the dead man has been identified definitely. The victim is believed to be a one-legged lodger from Los Angeles, whose handwriting on the hotel ledger was illegible.

The fire, which started shortly before 12:30 a. m., swept through the top floor. Half a dozen roomers were brought to safety down extension ladders.

U. S. Invasion Peril Discounted By Rotary Speaker

Possibility of invasion of the United States by foreign powers from either the east or west was discounted yesterday by Don Bate, lecturer and writer, at a luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club in the Willard Hotel.

In a humorous vein, the former newspaper correspondent ridiculed the world's dictators, but at the same time contended this country "is in the present war up to its ears."

He warned against this country's entering into any type of negotiation with foreign powers, "because Uncle Sam has always gotten the part of the fowl which goes over the fence last."

Bate urged, however, that we give "all-out" aid to Britain to prevent the aggressors from "bringing her to her knees."

He likened Japan's invasion of China to a "welterweight fighter boxing a haystack."

"There have been 1,000,000 Japanese in China for the past three years," he said, "but there are millions of Chinese who have yet to see a Japanese soldier in uniform."

Out of the Frying Pan—

Camp Lee, Va., March 26 (A.P.).—Private Carl Strobel, of Philadelphia, was asked, on his first day in camp, if he ever had done any firing.

"Why, yes," he told the inquiring officer and recalled his considerable experience on target ranges.

Add Horrors of Modern War

Blitzkrieg technic has not only revolutionized military tactics but is also upsetting tradition.

At Fort Meade, it was revealed yesterday that the swagger stick, once a "must" item for cavalry officers, has virtually disappeared. None has been seen at camp.

The swagger stick is a short cane with a leather loop. It's fine for balky horses, but ineffective with tanks.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Uncle Sam may take over an apartment house and a large downtown hotel in order to supply space for expanding defense agencies. C. J. Guthridge, space control chief, revealed that negotiations were already underway with the owners of several hotels and apartment houses. The Federal Government also is after the District Building at Thirteenth and E Streets. "Desperate" is the word Guthridge used to describe the space situation. The Office of Production Management already has filled the new Social Security Building and is crying for additional space. OPM plans to more than double its staff between now and June if space can be found to house the employes.

Meantime, the Budget Bureau is quietly making a study of the Federal agencies that can operate outside of Washington as efficiently as they do here. With the critical need for space in Washington, it's a distinct possibility that the bureau will recommend to the President that one or more agencies be moved to the field, lock, stock and barrel.

Whatever move is made to make space available will take several months. Proposed temporary buildings in Arlington County wouldn't be available for five months and it'll take from two to three months, Guthridge estimates, to make over an apartment house or hotel into an office building. It's planned to move the War Department out of the Social Security and Railroad Retirement buildings into the temporary structures to make room for OPM and other defense agencies.

Henry Jarrett has been appointed chief of Agriculture's press service . . . Ed Lloyd, former Commerce official, is here trying to arrange air passage to Lisbon . . . Charles Malcolmson and Lemuel Schofield, Justice officials, left yesterday to attend the Bridges hearing in San Francisco . . . Quartermaster General's Office in the War Department is working some of its clerks up to six hours overtime daily. On two nights each week the clerks are compelled to work from 7 to 11.

Hugh Fulton will be named general counsel to the Truman committee that will investigate defense contracts. He's a young lawyer in the New York district attorney's office. He'll report for duty within a few days . . . Quartermaster General E. B. Gregory estimates the Army death rate for the 1942 fiscal year will be 5 per 1,000 men. The average rate is twice as high.

Agriculture will have to reduce drastically its number of employes on flood control work after July 1. The appropriation is carried in the War Department civil functions appropriation bill that was reported yesterday in the House. E. J. Utz, flood control officer, told the Appropriations Committee that its 965 employes would have to be reduced to 481.

This is good news for those persons who have been separated involuntarily from the Government service since June 30, 1939, and who failed to follow the correct procedure to get their names on the replacement list. The Civil Service Commission will give these persons another chance if they file applications with the commission before May 1. After that date, the commission warns, the rules will be strictly adhered to. The commission relaxed its rules after many complaints had been received from persons who said they failed to apply because they didn't know either of the list's existence or the rules governing it.

Soldiers' Home operates a prosperous farm. Its governor, Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Coleman, told the House Appropriations Committee that its chickens laid 1,170,000 eggs, an average of 3,200 a day, and its cows gave 137,616 gallons of milk. The milk cost 29 cents a gallon to produce . . . Manly Fleischmann, young Buffalo lawyer, will take a legal job in OFM at the personal request of General Counsel John L. O'Brien.

Alley Dwelling Authority has opened a new housing project near the Navy Yard. Brookland Citizens Ask Tax Revisions

General revision of the District's tax structure was recommended last night by the Brookland Citizens Association, with a four-point program of tax reform.

A sales tax was favored "if the extra revenue is necessary," with food and medicine exempted. Modification of the local income tax laws was asked to include all residents of the city instead of the present "domiciled" provision.

Increases in real estate taxes were "unconditionally" opposed and the association recommended consideration by District officials of some increase in public utility taxes, naming gas, transportation and electric power concerns.

The citizens also went on record as supporting the Overton-Hunter plan for increased Federal appropriations to the District and as opposing the new Municipal Assembly on the grounds of it being "unnecessary."

Marvin M. McLean presided at the meeting, held at St. Anthony Hall, Twelfth and Monroe Streets Northeast.

Theta Delts Told Of College Men's Responsibilities

The college man must assume responsibilities in the future he never was called upon to assume in the past, a college president and a United States Representative told a banquet celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the Washington Graduate Association of Theta Delta Chi national fraternity.

Dr. Robert E. Doherty, president of Carnegie Institute of Technology, told more than 75 fraternity members that college graduates will be called on more and more often in the future to solve the social problems responsible for the present world conflict.

Representative Frank H. Buck (Democrat), of California, told undergraduate members that serious conditions in this country had not yet reached the critical stage but would soon do so. Against this day, he said, college men must "keep their eyes open and their minds alert."

Spring's Here; 55 Arrested For Walking on Grass

Spring IS really here!

Park police yesterday started on their annual spring drive to keep folks from shortcutting across park grass and arrested 55 violators. Fifty-three forfeited $2 collateral; two elected to try the judge and paid $1 each in police court.

A light rain is due tonight or tomorrow morning following cloudy skies and moderate temperatures. The temperature yesterday rose from 32—freezing—to 53 by evening.

U. S. Offered Use Of 50 Military Schools

Use of 50 leading military schools and colleges scattered over the country will be formally offered to the War Department for summer officer training courses at 2:30 p. m. today in Gen. George Marshall's office, it was announced last night at the closing session of the Association of Military Colleges and Schools of the U. S. convention

New officers elected at the final session in the Mayflower Hotel yesterday were: President, Col. J. M. Sellers, of the Wentworth Military Academy in Missouri; vice president, Col. H. L. Armstrong, of the Castle Heights Military Academy in Tennessee, and secretary-treasurer, Col. W. E. Gregory, of Culver Military Academy in Indiana.

'Regular Customers' Hold Up Drug Store

Regular customers are good for business, but not the kind that made their third visit in three months to the Foxhall Drug Store, 1611 Foxhall Road Northwest, and left with 12 cartons of cigarettes, $42 and a ring.

These two customers have a habit of carrying guns and thrusting them into the face of Ralph S. Kiefer, 49, of Arlington, pharmacist, and then cleaning out the cash register and the cigarette case. Last night, too, they took $3 from Kiefer and his ring.

Kiefer was held up and robbed at the store of $15 last week, and $25 in January. He thinks it's the same customers.

The thugs showed up on the other end of the city several hours later and took $200 from the Skyland Liquor Store, 2449 Good Hope Road Southeast. Alfred E. Hurwitz, 39, proprietor, was the victim.

Harmony Reigns as Glee Clubs Meet

By Ray C. B. Brown

Men's Club of Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church presents a joint concert by the Glee Clubs of George Washington University and University of Maryland on Wednesday night in Memorial Continental Hall. Directors: Dr. Robert Howe Harmon and Harlan Randall.

It was not in the spirit of rivalry that the singing groups of two neighboring institutions of learning met last evening in Memorial Continental Hall, but for the purpose of sharing a program cooperatively between the men's and women's glee clubs of George Washington University and the University of Maryland. The organizations sang separately and in various combinations, and the only reference to a divided allegiance was in an exchange of alma mater songs between the men's clubs. Dr. Robert Howe Harmon and Harlan Randall had an amicable arrangement of the directing duties, and there were no dissonances in the intercollegiate harmony.

BROWN

Freshness of voices and enthusiasm in singing have always been pleasurable characteristics of college glee clubs, and they were in evidence on this occasion. But there was an added element of enjoyment for those auditors who can remember what glee club singing was like 40 years ago. That element was the discipline in attack and dynamics, the unanimity in phrasing and the musical feeling in performance.

The combined men's glee clubs opened the concert with a "Prayer of Thanksgiving," and two songs that are campus favorites throughout the land, Parks' "Pale in the Amber West" and Bruno Huhn's setting of Henley's "Invictus." The Maryland women came next with Oley Speaks' "Sylvia" and vocal adaptations of a bourree by Bach and a Hungarian dance by Brahms.

Anticipating their appearance with the National Symphony Orchestra next week, the George Washington mixed chorus began their group with two songs by Sibelius, "Onward, Ye Peoples" and "Dear Land of Home," which were followed by "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and Christiansen's "Beautiful Savior."

The Maryland men were heard in an "Ave Maria" by Jakob Arcadelt, "Deep River" and Thayer's "Song of Prince Rupert's Men." The women's club from George Washington offered "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes," a lullaby by Mozart and Dougall's "The Bridge Builder." To close the program the combined singers from both universities sang Bortnyanski's "Lo, a Voice to Heaven Sounding" and the national anthem.

Domicile Tax Again to BePut Up to House

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

The House will be asked again to consider amendments to the District income-tax law to eliminate the troublesome "domicile" basis for taxation, Representative Hunter (Democrat), Ohio, said last night.

Disclosing that he had asked Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech to make a study of amendments attached to the bill on the House floor a fortnight ago, Hunter said:

"The recent decision of the Court of Appeals exempting Federal workers who claim domicile elsewhere makes further Congressional action essential if the income-tax law is to be equitable."

At the same time, Hunter, who is chairman of the fiscal affairs subcommittee of the House District Committee, predicted that the Overton-Hunter formula for increasing the Federal payment to the District will be reported to the full committee following another hearing tomorrow.

Bills May Be Combined

"I am confident that a majority of the subcommittee will vote to report the measure," he said.

Hunter said that he has no objection to the simultaneous approval of the Dirksen bill authorizing an evaluation of the United States property in the National Capital.

There were indications that the two measures may be combined although a decision of the subcommittee will await the testimony tomorrow of Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, on his proposal.

Once the Overton formula has cleared the subcommittee, Hunter believes that it will be reported to the House by a majority of the full committee. The measure passed the Senate this week by unanimous vote.

Concessions Expected

The fiscal affairs subcommittee may yield on some of the amendments attached to the Randolph bill on the House floor in order to win support for the measure that took a terrific drubbing on March 3 before it was withdrawn.

One of the concessions expected to be made is to relieve Maryland and Virginia residents who work in Washington of the necessity of filing District returns.

The most troublesome amendment attached was offered by Representative Poage (Democrat), of Texas, a former member of the committee.

Its purpose was to exempt all legal non-residents from payment of the District levy regardless of whether they pay a State income tax.

Sales Tax Advocated

Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, a member of Hunter's subcommittee, yesterday reiterated his advocacy of a sales tax for the District in lieu of amendment of the income tax act.

He suggested that no attempt be made to change the local tax structure this year, but that a sales tax law be sought next session. The House, he predicted, would not accept the income tax amendments asked by the Commissioners.

McGehee, who has been ill, is leaving the city for a few days and probably will not be present when a subcommittee vote is taken on the Overton-Hunter formula.

Church Federation Will Use Part of Budget to Aid Selects

Increase in the annual Washington Federation of Churches' budget from $15,800 to $25,000 will be partially used to promote social, recreational and religious programs for Selective Service men, it was learned yesterday.

According to Dr. William R. Barnhart, new executive secretary of the federation, the increase also is being asked for employment of a full-time religious education worker and a specialist on religion and health as hospital worker.

The campaign will begin Monday, following observance of Federation Sunday in the 162 churches affiliated with the federation. Drive workers held a rally last night at First Congregational Church, where Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, was principal speaker.

Discussing the churches' responsibility toward selectees, Dr. Barnhart told The Post yesterday that the federation hopes to use its facilities as a clearing house for the work of chaplains and local churches in the camps. Many requests for laymen to conduct special programs in camps are reaching churches, he said. The federation may employ a secretary to devote full time to the clearing-house work, he pointed out.

Dr. Barnhart said the federation urgently needs a worker in weekday religious education. Such education would embrace daily vacation Bible schools, counseling in problems of religion and work at home.

A hospital worker with experience in hospital chaplaincy would be able to train volunteer hospital workers, serve as liaison officer between ministers and hospitals, and perform other services, he said.

While last year's Federation budget was $20,000, the Washington Council of Churchwomen's allotment of $4,200 was included in that amount. The council is holding a separate drive this year. It also will begin on Monday.

Recreation Board Plan Is Argued

Experts Differ Over Proposal At Hearing Before School Committee

The Board of Education's legislative committee, considering a proposed bill to set up a District Recreation Board, yesterday heard two speakers strongly advocate a unified city-wide plan, while a statement from a former member of the Board of Education protested against the proposal.

The committee took no action, but decided to meet again at 11 a. m. Monday to continue consideration of the controversial measure before making its report to the full Board of Education.

Under the proposed bill a nine-member board of officials and citizens would supplant the present joint committee composed of the three District Commissioners and three Board of Education members.

Weaver Pangborn, field representative, National Recreation Association, said that a recreation board such as the one proposed has gone into successful operation in numerous large cities such as San Francisco, Cincinnati, Detroit and recently in Baltimore. He stated that the trend is toward unified administration of city-wide recreation.

Start in January

Thomas Settle, secretary and legal adviser, National Capital Park and Planning Commission, said, "We hope to get the legislation passed at this session" of Congress and hope to "get it going in January."

Charles D. Drayton, chairman of the Board of Education committee, read a statement from Henry I. Quinn, former board member, contending against creation of a separate recreation board. He said the increase in recent years in community-center items indicated that the recreation program was not sacrificed when under the Board of Education. He also spoke of the board's supervision of recreation from the standpoint of the school child.

"He's talking about the children," Settle said. "We're talking about a comprehensive program, not only for 90,000 children, but for some 700,000 citizens."

Millions of dollars have been spent for recreational areas, and "our commission feels that there is some obligation that these areas be used to best advantage," he added.

Settle said he approached the question as a "citizen taxpayer." In other localities where he had been in touch with such a situation, he said, "I dislike every recreation setup under a school board."

The "genius" of the proposed bill, Settle said, was that "you would have representatives of various groups and interested citizens sitting around a table, and out of the plan will grow fine cooperation."

Outlines Setup

In the draft of the bill which Settle advocated yesterday, the recreation board would be composed of one member from the Board of Commissioners, one from the Board of Education, one from the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission, the superintendent of National Capital Parks and five citizens appointed by the Commissioners.

This differed in two points from the setup in a version of the bill which Drayton put before the committee for purposes of discussion at a recent meeting. In the latter version the superintendent of National Capital Parks was omitted, and the number of citizen members was enlarged to six.

Elwood Seal, former corporation counsel, who was asked by Drayton to comment on the proposal, said that at the time the reorganization bill was drafted, it was agreed by the Commissioners to write into it a provision whereby "recreation would be turned over to the school board." He said he was not attempting to say what the present Commissioners think, but that "personally nothing has happened to make me change my mind."

Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, Board of Education member, pointed out that, under the bill, the board would not relinquish any of its control over the schools' physical education program during school hours.

Pangborn said there "is nothing in the legislation that school authorities need to fear." He said he could answer "yes" to the question: "Are the interests of the public schools sufficiently safeguarded so they can carry on their main job?"

"Use-Value" Survey

Surveys have been launched in Northwest and Southwest Washington to determine the "use-value" of recreational facilities, it was announced yesterday at a meeting of the Community Chest budget committee.

The object is to learn "the extent to which residents of these areas take advantage of what is t hand" and "how adequate our existing recreational and community services are," said Col. W. O. Tufts, committee chairman.

Raymond Mulligan, who recently completed such a survey in New York's Bowery, will study recreational habits and needs in the Southwest. He has joined the staff of Juanita Kaufman Nye Council House, Chest-supported agency.

The survey in the Northwest will be conducted by Charles Day, who has been added to the staff of Georgetown Children's House. He comes from Cleveland, where he was engaged in group work with boys at the Detention Home.

Pastor Assails False Loyalty To Christianity

"Spurious discipleship" and "counterfeit loyalty" of many so-called Christians were criticized yesterday by Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo in a lunch hour Lenten address at Epiphany Episcopal Church.

He told more than 1,200 worshipers, including many downtown business, professional and governmental workers, that one of the greatest barriers to the work of the Kingdom of God is composed of persons who follow Christ in name only.

Dr. Sizoo is pastor of St. Nicholas' Collegiate Church, New York City, and former minister of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church here. He will speak today and tomorrow at 12 noon, and at union Lenten rites of Chevy Chase churches at 8 p. m. today at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, Chevy Chase Circle.

Dr. Ze Barney Phillips, host pastor, and Senate chaplain, presided and offered prayer at yesterday's service.

Christian's need of setting good example in their daily lives was stressed yesterday by the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, assistant pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church, in a talk at the Southeast churches' union Lenten program at the Penn Theater.

"Too often, as Christians, we have acted timidly, unforgivingly, selfish and angry, when we are meant to be a courageous people, willing to follow Christ anywhere," he said.

Dr. Howard S. Wilkinson, pastor of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, will be today's speaker at these union services. Dr. Peter Marshall, of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will preach tomorrow at 12 noon. The services are broadcast over WINX.

The Rev. William Nesbit Vincent, pastor of Eastern Presbyterian Church, addressed the weekly Washington Federation of Churches' Lenten service yesterday afternoon at Epiphany Church.

The congregation of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church tonight at 6:45 will stage its final weekly Lenten fellowship supper. A religious dramatic presentation of the life of a group of Jesus' friends will be given afterward by Mrs. Howard Beresford.

"Suffering as a Sacrament" will be the Rev. Daniel W. Justice's topic at the Trinity Methodist Lenten service at 8 p. m. today at Fifth Street and Seward Square Southeast.

Woman, Ill, Ends Life With Bullet

Mrs. Maxine Sieker, 35, was reported to have shot herself to death yesterday at her home, 2436 North Potomac Street, Arlington, Va.

John H. Sieker found his wife's body in her bedroom, a bullet in her forehead and a pistol in her hand, when he came home about 5:30 p. m.

Dr. W. C. Welburn, county coroner, issued a certificate of suicide and said he was informed Mrs. Sieker had been in ill health.

Valtin's Voice Sneaks 'Out Of the Night' to Fool Gestapo

Shh. Don't tell anybody, but Jan Valtin spoke on the radio last night from Washington.

The voice of the mysterious author of "Out of the Night" stole out of the night from a secret broadcast here at 10:15 p. m. and into the loudspeakers of a Nation-wide radio audience.

The Post is at liberty to reveal that much, but the word is mum as to other details. Because Valtin is afraid that the Gestapo, or even maybe the OGPU, might get him if they find out where he is.

Valtin thinks the German and Russian secret police have been looking for him ever since he told all about them in his book, so only two or three of the most trusted employes of Station WOL were informed of arrangements for his broadcast.

First intimation that he was going to speak came from Leonard Lyons' Broadway column, which appears in this paper. Then the New York newspaper PM picked it up and came out yesterday afternoon with a description of the hocus pocus attending the arrangements.

When Lyons' column appeared, WOL officials abandoned plans to have Walter Compton, star announcer, interview Valtin. Don Faust, another announcer, was told he was to be available at 10:15, but he wasn't informed for what program.

When the broadcast finally started, Frank Blair, still another announcer, did the interviewing.

After PM hit the streets here, WOL was deluged with calls from telephoners who wanted to know if Valtin would speak and, if so, from where.

But everybody at the station was ignorant, or feigned ignorance. All they knew, they said, was that the 10:15 spot was scheduled as "An Observer Speaks."

William B. Dolph, president of WOL, and Miss Madeline Ensign, program director, made themselves unavailable. Those who telephoned their homes were told they were out and their whereabouts and time of their expected return were unknown.

About 9 p. m. Announcer Robert Diehl, who apparently was in on the big secret, told studio attendants that the 10:15 program had been canceled on orders from New York.

Whereupon he departed, leaving Announcer Faust in charge. Until Valtin actually began broadcasting, Faust vowed he did not know what would go on the air at 10:15.

As for the broadcast itself, it was devoted almost entirely to contrasting conditions in the United States to those in Germany and other totalitarian countries. Announcer Blair told the audience that the program came from "somewhere in America."

Work on Hospital Plan for Capital Area Is Started

The Health Security Administration yesterday began the task of preparing a "master hospital plan" for Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Ross Garrett, administrator, issued a statement that the wide survey, authorized Tuesday night at a meeting of hospital heads and representatives, will be launched immediately.

The study will go into existing hospitalization and clinic facilities, present and future needs and the question of improving, expanding and coordinating hospital facilities.

Within "a week or ten days" after the master plan has been submitted to heads of the various voluntary hospitals, they will meet again to act upon it, Garrett declared.

Seats for 'Theatre' Available at National; 'Blossom Time' Fills in an Easter Chink; This, That and the Other About the Theater

OUR HEAD IS BOWED in humility, a little chagrin and practically everything else but shame. Mr. Edmund Plohn, the Beau Brummelian Chesterfield—he smokes Camels—presiding over the destinies of the National Theater, upbraids me with unction and some umbrage for having given the impression in a recent headline over these vagrant remarks that "Theatre," in which Cornelia Otis Skinner will premiere in the National on April 14, under the managerial guidance of John Golden, is strictly a "subscription play."

BELL

It comes to light that "Theatre" is not strictly a subscription play to which the "members" of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society are bound by the more or less ironclad terms of their season commitments. It is merely a play which will be circularized among the Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscribers as an "added attraction" to which they may purchase tickets at the subscribers' reduced rates, if they wish. Usually under such circumstances, the subscribers' response has been something less than 100 per cent.

All of which adds up to the important fact that when tickets for "Theatre" go on sale at the box-office, the house will not be sold out and seats in virtually all sections of the theater will be available to the general public. I wouldn't be too sure about the second balcony, but there is a fine gambler's chance that something will be there to be had for both balcony and orchestra.

I entertain a feeble and probably futile hope that now, at last, the matter is reasonably clear.

And that reminds me, as some things sometimes do. That yawning hiatus of two vacant weeks at the National has been reduced by half. While there is nothing in view for next week on the E Street boards, there is an attraction for the week of April 7. It will be the Shuberts' production of "Blossom Time." I have a vague recollection of having heard of this piece as a possible candidate for popular success. I trust my optimistic anticipations are not ill-founded. Getting right down to what someone has pointedly designated brass tacks, "Blossom Time" is so provenly "sure fire" that it will continue through two extra performances, matinee and night, on Easter Sunday, April 13. It was orginally to have opened on Sunday, April 6, but the Sabbath performances were switched to the opposite end of the week just in time to salvage this paragraph—such as it is.

It was as far back as March 18—that was the day all those notes were due—when we received that letter from Rodney Bush, of Twentieth Century-Fox, holding out the nebulous promise of a folio of recordings of Carmen Miranda's songs for "That Night in Rio," in which she is costarred with Don Ameche and Alice Faye. Well, they arrived yesterday and include "Chica Chica Boom Chic"—whatever that may mean—"Cae Cae" and "I Yi Yi Yi Yi," which seems almost enough "Yi's." But Mr. Bush seriously underestimated the importance of his gift. Upon examination, I find that "Alo, Alo," "Bambale" and "Arca de Noe" also are included on the platters. Now if somebody will just chip in with a super-de luxe, fluid drive, electric phonograph perhaps we will be able to find out what all of this presumably melodious business is all about.

That Greek War Relief Benefit, scheduled for Loew's Capitol on Saturday night, is taking on increasingly impressive proportions. Paul Draper, appearing with his aunt, Ruth Draper, at the National this week, who has run us practically out of words to extol the artistry he brings to "tap dancing;" Paul Haakon, another of the best dancers of his era, and other last-minute additions will add to the luster of the bill, which, as you already know, will include the combined stage shows of the Earle and Capitol Theaters. There is a bare possibility—how bare I would not know at the moment—that Maureen O'Sullivan, the cinema star visiting Washington this week, will be able to elongate her stay here sufficiently to be among those present on the stage. Whether or no, the benefit bill will be an entertainment bargain that should be eagerly gobbled by Washington amusement seekers at a dollar a throw, as the saying unfortunately is.

If you must know—and there is no reason why you shouldn't—Madeleine Carroll and Judy Garland, both now in New York, have been invited to come down for the Greek Benefit performance. Whether they will or not, is something else again. But it is, at least, a radiant hope.

The copy of the Theatre Arts Monthly Lynn Farnol had the boss men send me arrived in due course and contains a sapient article by Lynn under the title of "Hollywood Build-Up." If you never have been a press agent, as Lynn is and I was, you might not get more than the half of it. Half of it is enough to make a very elegant piece of short reading.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 26 (INS).—Robert Donat, who hasn't made an American picture since his Academy winning "Goodbye Mr. Chips," has been excused from the British army long enough to do a movie for Darryl Zanuck in London. The story, "Pitt the Younger," by Lord Castleross, just cried for Donat and when Sidney Gilliat, who wrote the script of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," prepared the treatment he wrote it with Donat in mind. But there were countless obstacles which fortunately Robert Kane, former foreign head of Twentieth, was able to overcome. He was also able to sign Carol Reed, the director of the unforgettable "Night Train."

PARSONS

"Pitt, the Younger" deals with the son of William Pitt, who, with his father was a famous British statesman and it's a movie that will delight the heart of the English.

The physical quality of Veronica Lake, so evident in "I Wanted Wings" is to be emphasized in "China Pass," Jacques Thery's story bought for her today by Buddy De Sylva. Veronica, discovered by Arthur Hornblow, who saw her in one of the local stock companies, will play a tough American girl stranded in China. Although she does not come under the heading of glamour, in some ways she is like Jean Harlow but I don't think she is as pretty. She does, however, portray very well indeed the hard, rather common little girl that Jean characterized so well. Veronica, of course, needs experience but so did Jean after her first appearance in "Hell's Angels."

Offers galore have been made to Gracie Fields to appear in the movies, but always she has refused because of her work for Great Britain. But now Lester Cowan has hopes that Gracie will play one of the top roles in "Brighton Rock," the popular book by Graham Greene. Ida Lupino, who has signed to do "Ladies in Retirement" for Lester and Gilbert Miller, is one of the best examples I know of how one picture can elevate a player to better and bigger figures. Ida was paid $10,000 for playing in "They Drive by Night"—and glad to get it. If she does "Brighton Rock" she will receive $75,000 and Lester has every hope she will make the picture with her husband, Louis Hayward.

Both Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt were decidedly movie conscious when they were in Hollywood. I talked with each one of them and they never before had been so eager to make a picture and to spend a few months in California, where they have so many friends. I heard today, through the grapevine route, that Warners have opened negotiations with them for the rights to their play, "There Shall Be No Night" in which, of course, they would be starred. If the deal goes through practically all the members of their company, including Richard Whorf, will play in the picture, so I suppose you would call this a package deal, since everything but the director goes with it.

Snapshops of Hollywood collected at random: Barbara Hutton at the "I Wanted Wings" preview with Connie Moore. She made Hymie Fink happy by posing for a picture; Ginger Rogers and Garson Kanin dining tete-a-tete and talking so earnestly; John Ford's pretty debutante daughter, Barbara, stepping out with Herbert Gunn, Twentieth Century-Fox good looker; Myrna Loy and Arthur Hornblow leaving Friday for a weekend in the country. The Harold Brooks are the house guests of the Douglas Fairbanks, jrs. Mrs. Jules Stein is having a small dinner for them Friday night and Lady Mendl has asked a few people in to meet them tomorrow night; Christy Walsh given a rousing welcome home by many friends Sunday night at the Jonathan Club. Some of our movie actors would do well to take a few lessons in diction from Lawyer Joseph Scott who has the gift of oratory. Thrilling to bear Connie Mack, baseball veteran, tell of the old days; Eddie Lowe at the Rhum-Boogie with Sally Allen, who once was escorted hither and yon by John Barrymore; and Gwynn and Red Christie, of Universal, keeping the telephone busy; Roy Rogers has 50 homing pigeons at his ranch and I can promise him he will have twice that many in a year; Blanche Ring, famous stage actress, reaches here to visit Mrs. Thomas Meighan and resume acquaintance with her many friends; wonder what that inscription is that George Raft put in Betty Grable's cigarette case?

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Tough on Hose

Eleanor Powell's famed long, black dancing stockings were being used at the rate of five pairs a day during filming of the "I'd Rather Dance" sequence in "Lady Be Good." The actress was performing the fastest dance step she had ever done on the screen, and because the hose are extremely sheer, they wear out rapidly.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, March 26.

Bob Montgomery has always been one of the most enterprising actors in Hollywood He's civic minded—head of the British War Relief—into all sort of humanitarian projects.

HOPPER

He was the only Hollywood actor asked to be on Mrs. Read's Forum program which emanates yearly from New York City on world events. His subject was Hollywood. He was one of the backers of the play, "The Animal Kingdom," which ran a year on Broadway. Also backed "The Corn is Green" for Ethel Barrymore. Didn't drive an ambulance in France for publicity, did "Rage in Heaven" for Metro which turned out a success despite everything—everybody.

Joan Crawford was still chuckling over the mistake made by Columnist John Chapman who had been visit-her on the set of "A Woman's Face." He wrote a story and said, "At last I saw Joan Crawford with that horrible scar on her face which she wears in the picture." "And," said Joan, "he came the day after I had removed the scar."

The night club dame in red and white satin in "Lady Be Good" is so beautiful (in fact I haven't seen one in America to compare with it) that Writer John McClain came up to me on the set and said, "I'm here every day waiting for the announcement that Metro will open it and let in paying customers." Well, you paying customers will see it on the screen and you'll have Ann Sothern, Eleanor Powell, Virginia O'Brien, John Carroll, Bob Young, and Phil Silvers, who was discovered in burlesque but became famous in "Yokel Boy." He does a routine with Virginia O'Brien, giving her a singing lesson that will kill you. It seems Sothern sings a song, then Carroll takes a swing at it, after which Virginia comes along in her crazy rhythm, which is a burlesque on the former two. It's after that Silvers shows her how to sing.

They tell the story on Norma Shearer that when she was in Sun Valley she phoned her maid and asked her to contact someone coming up to Sun Valley, because she'd like some things from home. The maid finally located a producer's wife, and these are the things Norma wanted: her massage table and the four blankets that went with it.

Orson Welles returns to Hollywood to remake scenes for "Citizen Kane," via the Yucatan jungles of Mexica for a look-see as to backgrounds for Dolores de Rio and his next picture. . . . Richard Kline, who has reconditioned so many of our stars, broke his leg while skiing. The studio ban is now on against skiing—it used to be planes and horses.

Nice to know Louis B. Mayer and Bennie Thau have taken up the petion on Veda Ann Borg after her performance in the Kildare picture. The kid can trouper. She's the little girl who spent two years in a hospital after an automobile accident. The plastic surgeon made her face beautiful as ever. People seem to forget that Carole Lombard had just such an accident years ago and it was after that her star started rising.

Baby Sandy continues to rewrite Mother Goose for the phonograph series Universal is doing for her mother. Her latest is: "Little Jack Horner sat in a corner, eating his Christmas pie. He stuck in his thumb, pulled out a plum, and said: 'How in the world did it get in there, anyhow?' "

Laugh-Getting Films Hit New Studio High

Maybe Hollywood is just trying to take the minds of theater-goers off their respective troubles, but it appears that comedy reigns supreme in the screen capital today, and they're making comedians out of practically everybody.

Of course, such things as "Love Thy Neighbor," which costarred Jack Benny and Fred Allen, was a natural comedy. But there are other developments.

There is, for example, the current "Aldrich Family" series, being made by Paramount, which has Jackie Cooper in the role of Henry. Ordinarily, he is a nice young American boy, but in this routine, the latest of which is "The Aldrich Family in Life With Henry," he leads a talented cast through a series of hilarious incidents.

Band-leader Orrin Tucker and Singer Bonnie Baker, who made "Oh, Johnnie" famous, get together as a comedy duo in "You're the One." Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray have a brace of comedies coming up. One is "One Night in Lisbon."

All Stress Comedy

Henry Fonda, who hasn't had a suit of modern clothes in something like five straight pictures, gets together with Barbara Stanwyck to provide plenty of laughs in "The Lady Eve." There's romance, to be sure, but it is liberally sprinkled with incidents and excitements that can't but help tickle the funnybone.

Susanna Foster was hired because she could hit B flat above High C, which is really something in music circles, but they've made a comedienne ont of rough-and-tumble Suzy in "The Hard-Boiled Canary," a title that aptly fits the character Susanna plays.

Joel McCrea and Ellen Drew get serious in spots in "Reaching for the Sun"—a tentative title by the way—but with the help of Eddie Bracken, plucked from the stage, they furnish plenty of laughs.

Romantic-voiced Bing Crosby equals Bob Hope in getting the giggles as they battle over Dorothy Lamour in "Road to Zanzibar," and so it goes right down the line.

Joan's Next

Columbia

As uncertain as his graduation is Andy Hardy's plot to tear away from F Street for the neighborhood houses. "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary" is his most recent adventure and instead of packing off to leave room for something else this morning on the Columbia screen, Mickey Rooney and company have settled down for another week.

"Private Secretary" finds A. Hardy at the head of his graduating class; he's got all the honorable jobs, but ambition lets him down at the last moment and he flunks an all-important final. Aunt Millie herself is the teacher who flunks him and things are at a low ebb indeed for the Carvel whiz. Double trouble for Andy comes through the character of the title, a neat, demure little miss who becomes his secretary in an effort to speed graduation plans. And the girl next door, Polly Benedict, doesn't like that one whit.

Newcomer to the familiar Mickey Rooney-Lewis Stone-Fay Holden-Sara Haden-Ann Rutherford gathering is Kathryn Grayson, the lass of the title. A sweet voice, ingratiating manner and definite promise are hers, making her one of the year's most promising debutantes. Ian Hunter, too, appears as father to this new heroine and Gene Reynolds is cast as her brother.

'A Girl, a Guy and Gob' Premiere Set

The Hawaii Theater in Honolulu will be the setting for the world premiere of Harold Lloyd's first RKO Radio production, "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob."

Directed by Richard Wallace, the comedy romance with a deep sea setting stars Lucille Ball, George Murphy and Edmond O'Brien, supported by a large cast of well-known players.

BERKSHEIMER'S THEATERS

New York, March 26.

FRANK CARSON, the editor who died last week, was a newspaperman whose exploits have become legendary. Some of them were recorded in the Hecht-MacArthur play, "The Front Page;" others were hushed, such as this one, which involved a technical violation of the law . . .

LYONS

On the day Col. Lindbergh released to the press the photograph of his kidnaped son he specified that Carson's newspaper was not to receive any copies, because one of its reporters had pursued the Lindbergh's on their honeymoon . . . Carson, however, dispatched reporters to the various railroad mail cars. Each reporter carried a photo of a child, taken from the files of the beautiful baby contest, and explained to the mail clerk that he was from the Associated Press and that the news service had mailed the wrong picture. One mail clerk was convinced and permitted the picture swap. And so Carson had his front-page photo of the Lindbergh baby that night, while an innocent New England editor published the photo of the son of a Queens fireman.

W. G. VAN SCHMUS, who operates the Radio City Music Hall, has $150,000 of Rockefeller money available to a producer who can make a musical out of Eugene O'Neill's "The Fountain," with music by Robert Stoltz and score by Deems Taylor. The only condition is that the show be presented at the Center Theater . . . John Gunther, who broadcasts for N. B. C. on Friday nights at 8, is scheduled to make two appearances for "Information Please" next month. His broadcasts on those nights will be made from a studio adjoining the room from which the quiz program emanates, so that he can walk next door and participate on schedule

MARC BLITZSTEIN, who won a Guggenheim Fellowship last year, applied for a second one this year—and won it yesterday. Last week the composer received a letter from the Guggenheim office, opened it excitedly, and a quick glance revealed that it was a mimeographed notice . . . He set it down before him, and stared at it, with fixed, unseeing eyes, for five hours. Then he read it, and first realized that it was not a rejection form. It merely informed: "Your first Guggenheim award is not taxable."

THE CURRENT MYSTERY in radio concerns a Mutual broadcast Jan Valtin is supposed to make this week for the Department of Immigration . . . Alexander Woollcott lost $75 in a backstage theft during his performance in Hershey, Pa. . . . Abe Feder the lighting expert, whose work included the lighting for "I'd Rather Be Right," "Dr. Faustus" and the ballets, now has been given one of the most cherished and profitable assignments of the year. He's going to Hollywood for the Doughnut Corporation of America, which is opening a new shop there, and light the windows so that the doughnuts will look more luscious.

THREE YEARS AGO a film scout, flying to Hollywood, became interested in the pilot of the plane—a flyer named LaVerne Brown. the pilot was given a screen test and was signed to a film contract. His name was changed to John Trent . . . He appeared in a few pictures and his career was considered a promising one . . . Trent's last role was in the aviation film, "I Wanted Wings," which was made at Randolph and Kelly Fields, in Texas . . . There, back at his old flying stand, Trent made his decision—that wings, and not camera roles, were what he really wanted. And so he's quit the movies. And, as LaVerne Brown, he's a pilot again—flying bombers to Canada.

THE MAN who was the French naval attache in Washington, before his country surrendered, was removed from that post because he was unable to "cooperate" with the new Vichy regime. He purchased Morgan's Red Coach Tavern, in Closter, N. J., and now is a happy innkeeper . . . The Victoria Hotel management is upset by the presence of eight mysterious guests from Thailand, who have been too insistent about getting private telephones installed there . . . Erik Rolf, the singer and radio actor, always resisted the pleadings of his wife, Ruth Warwick, that they live in Hollywood. They wagered—that if their new baby would be a boy, they'd remain in New York; a girl, they go to Hollywood. On May 1 Erik Rolf will leave for Hollywood with Ruth Warwick and their daughter.

PAUL GREEN used to tell this story to the young aspiring playwrights in his class at Chapel Hill: Many years ago, when he brought a play to Arthur Hopkins, the producer told him he wasn't interested, because Green had failed to realize the importance of two cigarettes, where the New York drama was concerned . . . "You have no intermissions in your play," Hopkins told him. "A New York audience must have those two cigarettes—one during the first-act intermission and the other during the second-act intermission. No two cigarettes—no hit!" . . . Last night the Paul Green-Richard Wright dramatization of "Native Son" had its premiere at the St. James. It drew a rave notice from Brooks Atkinson, and four stars from Burns Mantle—the first four-star play in more than two years . . . "Native Son" has no intermissions.

Pidgeon Draws Bead on Hitler In His Most Recent Film Play

Hollywood, March 26 (U.P.).—One of the rip-snortingest movies we know about, concerning a sporting Britisher who hunts down Adolf Hitler because he's tired of shooting bear, is in the works today.

Our huntsman, as played by Walter Pidgeon, doesn't really shoot, he just draws the bead on Der Fuehrer to prove he can. About then the Gestapo captures him, nearly beats him to death, and leaves him for dead. He crawls away, escapes to England, the German agents discover he's still alive—and the rest of the film is devoted to his efforts to evade them.

The picture is called "Manhunt." as based on the novel, "Rogue Male," by Geoffrey Household, who is a British agent working in Europe today. His book was a startler, all right, but no great shakes as a library endeavor. Twentieth Century-Fox bought it and handed it to Dudley Nichols to rewrite. Nichols did a beautiful job and we can testify that here is one time a movie script is better than the original book.

All hands were in the German forest on Stage 14, where the Gestapo agents, headed by Maj. Quive (George Sanders) Smith, were engrossed in throwing the all-but-dead Pidgeon over the side of a cliff. They'd given him a working over and he was not a pretty sight to see. There was a burn from a red-hot saber on one cheek, and gashes on the other. He felt fine, he said, but he certainly did look sick.

When he went over the cliff, you felt sorry for him, even there on the stage, and knowing full well that he landed kerplunk on a mattress out of camera range.

Director Fritz Lang, who was in the German army during the first World War and who made some of U. F. A.'s greatest hits when the Berlin movie center rivaled that of Hollywood, was taking extra pains with this one. His idea wasn't to make a propaganda picture, but to do a show of high adventure; extra high, because there's probably no more dangerous sport imaginable than stalking Adolf Hitler with a .22 rifle.

Most of the lesser actors, like the doctor, the assistant Gestapo agents, and the like, are of German descent.

"And when they mutter something of no particular importance," Lang said, "I have them do their muttering in German. It sounds much more foreboding, somehow, than English."

Pidgeon was borrowed from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play the English sportsman. Sanders, who is a genuine Englishman, plays the German heavy; he looks more like a Nazi than a Nazi. You sort of get to like him as the story goes along; he's just a guy with a tough job, doing it the best he knows how. When Pidgeon finally escapes to England, with the Gestapo in hot pursuit, a London street walker befriends him and eventually dies for her trouble.

She is being played by Joan Bennett, which seems odd casting indeed, though the studio is deglamourizing her with frizzled hair, garish clothes and a cockney accent, which she said she had been studying assiduously for a month, with a genuine cockney for coach. Maybe this will be her chance to appear on the screen not as the ever beautiful Joan Bennett, but as the character she's supposed to be playing.

The actor who plays Hitler has not yet been chosen.

Miss Grable Contemplates Legs As Aid and Hindrance of Art

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, March 26 (U.P.).—We oughtn't to be writing this story today. We ought to be doing it with a camera. The subject is legs—Betty Grable's legs—and what good is the printed word?

All we can say is that they're fine-looking. Almost any rotogravure section for the last five years will confirm this statement. Only trouble with legs like hers is that you never can tell when they'll cease being an asset and turn into a liability.

At least that's what Miss G. said. She was wearing a white skirt that extended from the floor to her waistline. Above that was 6 pink inches of Miss Grable. Above that was about 3 inches of silver-colored ribbon and above that was more pink. You couldn't see the famous legs at all, but is was an eye-opening costume just the same. Miss Grable said she understood the censors were casting a suspicious eye her way. Everybody else was just casting an eye.

She was playing in "Miami," her third big-time role at Twentieth Century-Fox since she escaped the curse her legs brought in her.

Three Years of It

For three long years she was Paramount's leg girl. She did most of her work in a bathing suit for the publicity department. She was so busy posing for newspaper and magazine pictures that she had little chance to appear in movies.

"I thought they really were going to capitalize on me when they cast me in a picture called 'Million Dollar Legs,'" she said. "You can imagine my surprise when it turned out the story was about college athletes. Anyhow my legs got lots of publicity.

"This had its good points. When I'd go on personal appearances, the theaters always would be well-filled with people who'd been interested in my legs. I always noticed lots of sailors in the audiences. So that was profitable.

"But pretty soon, there I was with nothing but a couple of legs. Nobody was interested in anything else. Maybe I was an actress. I never got to act. Perhaps I could dance. Nobody gave me the chance. All I had was legs and I must say I was getting pretty sick of the situation."

Had a Piece of Luck

Paramount failed to take up her option. That was lucky for Miss Grable. She went into her first Broadway show, "DuBarry Was a Lady." It was a hit. So was she. She proved she could do something more than pose her legs. She returned to Hollywood a big-time star.

Her first picture under the new deal was "They Met in Argentina." The Fox press agents wanted to whoop up her legs in the old-fashioned way.

"But I wouldn't let them," Miss Grable said. "I figured that if I became Legs Grable again I'd be ruined."

All art on Miss Grable was as modest as if she'd just been graduated from Sunday school. Her second picture was "Tin Pin Alley." This showed a great deal of her epidermis, legs included. There were no untoward reactions. The customers, in fact, seemed appreciative.

"Legs got me my start in pictures," she reported. "Then they nearly stopped my career. I think I'm in the clear now, but I've still got to be careful."

Top Spot With Theatergoers

The girls still seem to have "it"—or whatever the new catchword is—as far as Hollywood writers today are concerned.

Hardly a yarn is turned out for screen production without a triangle of sorts to provide the plot, and almost every triangle finds a brace of brawny heroes pursuing a single girl.

In some cases—"Philadelphia Story," for example—the poor heroine has to dodge the frantic attention of a trio of males before making up her mind. But on the whole, it's the two-men-and-a-girl formula that seems to keep audiences contented.

It doesn't happen only in ordinary romantic pictures, either. The three-sided affairs pop up in everything. Current example is "The Mad Doctor," which has Basil Rathbone as a lightly psychopathic psycho-analyst and John Howard as a reporter. There are thrills and chills a-plenty, but Ellen Drew provides the lovely motif for both.

A lively, hilarious musical, such as "Road to Zanzibar," is cast in the same mould. Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour go tramping over Africa to the tune of tomtoms and more modern tempos, with both Bing and Bob in pursuit of the maiden's heart.

Blonde, startling Veronica Lake provides romantic interludes for both Ray Milland and William Holden in the new breath-taking story of the training of Army flyers "I Wanted Wings."

On the more normal side, without extraneous fuss and frills, but still with the triangle setup, are such popular offerings as "Virginia" which has Fred MacMurray and newcomer Stirling Hayden vying for the hand of Madeleine Carroll; "New York Town," in which MacMurray and Robert Preston compete for Mary Martin; and "Skylark," just starting under the guidance of Producer-director Mark Sandrich, which brings Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland and Brian Aherne into a merry whirl.

Experts in such things point out that the combination of a woman and two men is much more popular than a man and two women, as far as audiences are concerned. Only rarely is a story filmed in which a brace of beauteous creatures battle over a man. The fans just don't seem to want it that way.

Paul Draper—This young man is known by many critics as the best dancer of the day. Here, Draper limbers up in his dressing room. It is a ritual with him and a prerequisite for every performance and rehearsal

A Modern Nijinsky . . .

By John D. Morris
Post Staff Writer

Paul Draper was late for the interview, which meant he was also late for the ritual that he goes through before his nightly performances at the National Theater. The interview and the ritual were to take place simultaneously.

He came into the dressing room like a college boy late to get dressed for a date and to look at him you would think that was what he was and that was why he was in a hurry.

His interviewer thought for a moment that it was all a mistake. This kid couldn't be the artist known by so many critics as the best dancer of his day—a veritable 1941 Nijinsky.

"Yes, I'm Draper," said Draper, shrugging off his coat and vest, flipping his tie from his neck and, with a couple of wiggles, landing most of the rest of his apparel on a couple of chairs.

"Make yourself comfortable and we can chat while I get ready."

Draper, he says, loves music—good music. It is one explanation of how he came to be "a classical tap dancer," if that's an acceptable definition of the art which is his exclusive creation.

Draper had performed, he said, in musicals and a movie as a more or less orthodox dancer to popular tunes, and he didn't seem to be getting anywhere. Then he took to attending ballet classes in New York because he thought they would give him regular workouts.

Suddenly it came to him: Good music, ballet, tap dancing; he saw the kind of dancing he wanted to do. That was five years ago.

But when asked if he was a tap dancer, Draper seemed irked.

"If a guy just paints a good picture that excites people, you would think that would be enough," he said. "But, no, they've got to have a name for it. You've got to name his school, his form and a thousand other things which actually remove us from the accomplishment of our aims."

He didn't seem so much like a red-headed college boy, now. But then, he broke into a smile and said:

"Why the hell I'm going on like that, I don't know. Don't mind me. Yes, you might say I am a tap dancer. You only are what you are made by other people. If I had to name it anything, I'd just call it tap dancing."

After Draper finished applying his makeup, came one of the strangest of rituals. He calls it "limbering up," and it's a prerequisite for every performance and every rehearsal.

He first grasped one clenched hand with the other and squeezed, and the knuckles cracked loudly. He repeated the procedure with hands reversed.

Then, with a quick jerk, he sent his clasped hands between his legs, back up again and from side to side. Several minutes of this, and he arranged his feet in a straight line, heels together. With grotesque, quick movements he squatted, rose, squatted, rose, for some time.

When he stopped that, he began to kick at the air with lightning speed, first with one foot and then the other. Whereupon, he hopped around a bit, his body at various angles.

These antics went on for 13 minutes or so. (You might have said the audience out front was missing the best part of the show.)

All the while, Draper carried on a rapid, if breathless, conversation.

But he had to stop when the talk turned to what he does for recreation. He reads books—history books—and he became quite earnest in telling about it.

He used to play pool with his former pianist, Dave Le Winter, but when Le Winter left him, he took up books—"history of medicine, history of religion, history of science, history of philosophy, history of history," he said. "I don't play pool much now — worse luck. Or rather, good luck. Dave used to make a couple of hundred extra dollars a year from our pool playing."

Right now he's reading "Social Relations of Science," a heavy-looking volume by J. G. Crowther which he produced, along with several other books which for some reason were kept in the dressing room.

He gave a scholarly dissertation on the book, summarizing: "It's a summation of changing relations between science and our social concepts."

As he dressed, Draper talked more about himself. He said he and his Aunt Ruth Draper, the noted monologuist with whom he travels, "get along very well." And he said he'd learn to play a musical instrument, preferably a harpsichord, and "have more girls," if he had more time.

But his mind wasn't on the conversation.

"I've got my mind pretty well on my opening number," he explained. "Still I can talk to you."

Paul Draper will dance Saturday night at a midnight performance at the Capitol Theater for the benefit of Greek war relief.

Artillery seems to be procession
The trees shuffled in collision
And many collisions staff
To make a dwelling room.
It is then comes in the Poet.
Then where the Poet comes in
He hears let the orchestra begin
And let a lot get done.
Much less at no loss expense.

A First Draft—This is a first draft of Robert Frost's poem, "Tendencies Cancel"

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

The work of Robert Frost, the poet who finds universal truth in the spare details of his New England countryside, preceded him to the Congressional Library yesterday.

Today at 8:45 p. m. Frost will discuss the role of a poet in a democracy, in Coolidge Auditorium of the Library. He is one of a group of major American poets who are discussing the theme once a month at the Library. The series is sponsored by the Congressional Library and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer.

Most of the truth about Frost lies in the manuscripts, photographs and letters which fill six cases on the main floor of the Library. The collection was loaned by the poet's daughter, Miss Lesley Frost, a director of the King-Smith School here.

Frost celebrated his sixty-sixth birthday yesterday. White-haired and weather-rugged now, his face has softened with the passage of time, the photographs reveal. The man who stood on a rocky New England hillside 25 years ago, passes on a Washington street in the sunlight with two young children.

Here are photographs of the country Frost has described to all the world: A hay rake, a farmhouse, a field of timothy.

Original manuscripts and published versions of the verse he wrote in this country are on display. His "Mending Walls" and a photograph of a stone wall cutting a meadow reveal that the verse is built as rigorously as the wall itself:

"Something there is that doesn't love a wall,
"That sends the frozen-ground-swell under it,
"And spills the upper boulders in the sun;
"And makes gaps even two can pass abreast."

Robert Frost lived in simple homes to earn a simple living. They are here: Franconia, N. H.: South Shaftsbury, Vt.; Amherst and Ann Arbor and Breadloaf Mountain, above Middlebury, Vt., where he taught.

There is evidence of the share of popular acclaim that came with time to him who thrice won the Pulitzer Prize for poetry: Photographs, interviews, translations of his writings into French, German, Russian and Hebrew.

The Frost coat of arms is in the collection: A sprinkling of stars; a grey squirrel with a hazel branch. There is the program of his graduation exercises at Lawrence (Mass.) High School on July 1, 1892. Frost was valedictorian of his class. Elinor M. White, his future wife, had marks as high, but was deprived of the valedictory post because she was a girl, the visitor learns.

There are a few gaps in the story of Frost's life. There is nothing on his sojourn in England in 1912-13, when he first received critical attention. His correspondence seems scant.

But the heart of Robert Frost is here. It is in the upright pen strokes of his manuscripts. It is in a picture of him pruning back a tree.

Nats Take 5-Game Winning Streak to Miami

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 26.—Once upon a time a big league manager had three first basemen and didn't know what to do about it; and if you think we're kidding, gaze upon the perplexed figure of Bucky Harris. First base on the Washington club is no mere problem with Harris, it's driving him nuts.

POVICH

Harris' problem is posed by the presence of George Archie, Jimmy Vernon and Jack Sanford, all of whom are in the Nats camp with first baseman's mitts. None of them is a standout, and, obviously, the Nats can't carry all three. Whom to play and whom to release is the question that threatens to wreck Harris' peace of mind, and he'd appreciate the proper hunch.

In his dreams, no doubt, Harris has come up with the happy solution—one first baseman named Archie Vernon Sanford. He would be the best first baseman in the lot. But, unhappily, he doesn't exist except in the composite and untransferable talents of three different persons—the red-headed Archie, the black-haired Vernon and the brown-thatched giant Sanford.

That would be the ideal first baseman for the Nats—the man who could field like Archie, who could hit right-handed pitching like Vernon and left-handed pitching like Sanford. Those are, respectively, their chief assets and within a few weeks now Harris will be compelled to make a choice. Whom'll he choose?

Enigma No. 1 thus far has been Archie. He came to the Nats from Seattle bearing the award as the most valuable player in the Pacific Coast League, plus a .324 batting average. But the Nats' bosses frowned on his batting stroke from the outset, and were convinced that he wouldn't do when, in the early exhibition games, he couldn't buy a hit. Just when the Nats were about to give up on him, however, he lined a home run over the left field wall at St. Petersburg, and started to field sensationally. But when he lapsed into another batting slump, Harris did not deem his fielding sufficient cause to retain him. The other day, however, Archie suddenly aroused himself again. He hit the Nats' longest home run of the spring season, at Ocala, a vicious line drive that bounced against the center-field fence 500 feet away.

The Nats aren't yet satisfied that Archie can hit, though. There was nothing wrong with the vigor of that Ocala home run swing, but the fellow from the Coast wasn't exactly facing brilliant pitching. The Nats already had made four hits and scored four runs against the pitching of Archie's victim earlier in the inning. Bucky Harris won't call Archie even a pretty good hitter until he hits better pitching. The fellow's average with Seattle last season, like every other Coast League batting average, is more or less under suspicion. Coast league pitching isn't much, as is attested by the fact that Gene DeSautels, weak-hitting Cleveland catcher, once hit more than .300 on the Coast.

Jimmy Vernon is not the fancy Dan around first base that is Archie, but he is no shoemaker, either, and the margin of Archie's fielding superiority may be infinitesmal. Harris likes Vernon on the suspicion that he can hit big league pitching, and hard. The lad from Marcus Hook, Pa., led the International League with an average up in the clouds most of last season before going into a mysterious slump that fetched him down to .286.

But Harris likes Vernon's potential power, and he thinks none the less of him for having been told by Steve O'Neill the other day in Lakeland that Vernon "can't miss." O'Neill, now of the Tigers, managed the Buffalo club in the International League last season, and is convinced that Vernon would be one of the better first basemen in the majors.

Sanford is the green-pea of the trio. His experience extends no farther back than Charlotte in the Piedmont League. In that league he had much the same experience as Vernon in the International. For more than half the season he batted .330 to lead the league and then encountered an unaccountable slump, to finish up with .319. But Harris still likes his possibilities, and if he can hit big league pitching he has the sort of power the Nats need.

Sanford may develop as the best first baseman of the lot. At least that is the suspicion that is held here. Right now, he's not an atrocious fielder. With his height, he stretches farther for a throw to the bag than any first baseman in the league. In his brief trial with the Nats last year his fielding was very adequate, sometimes brilliant.

What will be the upshot of it all? Well, here's what Harris was saying today: "Vernon in the regular line-up would give us four left-handed hitters—men hitting second, fourth, fifth and sixth. That's too many southpaw hitters to carry, especially when they mean your power. We'd see every southpaw pitcher in the league. They'd save 'em for us. If we keep Vernon, we've got to keep another first baseman for left-handed pitching. If we don't keep Vernon, I doubt if we'll get enough hitting from Archie or Sanford or both. It looks like Vernon is a cinch to stay with us. That means the man to go will be Archie or Sanford. Take your choice."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 26.—A year ago at this time the St. Louis Cardinals were the choice to win the National League title and supplant the defending champion Reds. These predictions were based on the club's strong finish in 1939, when it barely missed the pennant, as well as the club's excellent batting power.

CONSIDINE

This year nobody is expecting much from the Gas House kids but the Gas House kids. And brother, they're expecting plenty. There is more optimism around their St. Petersburg camp than you'll find any other place in Florida. From last June they won and lost the same number of games as the Reds. Before June they scraped the bottom. In the early part of the season Curt Davis and Joe Medwick slumped terribly, Jimmy Brown got a broken nose and Ray Blades came to his end as a manager. But they made up a tremendous lot of ground for the last three months to come from seventh to third place. If they were a racehorse the handicappers would now be picking them as a good sleeper to win the National League Stakes this season.

We've never run into a team which thought as little about getting rid of a player of Ducky Medwick's proportions as the Cardinals. They've lost him and Curt Davis, who won 22 for them in 1939, and Mickey Owen, yet the boys think they have a better chance than ever, and they may be talking sense—though personally we'd give the sounder Reds and Dodgers an edge over them.

The club has the best batting punch in the league, headed, of course, by Johnny Mize, who drove in 137 runs last year to lead both leagues in home runs with 43. He is backed up in the power department by the only .300 hitting outfield in the league—Ernie Koy, Terry Moore and Enos Slaughter, though Koy is being given a baleful battle for his position by Harry Walker, brother of Dixie. Walker hit .313 at Columbus last season and has been going great at St. Pete. He is one of the many fine young players on Bill Southworth's squad this season. The skill and enthusiasm of these young blokes has made for much of the fervor about the place, and it can't be false enthusiasm if we are to believe the veteran Al Lang, St. Pete's ancient and spindly good will man, who says the Cards have more good young ball players this year than any other club Lang ever saw.

One of these youths probably will start as the Cards' regular catcher. He is Walker Cooper, 6 feet 3, 200-pounder who hit .302 for Columbus last season. He is a younger brother of Mort Cooper, Cardinal pitcher. Another kid who has Branch Rickey rubbing his hands, in pleasant expectation of getting a pennant out of him (or selling him to Larry MacPhail, which saves all the trouble of winning a pennant and brings in more dough) is Johnny Grodzicki, big right-handed pitcher who went nine full innings recently to whip the Yankees. Grodzicki was quite Zicki all last season at Rochester and won only three games, but he looks like a fine prospect this year.

Unlike some Cardinal rookies, who, to quote Medwick, "come to camp with a timetable to Rochester in their pockets." Grodzicki says he is here to stay—and the bosses believe he'll more than make up for the inevitable sloughing off of such veterans as Lon Warneke and Workhorse Clyde Shoun.

The Cards have had an infield problem for five or six years, and it is still apparent. Mize and Brown, at first and second, are of course all set. Marty Marion was the Cards' regular shortstop last season, but it looks as if he is being muscled out of a job by Frank Crespi, another Cardinal wonder boy from Rochester, where he hit .301. Third base is equally wide open, with Steve Mesner, the former Club who hit .341 for San Diego last season without hitting a home run, and Eddie Lake, who didn't do as well with Sacramento but hit harder when he hit, fighting to close it.

In all, the Cards should be a good, rough, cocky team, and if all those kids come through—a big if—they can win the pennant. Southworth still has 20 pitchers in camp, and when the time comes to cast off 11 of them it seems likely that he will gamble on younger men more than the average manager would. The Cardinal farm system has given Southworth a raft of promising young men, and he seems to be of the mind to start using them before Uncle Sam does.

National AAU Rassles Attract Record Entry

Annual Catch-as-Catch-Can Tourney Opens Tomorrow in New York; 150 to Participate

By the Associated Press

New York, March 26.—The largest entry list in the history of the National A. A. U. wrestling championships was completed today for the annual catch-as-catch-can competition Friday and Saturday on the mats of the local West Side Y. M. C. A.

More than 150 individual grapplers, representing some 50 A. A. U., Y. M. C. A. and club groups, as well as colleges from coast to coast, have notified officials they'll be on hand for the fun. This entry total is some 20 more than the previous high for the nationals, which was chalked up when 132 turned out for the combined A. A. U. and Olympic tryouts in 1936.

Three of last year's champions—118-pound Casey Fredericks of Purdue, 158-pound Ed Blake of the Baltimore "Y" and the lightheavyweight Henry Wittenberg of the home club "Y"—have announced definitely they'll be on hand. Three others—Harold (Germ) Leeman, the flyweight "pee-wee" from Osage (Iowa) High School; welterweight Eddie Viskocil, also from Osage, and Ray Cheney of Iowa Falls—have informed officials they expect to be on deck for the fireworks, but no final word has been heard from them, tournament headquarters said today.

Uncle Sam prevents the other three 1940 champions from defending their crowns. Dale Hanson, 123-pounder from Minneapolis; Ed Valorz, 191-pounder from Chicago, and Wilbur Nead, Iowa City's heavyweight headman, all are Army officers now.

Several of the standouts from last week's national collegiate championships have come over to see what they can do in this "big league." Among them are the much-talked-of Michigan State twins, Merl and Burl Jennings, who took the 121 and 128 pound titles in the collegiate grappling. Several members of Oklahoma A. and M.'s title-winning team also are entered.

Chicago Beats New York In Glove Bouts

By International News Service

Chicago, March 26.—Chicago defeated New York tonight, 10 matches to 6, in the intercity amateur Golden Gloves bouts before a crowd of 19,305 that jammed the Chicago Stadium.

Tonight marked eight victories for Chicago since the series started in 1928. New York has won three matches and the other three were tied.

Al Tribuani, of Wilmington, Del., a New York team fighter, scored the only knockout of the evening when he flattened Robert Satterfield, of Chicago, in the first round after he had his 160-pound division opponent on the canvas on two earlier occasions. All bouts were scheduled for three rounds.

Wilbur Shaw Lost Flying Over Rough Country

By the Associated Press

El Paso, Tex., March 26.—Wilbur Shaw, famous racing driver, radioed the CAA office at 7:21 p. m. (Central Standard time) tonight that he was lost over rough country on a flight from Dallas and had only a 15-minute supply of gasoline.

No further word had been received from him at 9:40 p. m.

The radio message said he would attempt to land although he had sighted no satisfactory spot and that he would report his position as soon as he reached a telephone.

A CAA monitoring station in Tuscon calculated from Shaw's report of sighting a railroad, a small dam and a town of about 1,000 population that he was either in the vicinity of Elephant Butte Dam or was flying in Mexico along the route of the Juarez-Chihuahua City Railroad. Shaw was enroute to El Paso.

Jimmy Braddock, Red Burman Fight to Draw

By the Associated Press

Charlotte, N. C., March 26.—James J. Braddock, the former world's heavyweight champion, and Clarence (Red) Burman, of New York, fought to a 5-round draw here tonight.

Braddock, weighing in at 210 pounds and a trifle bulgy around the waist, danced around rather lively but failed to flash once the punch that carried him to the title. Neither boxer flailed away during the go despite the pleadings of the crowd. Burman weighed 192.

In an 8-round middleweight preliminary, Louis Casa, of Fort Bragg and New York, won a decision over Spike Smith, of Burlington, N. C.

Miss Hicks Golf Winner At Pinehurst

By the Associated Press

Pinehurst, N. C., March 26.—Favorites advanced today in the second round of the thirty-ninth annual North and South women's golf tournament.

The medalist, Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif., eliminated Dorothy Gardner, of Steubensville, Ohio, 3 and 2, and tomorrow will meet Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, Ga., 4 and 3 winner over Jeanne Cline, 17-year-old Bloomington (Ill.) High School girl whose dead-eye shooting in the tournament had attracted keen gallery interest.

Seventeen-year-old Louise Suggs of Lithia Springs, Ga., valedictorian of her high school class who also has been somewhat a sensation thus far in the tournament, went down in a 7 and 6 defeat before the onslaughts of the veteran, Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, of Chapel Hill.

In the other second round match, Mrs. William Hockenjos, jr., of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., defeated Mrs. S. R. Morgan of Gulph Mills, Pa., 4 and 2.

Rice Declared Not Fit Physically for Army

Two-Mile Track Star Has Triple Hernia, Physicians State

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., March 26.—Just four days after running the fastest 2 miles in history, Joseph Gregory Rice, stocky former Notre Dame athlete, who has left a trail of broken distance records in his wake, was declared physically unfit today for military service.

Selective Service Board physicians who examined Rice said he had a triple hernia.

Rice, a Missoula, Mont., boy, who was developed into the Nation's greatest middle-distance runner by John P. Nicholson, the late Notre Dame track coach, has been bothered by the ailment since he was a child and wears a support in all of his races.

He underwent an operation in his freshman year at Notre Dame but reinjured himself a few months later. The ailment became aggravated at the Seton Hall games this winter when he ran a 9:14 two miles on a flat board track which had been waxed.

Rice's 8:51.1 performance in the 2-mile run at the Chicago relays last Saturday stands as the fastest time ever made for that distance. It also was his nineteenth straight indoor victory in the last two years.

Rice also holds the indoor record for 2½, 2¾ and 3 miles. His time of 13:51 for 3 miles was made February 22 in New York. The curly-haired Montanan has run the 3-mile event only three times and he's broken the world's record each time.

Rice's rise to track fame has been a steady climb. He concentrated on the mile with fair success after enrolling at Notre Dame, but Nicholson, believing Rice too short legged for the mile, prevailed upon him to try the longer distances at the end of his sophomore year.

On his first time out, Rice finished seventh in the central intercollegiate meet and, on his next race, won the national collegiate championship in 9:14.2. Since then he has spent most of his time on the longer distances, but he ran a mile in 4:13.5 in the Indiana A. A. U. meet here early this month.

Winner of the Sullivan award in 1940 and voted by New York track writers as the outstanding athlete of the current indoor season, Rice is employed as an accountant by the Indiana & Michigan Electric Co.

Taut muscles make it difficult for him to get into shape and his idea of being out of training is to jog 5 or 6 miles only two or three times weekly.

Fenske Is Inducted Into Selective Service

Milwaukee, March 26 (AP).—Charles (Chuck) Fenske, the track star, entered the Army today. He volunteered for service and was inducted with a group of draftees from surburban West Allis, his home.

Phillies and Giants Hosts in Three-Game Series; Rain Halts Kansas City Game

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., March 26.—The Nats are taking their five-game winning streak south tomorrow. They will journey to Miami for a battle with the Phillies on Friday and two games with the Giants over the week-end. At the outset, at least, it will be a pleasure jaunt with most of the pleasure due to recent successes.

Manager Bucky Harris and Owner Clark Griffith are smirking at their critics at this time. Their ball club is mildly sensational. What was supposed to be a punchless Washington team has been slugging out an average of ten runs a game for the past five engagements. And whenever a regular pitcher has been in the box, the pitching has been entirely satisfactory.

Dutch Leonard, who was to have faced the Kansas City team today and then remain in Orlando during the five-day trip to Miami, will now accompany the team. The Kansas City game was rained out, and Leonard will go to the mound Friday against the Phillies in company with Jim Dean.

Regulars to Work

From here in, Bucky Harris is not trifling much with his rookie pitching talent. He is eager to give the regulars, Leonard, Chase, Hudson and Masterson, frequent pitching jobs in the remaining exhibition games in the hope of bringing them to peak condition for the start of the season.

Aside from that group and Danny MacFayden, the only other pitchers who will see much action will be Dean and Arnold Anderson. They are the only pair among the rookies whom Harris now believes will be helpful to the club. But Joe Beck, the little right-hander from Orlando, will be given at least one more trial. He earned it by a scoreless five-inning performance against Chattanooga last week.

On Friday, against the Phils, Harris will launch Experiment No. 3 in an attempt to solve the first base problem he is facing. He will give Mickey Vernon a shot at the regular job. Vernon, who reported late, has been in camp only two weeks and thus far has not been seen in action.

Vernon Hitting Hard

After a disappointing sort of experience with Archie playing first base in the early exhibition games, Harris started big Jack Sanford at the post. The Nats' manager got a long look at Sanford whose hitting was not too startling. Now it's Vernon's turn to show his talents.

In the batting practices, Vernon has been powdering the ball, and deep down Harris believes that he is the best first baseman in the lot. Archie will make the trip to Miami, but Vernon will do most of the work at first base.

One of the reasons for Harris' brighter outlook on the 1941 season is embodied in the figure of Jimmy Bloodworth, Around second base, Bloodworth by some magic has been showing an ability to cover more territory on ground balls, and his arm always has been a source of delight to the Nats' boss. At bat, the stocky little fellow has been

College Ring Coaches to Do Bit for Defense

By the Associated Press

State College, Pa., March 26.—Members of the National Collegiate Boxing Coaches Association, meeting here in conjunction with the N. C. A. A. championship tournament, will be asked tomorrow to do their bit for the national defense program.

Leo F. Houck, Penn State's veteran coach and president of the association, said tonight he will sponsor a resolution under which the coaches would offer their services to the Government in planning and sponsoring boxing programs in the Nation's Army service camps.

The coaches' collegiate pupils will demonstrate the results of their training in the three-day tournament opening tomorrow afternoon (2:30 p. m. E. S. T.). More than 75 sectional champions and outstanding boxers will compete for individual titles in eight weight divisions.

Representing 22 institutions, the entry list includes four defending champions and one former champion. The 1940 title winners back are Ted Kara, Idaho 120-pounder; Johnny Joca, Florida lightweight; Laune Erickson, Idaho 165-pounder, and Nick Lee, Wisconsin heavyweight. Lee will seek the 175-pound title this year while a teammate, Gene Rankin, will seek to regain the 135-pound title he won in 1939 but did not defend last year.

Erickson and Joca face the stiffest competition. Others vying for the 165-pound title include last year's runners-up: Gerry Strang, second-place winner from Catholic University; Stanley Dilatush, of Washington State, third-place winner, and Freddy Logsden, of Southwestern Louisiana Institute, who took fourth place. Joca's rivals include Joey Church, of Miami, Fla., last year's runner-up, in addition to Rankin.

'Invalids' Favored in Asheville $5,000 Open Golf Play

Metz, Hogan Won Tourney While Sick

Metz, Nelson Snead All Complaining So Watch Out; Play Ends Sunday

By Bill Boni,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Asheville, N. C., March 26.—The $5,000 "Land of the Sky" Open Golf Tournament, a great place for a sick man in its previous two years, will get under its four-day way at the Biltmore Forest Country Club course tomorrow with at least three prominent candidates to uphold that precedent.

Dick Metz won the first tourney here two years ago while under treatment for the flu. Last march it was Ben Hogan, who was considerably below physical and golf course par in setting a new Asheville record of 273 for 72 holes.

This time the "invalids" are Metz again, just recovering from a sinus attack after having had flu earlier this winter; P. G. A. Champion Byron Nelson, who had an attack of what he feared was appendicitis on his way up here from his Greensboro victory; and Samuel Jackson Snead, the North-South champion.

Snead Practices Well

Snead, after hitting a score of iron shots off the practice tee that dropped all around his caddie like apples shaken from a tree, complained of a pain in his chest. But he couldn't have been feeling very sick, for he said, "If I keep hitting the irons that way, I'm likely to give some of the boys fits," and then started a final practice round with a whistling drive that almost carried to the green.

This year's tournament has drawn an impressive array of champions of all sorts. Of the domestic variety, besides Nelson, there are Open Titleholder Lawson Little, whose finish at Greensboro may make him tough to beat here, and Amateur Champion Dick Chapman, who was badly off his game in trailing "Skip" Alexander, former Duke star, by 15 shots for low amateur honors at Greensboro.

Three Outside Champs

To provide international flavor, there are Snead, who won the Canadian Open while on his honeymoon last year; Martin Pose, of Argentina, who, besides being a champion at home, holds (and probably will for some time to come) the French Open crown won in 1939, and Jim Ferrier, who won the last prewar Australian Open and Amateur titles and who will take on a pro job next month at Chicago.

Hogan, although beaten at Pinehurst and Greensboro, still ranks up with the favorites, who must include about a dozen men since no single one has been playing in any particular streak. In the last two tournaments Benny at least had the minor satisfaction of seeing his 1940 records stand up. His 273 here last year also is not likely to be bettered, since the boys will be playing summer rather than winter rules and the entire tournament will be played at Biltmore Forest. Last year it was over three courses, one the easy Asheville Country Club's.

There will be 18 holes each day, with the last round Sunday.

Howard Horses To Run in East

Los Angeles, March 26 (AP).—Porter's Cap, Charles S. Howard's Kentucky Derby candidate, will leave early next week for the East.

Accompanying the youngster will be Mioland, sensational 4-year-old; Hy Camp, Handy Justice and Painted Savage.

G. W. Baseball Team Opens With Buckeyes

Frank McGinnis will be George Washington's probable starting pitcher against Ohio State tomorrow as the Buckeyes open a two-day invasion of the District after a week's play in the South.

The opening game of the District's collegiate baseball season will be played on the Ellipse while the Buckeyes move to College Park on Saturday to meet Coach Burt Shipley's University of Maryland diamonders.

McGinnis will be relieved about the sixth inning—no sooner, Coach Ev Morris hopes—as he wants to give two or more of his mound prospects early workouts. The G. W. infield will include Roy McNell at first base, Bobby Gilham on second and Jim Fitzgerald on third. Shortstop and the catching posts have not been filled.

Ohio State's southern journey included a double victory over Randolph-Macon Tuesday and a 5-1 triumph over Richmond yesterday, while they meet the Spiders again today. Eight lettermen are back from the team that won 11 and lost 14 last year.

Semipro Baseball Team Desires Games

Glen Burnie's semipro nine is looking for games with District, nearby Maryland and Virginia semipro diamonders for the season. A member of the Baltimore Semipro League for the past several seasons, the Glen Burnie team was left without a schedule when the league failed to organize.

Johnny Goodman Injured as Car Skids, Overturns

GOODMAN

Goodman told physicians he lost control of his machine after suddenly coming upon two automobiles stalled on the icy highway. The golfer was en route from Wichita, Kans., to Denver.

Dr. N. M. Burnett said X-ray examination disclosed no serious injury and that Goodman, who won the National Open title in 1933 and the National Amateur championship in 1937, probably would be able to leave tomorrow.

Navy Opens Lacrosse Saturday

Annapolis, Md., March 26.—Only four veterans will be in the line-up of the Navy lacrosse team when it opens its campaign Saturday against Dartmouth.

Illness and two graduations in one year have taken more than 25 of the men from last year's stick squad. Coach "Dinty" Moore has been working all month to develop a team from players on last year's junior varsity and plebe teams.

Close attack and goal defense will be the strongest links of the Navy team that will take the field Saturday. Larry Green, who headed up the Midshipman attack last year, will be back at in-home with Dick Lazenby, star of last year's plebe team, at out-home.

Andrews on Club

Dick Creecy, veteran of last season, will be in the net again this year. He will receive strong backing from George Klauer and Art Emerson, who alternated at goal-tending for the plebes last year.

Midfield plans were upset by the illness of Capt. Spence Howard and Scroggie Wiley, veterans who were slated to carry the heaviest play. John Drew, Reserve Blanchard Randall and Gus Brady, of last year's plebe team, are now scheduled to start Saturday's game. They will be relieved by Bill Peach, Irad Oxley, Bill Montgomery and Bob Carter.

Weems in Line-up

Bee Weems, at point, is the only experienced player in Navy's close defense. Coaches have been at work to develop the desperately needed big stickmen, and Bob Andersen, from last year's plebes, will start at first defense, with Bill Rusch at cover point.

Coaches look to Joe Sliwka, Bob Day, Bob Norton, Bob Nye, Jim Unger, Swain and Barrett for support in the close defense.

Games this year will be played on Worden Field, which was used as the varsity field until three years ago.

Sioux City May Get Into League

Sioux City, Iowa, March 26 (AP).—Inclusion of Sioux City in a four or six-team Western Baseball League this year was discussed here today by a group of businessmen, but no decision was reached.

Sphas Beat Washington Bruins, 30-28

The Philadelphia Sphas, champions of the American Basketball League, were forced to unlimber their championship caliber in turning back the Washington Bruins, 30 to 28, before a crowd of 1,200 fans at Turner's Arena last night in a game that got a bit rough in the closing moments.

The Bruins were materially handicapped by the loss of Wilmeth Sidat-Singh, outstanding forward, who was ruled out of the game at the last minute because of contract difficulties. It seems that the Renaissance five still has a claim to his services and prevented him from appearing against the Philadelphians.

After trailing by a five-point margin in the early portion of the initial period, the Bruins came to life when Cooper, Sealey, Smith and Briscoe all hit the hoops to close the gap and bring the count to 14-13 with less than a minute of play remaining. It was then that Briscoe dropped in a two-pointer that gave the Washingtonians the only lead they held during the evening. This was short-lived, however, for Slim Weiner, the Spha center, matched it just as the whistle blew to give his club the lead, 15 to 15, as the half ended. Weiner, incidentally, was the big man of this period, accounting for a total of eight points, his only scoring in the game.

Tarzan Stars

Paced by Soupy Campbell, Tarzan Cooper and Percy Smith, the Bruins made a determined bid throughout the final session, but the Sphas met each charge with ammunition of their own and were able to keep out front, although they were extended all the way. Petey Rosenberg, chunky guard; Ivy Gothofer and Inky Lautman took the lead in the numerous counter attacks which the Sphas were forced to make to stave off the constantly battling Bears.

Big Tarzan Cooper, who played 40 minutes of outstanding defensive basketball and also tied with Weiner for top scoring honors, gained his final point via the foul route just 35 seconds before the gun.

In a preliminary game the Royal A. C. won the District colored independent championship sponsored by the Community Center, when they barely nosed out the Urams, 24 to 23, in a tilt that was tight all they way. The Royals got off to a slow start and were trailing, 7-4, at the quarter. However, they began to roll in the second stanza, paced by lanky Ed Washington, and caught the Urams to assume a 13-12 advantage at the midway mark. They were extended in the final two periods, but were able to maintain their lead, despite a field goal by Charlie Bundy in the last second of play.

Gray, Directors, shot a 406 set.

NORTHEAST TEMPLE

Pete Garbardini, Jimmie's Grill, and George Mullineax, Kavokos Grill, were the best pinmen in the Temple Minor meet at Northeast Temple, the first with high single of 153 and the latter with the best set of 397 which sparked his team to high total of 1,091 while the Jimmie's Grill boys took the top game after a 613 pinfall. Ventilating System Slated for Uline's

Contracts for installation of an elaborate ventilation system, consisting of giant fans, has been let by Raoul LeMat, manager of Uline's Ice Arena, Promoter Ray Alvis announced yesterday.

The big $700,000 ice cavern was so thick with smoke that it looked more like a London fog the night of the Billy Conn-Dan Hassett incident, but Alvis insists the new fans will remedy all that.

With the advance sale for the Baer-Galento brawl approaching the $12,000 mark, Alvis yesterday took off for New York to confer with Mike Jacobs on the possibility of bringing Joe Louis to Washington to fight the winner.

Galento is scheduled to report in Washington for a public workout a week from today, and Buddy will arrive a week from Saturday. Tickets for the fight are on sale at Uline Arena, and Alvis said the supply of $5 ringside seats are almost exhausted.

"I'm willing to believe, now, that Bloodworth was not in good health last season," said Harris. "He made no complaints at any time, but this spring he confided that he had been under the doctor's care. He says he is now fit, and he must he, because he's coming up with ground balls that he couldn't touch last season."

Another source of gratification to Harris is Roger Cramer's hitting. During his first few games, Cramer could not buy a hit and looked like anything except a fellow who was one of thethree men in the league last year to make more than 200 hits. However, Cramer was forgiven during his slump on the theory that he had reported late and his batting eye was rusty. In recent games he has been stinging the ball.

Chilean Meets Chilean as Ski Experts Arrive in Washington

By Joaquin Muirhead
Post Guest Writer

(Mr. Muirhead, a newspaperman from Santiago, Chile, is for several weeks a member of The Post staff.)

Since yesterday, another group of Chilean people is in Washington. They arrived here at 4:45 p. m. from Chicago. They have been in the United States two months and during this time they have competed in meets at various Eastern and Western resorts. All of them make up the Chilean ski team. This team was originally made up of seven men. One of them, Julio Zegers, broke both legs, and he is still at the North Conway, N. H., Memorial Hospital.

The rest of the team is formed of Eugenio Errazuriz, captain; Ignacio Errazuriz, Luis Mitrovich, Jaime Zegers, Enrique Zorrilla y Arturo Podesta, manager.

Many times, this kind of people can do a real job, because everybody has an interest in sports and games. For instance, some years ago many people of Europe and United States began to have an interest in Chile because they had the opportunity to see some of the most famous Chilean boxers. In the United States, Quintin Romero, Luis Vicentini, Tani Loayza, Aturo Godoy and Antonio Fernandez. Our "Fernandito") have made a big performance. American people remember still the Chilean tennis woman called Anita Lizana, who won the championship of Forest Hills some years ago. And now, North American people know a little more about Chile because they have heard of the Chileans who make up the ski team.

Anyway, the visit of the Chileans will serve to renew a friendly sports relation of several years standing.

Naturally, skiing is something very new for us. We cannot make any comparison with the North American people where 3,000,000 people ski. The captain, Eugenio Errazuriz, said yesterday that he is very satisfied with the results they have had. The Chilean ski team won second place in the Pan American Ski Championships. The first place belongs to Canada, and the third to the United States. He thinks that is a very good performance, especially for the Chilean team.

With the team arrived a Chilean woman, Mrs. Gloria Zorrilla, Enrique Zorrilla's wife. She is the only woman who made the trip with the Chilean team.

The Chilean Ambassador gave the members of the Chilean ski team a reception yesterday, from 6 to 7:30 p. m. at the Embassy, and today the president of the Ski Club of Washington will offer them a lunch at the National Press Club.

Baker Keeps 3 Badminton Championships

Joe Baker won his third consecutive District Closed Badminton Championship last night at Kensington Armory and shared in the men's doubles and mixed doubles for the fourth successive year as the tournament closed without a semblance of an upset.

Baker defeated Shep Holt, 15-4, 15-1, in the finals in a match in which the story is not altogether told by the score. Holt carried the champion in long rallies but seldom provided the winning punch.

Baker paired with Chevy Chase golfer Louis Mackall to defeat John Edwards and Mac Whitcomb in the men's doubles in three sets, while Polly Thompson was his winning partner in the mixed doubles, over Mackall and Charlotte Decker.

Miss Decker, ranked in the District and Middle Atlantic tennis rankings, blanked Polly Thompson in the first set of the women's singles and won the second, 11—6. The champion and Polly Thompson then took to the court together and defeated Frances Rowan, well known in golf and tennis circles, and Janet Wilson in women's doubles.

Former Colored Pugilist Surprised at Stage Success

By Jack Cuddy.
United Press Staff Writer

New York, March 26.—Canada Lee, the "Sepia Cinderella Man," is groggier today at finding himself the star of a Broadway play, than he ever was during some 250 battles in the ring.

Before this afternoon's matinee of the four-star drama "Native Son," this smooth-muscled Negro with the slightly cauliflowered ears and blinded right eye squirmed about on his dressing room chair in the St. James Theater.

"I'm completely bewildered," he said. "I don't know what to do about all this. I don't know what to say to people or how to act in public. I feel sort of punchy for the first time."

Lifted from pugilism's scrap heap by a talent that he scarcely understands, Canada Lee was acclaimed by the press, drama critics and the public.

The 34-year-old Lee admitted he liked this adulation, as he pasted up another telegram of congratulation on the nearly filled wall of his dressing room.

"It's sort of like I wanted it to be, only it isn't quite," he said. "I want to be welterweight champion of the world, and I would give my life's blood if all this praise was for me winning the title, instead of making a hit on the stage."

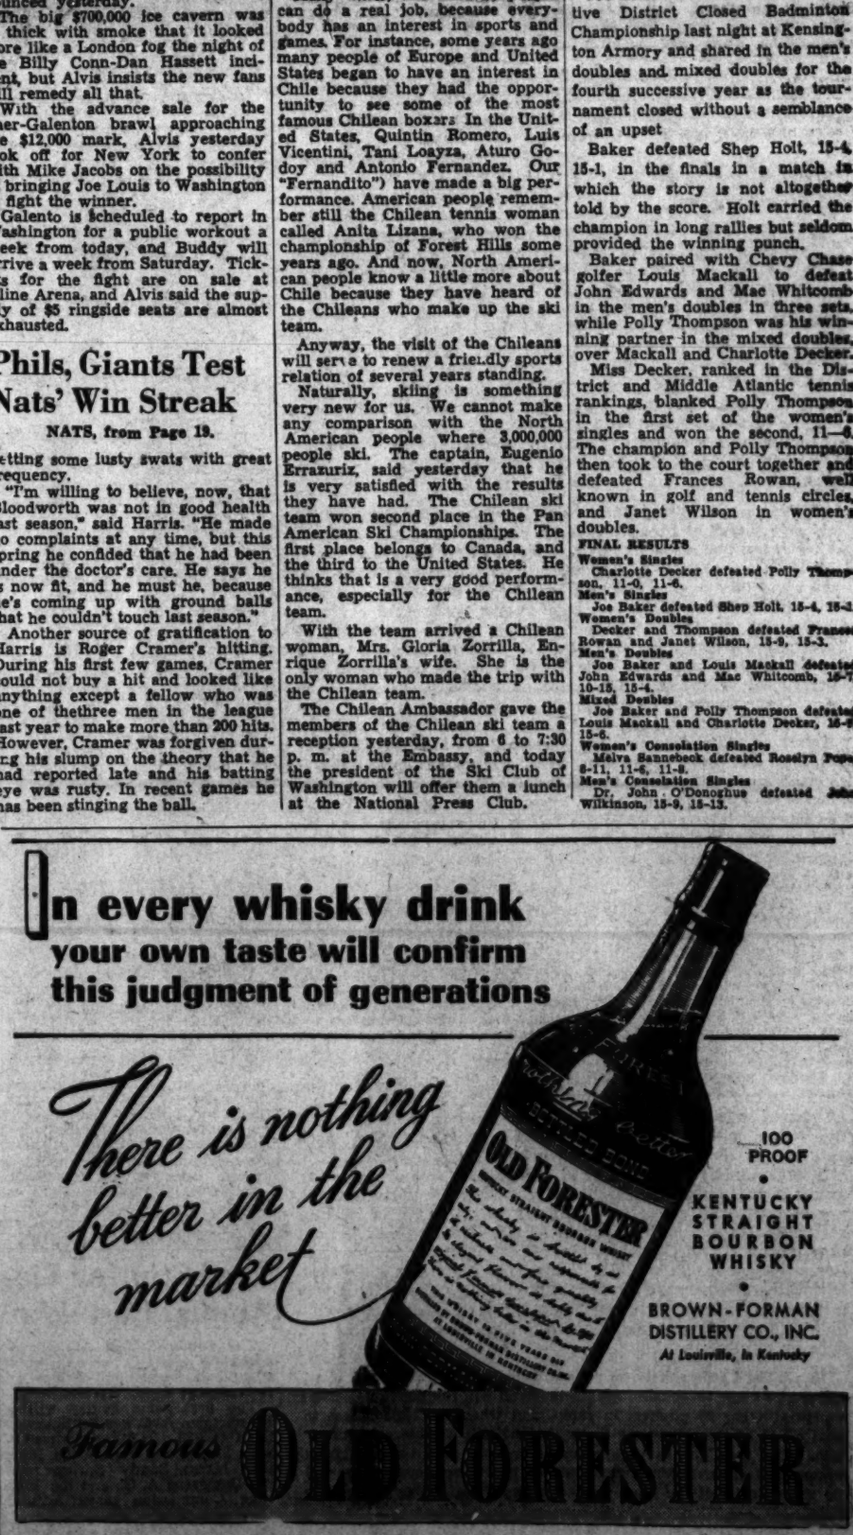
"There's no thrill in all this world like the roar of the crowd when the referee counts 10 over a tough opponent," he said. "You can't compare the polite applause of theater audience with the lusty sweep of a fight mob's voice in Madison Square Garden."

The crowd quit roaring for this medium-sized, youngish - looking Negro in 1933 when he retired because his right eye had gone completely blind. Lee, who battled with such notables as Jack Britton, Vince Dundee, Izzy Grove, Jimmy Britt and Bucky Lawless suffered an injury to his right eye in December, 1929, in a bout with Andy Divodi.

Four years later the eye staged a permanent blackout. He couldn't see a left jab coming. So he quit—almost penniless because he always had been free with his ring earnings, a soft touch. Those were dismal days. He kept alive by leading Negro orchestras, since his name was well known in Negro social circles.

Things were pretty bad for Lee in 1935, when he was sitting in a Harlem Y. M. C. A. one night listening to the reading of a play, "Brother Mose," for the WPA Theater. With time on his hands, Lee was merely a spectator as a director was selecting a cast. By mistake, he was asked to read a part. He read it and was the most surprised person in the place when given the part. Later he played in "Stevedore," "Macbeth," "Haiti" and "Mamba's Daughters." Meanwhile, he became warm friends with Director Orson Welles, who picked him for the lead in "Native Son."

Playing the part of Bigger Thomas, a bewildered Negro killer, Canada Lee has evoked raves from the critics. But Lee can't understand it. He wishes he was welterweight "champeen" instead.



Gerald Walker Aids Cleveland in 3 to 2 Defeat of Tigers

Giants Beat Cincinnati Reds, 9 to 8

Former Nat's Dash From Second Gives Tribe Victory; Other Baseball News

By the Associated Press

Fort Myers, Fla., March 26.—A daring dash from second base by Gerald Walker gave the Cleveland Indians a 3-to-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers today.

Walker was on second in the eighth inning as Ray Mack drove a long fly to Center Fielder Barney McCoskey. He was on his way as soon as McCoskey took the ball and slid into home plate with the winning run.

The Indians were particularly gratified at their victory, because it came at the expense of Floyd Giebell, the rookie who on last September 27 defeated Bob Feller in the game which knocked the Indians out of the pennant race.

Homers Plentiful As Giants Beat Reds

Miami, Fla., March 26 (AP).—With homers dropping over the short fences at the rate of one an inning, the New York Giants outblasted the Cincinnati Reds today for a 9-to-8 victory.

Both teams did all their scoring in the early innings and the Giants did it a little better and made Jim Turner their victim. His successors, Bucky Walters and Bob Logan, stopped all the heavy-hitting but it was too late.

A hit by Jimmy Gleeson or Frank McCormick in the eighth, when the Reds loaded the bases with one out, would have turned the tide, but Rookie Bob Carpenter fanned Gleeson and made McCormick send up an infield pop.

Steve Mamakos Sought as Foe Of Arena Victor

Negotiations with Matt Twomey, manager of Steve Mamakos, to obtain the services of Steve against the winner of Monday night's Cocoa Kid-Andre Jessurun fight at Turner's Arena will be opened today, Matchmaker Gabe Menendez announced yesterday.

Cocoa and Jessurun will arrive in Washington tomorrow morning and will hold public workouts at Turner's Fourteenth and W Streets Arena at 1 and 2 p. m., respectively.

It's Lieut. Comdr. Tunney Now; Ex-Champ To Make D. C. His Base; Abrams Also in Navy

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

Lieut. Comdr. James Joseph (Gene) Tunney, U. S. N. R., took over a desk at the Navy Department yesterday and prepared to direct the athletic program for the entire Navy, not just a part of it.

It will be a two-fisted Navy in the image of its chief, Secretary Frank Knox, the old Rough Rider, who exercises in his pajamas for 15 minutes every morning, plays golf in the snow and otherwise goes for Teddy Roosevelt's "strenuous life."

Commander Tunney already has recruited a "stable of top-flight pugilists to help him teach Uncle Sam's officers and bluejackets how to jab and duck. They include fighters like George Abrams, middleweight contender, and Steve Belloise, also a middleweight. These two and a dozen other boxers and physical instructors are giving up good purses and salaries to come into the Navy as boatswain's mate, first class, or chief boatswain's mates. Their base pay will be $84 and $99 a month.

"There's not a palooka in the lot," said Tunney, talking about the boxers. Why, the least in the group got $5,000 for a fight in Madison Square Garden last week."

Having thus dipped briefly into the slang of the prize ring, Commander Tunney changed his course and talked much as he would talk when sitting down with George Barnard Shaw, Prof. William Lyon Phelps and others of his erudite cronies.

He talked about the spiritual values in discipline and he quoted the Roman philosopher, Marcus Aurelius, on first conquering oneself.

The Navy always has had a good physical training program, Tunney said. His job was to "integrate" it. The chief value of boxing and other athletics, he said, was that they made for discipline, and he explained that a man who got into the habit of doing exercises at command would learn to do other things at command.

"An army is as good as its discipline," Commander Tunney observed, and he directed the interviewers' attention to Europe for confirmation of this.

His blue eyes lighted up as he recalled his World War days. It was as a Marine Corps private in France that he won the heavyweight championship of the A. E. F., and then went on to cudgel his way to the heavyweight championship of the world and a $1,000,000 purse in his 1927 fight with Jack Dempsey.

He quit fighting when he was at his peak, and today at 43 there is not a mark on his face to recall his prize-ring days. He is happily married to the former Polly Lauder, is the father of three sturdy sons, and has a home in Connecticut and a 500-acre estate on Maryland's Eastern Shore. He also has that vocabulary that used to baffle the boys at his training camp.

"In the Marine Corps," Tunney said yesterday, "I learned something about the philosophy of discipline, not only discipline per se. I learned that discipline had spiritual values as well as material values. And it is the philosophy of discipline that gives me the greatest spiritual satisfaction now when I am about to take over this program.

"Remember what Marcus Aurelius said: 'That until one has fought and conquered himself, he is not equipped to take on others.'"

Since Tunney never was a "killer" in the ring, and since he had to depend on skill, intelligence and patience, he must have found Marcus Aurelius a good man to have in his corner.

Washington will see a lot of Commander Tunney in the future. He will visit the various naval stations, but his base of operations will be here—on the third floor of the Navy Department, where his immediate boss will be a four-striper, Capt. F. U. Lake, who is director of training for the Bureau of Navigation.

For the last several months, Commander Tunney has confined his efforts to the four naval air stations in Florida and Texas—Jacksonville, Pensacola, Miami and Corpus Christie. In announcing yesterday that Tunney's field was being enlarged to take in the entire country, the Navy praised his work in the South.

Bob Brownell Enters Georgia Golf Tourney

Bobby Brownell, whose broken leg last year interrupted his streak as twice king of the District golfers, will play in the Southern Intercollegiate Championship at Athens, Ga., April 10, 11 and 12.

Brownell and his Duke University golf teammates are on a tour of Florida schools that supplanted the usual Northern trip and the match with Georgetown.

The entire Duke team will enter the Southern intercollegiate play as well as the following Southern Conference Tournament at Pinehurst, N. C.

Brownell was ranked at the top of the local amateurs in 1938 and 1939 when the Duke senior and Manor Club representative was apparently on his way to national honors. He suffered a broken leg in an impromptu soccer scrimmage at the university last fall, however, and it handicapped him throughout the season. He played his first tournament competition in August.

J. V. Brownell, Bob's father and himself a low handicapped golfer, reports the blond youngster is back on his game now and will be a threat in the intercollegiate events before taking another crack at local competition here after graduation.

Measles? Phoey! Nancy Had 'Em; Won Title Anyway

By the Associated Press

Portland, Oreg., March 26.—Nancy Merki, 14-year-old Portland swimmer, had the measles when she won the National 440-yard free style championship for women at Buffalo, N. Y., last week.

Members of the Multnomah Athletic Club girls swimming team, National 400-yard relay champions, disclosed on return from Buffalo today that Miss Merki did not suspect the disease until she broke out with a rash on the train two days ago.

A doctor said then the illness almost had run its course.

District Table Tennis Play Set Saturday

The 1941 District of Columbia Table Tennis Championships are scheduled for the Chevy Chase Ice Palace starting Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, with finals going on Sunday commencing at 8 p. m.

The final ranking tournament of the season, the event already has 35 entrants on the list. Men's and women's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles are on schedule, thus giving all players a chance to win one of the handsome trophies or medals as runners-up. Carolyn Wilson, present D. C. and Eastern women's queen, will defend her title, as will Stanley Fields, No. 1 ranking men's star of Washington.

Upsets May Prevail

Lou Fields, Ice Palace court manager, states there is a good chance of upsets with Elias Schuman, D. C. champion for four years and never less than a runner-up in important ranking tournaments of recent months, and Lou Gorin figuring as dark horses. Gorin recently made Lazlo Bellak, former national champion, go five games before winning. Jimmy Shea, diminutive star of 15 years, is also another dark horse, having recently defeated big Bill Pierce, Government Employes' champion, on two different occasions. This match alone, should the draw throw them together, would prove the highlight of the tournament.

Event to Determine Rankings

Polly Wofsey, crowned queen in the recent Government Employes' tournament, has been practicing daily and is expected to give pretty Caroline Wilson a real run for the title. Mrs. Wofsey has been women's champion of Greenbelt, Md., the past three years.

Sanctioned by the D. C. T. T. A., the Saturday event is the most important of the year locally as its results will largely determine final rankings of local table tennisers. Tickets are on sale at the Ice Palace, A. A. A. and the Sports Center.

Hockey Eagles To Be Feted Here Tonight

The Eastern Hockey League Champion Eagles, who have mopped up with about everything on the ice in these parts, will go in for a little heavy dining and dancing tonight when followers of the Washington club will pitch a testimonial dinner at the Continental Hotel.

The dinner, coming on the eve of the Eagles' final home game at Riverside Stadium, will be strictly informal and was arranged at the request of local fans following the Eagles' title-winning victory recently in Baltimore.

There'll be a crop of the usual eulogies to the players, and the dinner and dance will follow at 7 p. m. Coach Redvers Mackenzie will introduce the individual players.

Tomorrow night's final game at Riverside Stadium will be with the River Vale Skeeters and will be a combination United States Hockey Association and Eastern League game, starting at 8:30. The Eagles close their Eastern League season against the Atlantic City Sea Gulls Saturday night in Atlantic City and play the final hockey association game in Boston Sunday afternoon against the Olympics. Tickets for tonight's testimonial dinner to the Eagles are on sale at Riverside Stadium and will be available there until 6 p. m. today.

Postscripts . . .

Orlando, Fla., March 26.—Joe Engel's visit to the Nats' camp today reminded Clark Griffith that he is in an embarrassing spot. . . . Griffith must turn over to the Chattanooga club a first baseman in something of a hurry. . . . At the end of last season, the Nats' owner promised Engel that he would send First Baseman Jimmy Vernon to Chattanooga on option for the 1941 season, whereupon Engel sold his first baseman, Alex Hooks, to Knoxville. . . . Now Griffith has discovered a great need for Vernon by his own club and Chattanooga is without a first baseman. . . . The Nats own three first sackers, Vernon, George Archie and Jack Sanford, but there are complications that may prevent any of them going to Chattanooga. . . . Archie could protest to Judge Landis if the Nats tried to send him to Chattanooga. . . . On the theory that he came out of a Double A league and was being sent to a lower league. . . . Sanford says he will quit baseball unless he is retained by the Nats or at least sent to a Double A league. . . . Tomorrow the Nats' bosses will announce the minor league destination of a dozen rookies who will be released. . . . Ben Chapman is still nursing a sore elbow on his throwing arm, an annual trouble of the outfielder in the spring. . . . If Bucky Harris were to name his best outfield on the basis of performances in the exhibition games thus far, it would be: Johnny Welaj in left field, Sammy West in center, and George Case in right. . . . But Ben Chapman and Doc Cramer are regarded as fixtures, along with Case. . . . The Nats' jaunt to Miami tomorrow will be their first venture into the Florida metropolis since they started training at Orlando six years ago. . . . Against the Phillies on Friday they will be meeting up with two former Washington players, Manager Doc Prothro who played third base for the Nats in 1923, and Catcher Walter Millies who was with the club for three seasons until he was traded four years ago. . . . Griffith and Harris are very, very worried about Uncle Sam's threat to take Buddy Lewis into his army "within 60 days."—POVICH.

MICKEY VERNON

Mildred Burke, Patsy Miller Rassle Tonight

Mildred Burke, who claims the world's feminine wrestling championship, will risk her record of never having lost a match in 380 trips to the mat and also her title tonight at Turner's Arena. Opponent for the pretty Columbus, Ohio, girl will be Patsy Miller, a Nevada cowgirl, who gallops around the ring like she rides the range in her native Carson City.

The gals won't be the only attraction. Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher, will be back for the third straight week putting his Rough Man No. 1 crown right on the line against Lou Plummer, of Baltimore.

As for Miss Burke, she needs little introduction. Ten times the strong Ohio lass has wrestled here, and each item she comes through with amazing power to down her opponents.

Miss Miller, in her only appearance two weeks ago, made a favorable impression spilling Hazel Forbes. That victory won her the shot at Champion Burke.

Other matches tonight show Warren Bockwinkle, the St. Louis ace, against Pierre DeGlane, French Canadian; Fred (Legs) Grobmier, scissors kingpin, against Joe DeValteau, also French, and Milo Steinborn, the ole reliable, against Tommy Marvin, better known as Chief White Feather. The starting time is 8:30.

Hockey Semifinals Set Tonight

Toronto, March 26 (AP).—President Frank Calder of the National Hockey League announced today the Stanley Cup semifinal playoff series between the Detroit Red Wings and the Chicago Black Hawks will open in Detroit tomorrow night.

The second game of the best-of-three series will be played in Chicago Sunday night, and the third, if necessary, in Detroit next Tuesday night.

Ohio State Nine Defeats Richmond, 5-1

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., March 26.—Richmond University's Southern Conference champions were handcuffed by two Ohio State pitchers in their opening baseball engagement today and dropped a 5 to 1 decision to the Buckeyes.

While Jim Sexton and Gene Dornbrook were breezing along in fine style for the invaders, limiting the Spiders to five well spaced hits, the Richmond hurlers were giving up nine hits, six om them bunched in two disastrous innings.

Al Wheeler, portsider from Fredericksburg who started his first varsity game for the Spiders, was touched for two runs in the second and his successor, Capt. Ned Butcher, was greeted with a four-hit, three-run outburst in the sixth.

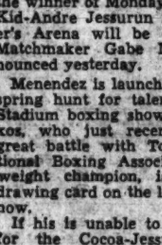
Pieces of Haight

Washington, D. C.

Dear Boss,

I've been up to my three chins all day in secretarial work for the Walter Haight Club. I just turned to myself and said, "Miss Haight, take a letter." It was about time I was getting around to one of these little homey communications, too. The private copy boy you assigned to me, you know that former Harvard sprinter, has been warmed up for more than an hour ready to make his usual dash to the composing room with the Haight letter.



HAIGHT

And that's not all, Boss, the printers have been peeping in the door grumbling about quitting if they don't get a chance to set the type on my stuff.

Now listen, boss, I can't get in bad with the printers. They have been doing my spelling for years and, besides, they are jolly fellows and I like them. I don't want to play any favorites and furthermore somebody is going to get hurt if the present system of placing the Haight letter on the copy-cutter's desk and letting the printers dive for it isn't stopped.

I would be much obliged to you if you would see that it might be a good idea to have one man set the whole thing instead of giving small parts to several printers. Then the laughing would be confined to one linotype a night, see?

Well, Boss, there's one thing about this Walter Haight Club. It is a real down-to-earth outfit. The members write anything they happen to think of and I write back anything that comes to my mind. For instance, today I received a letter from a member complaining about not getting his membership card. He really let me have it, Boss. But, somehow, I think he should have a little more respect for my office as president, even if I did elect myself unanimously.

I could take it, Boss, as far as the contents of the main part of the letter about the membership card were concerned, but when he got to the end I thought he would have signed off "Good luck, dear President," or "It's a pleasure to be a member" or "One of your loyal followers." Well, he didn't. He just wrote "Shoot the card to me, Lard."

Well, Boss, the Haight Club membership cards are being mailed out. I have licked those self-addressed envelopes until you would think I were a kitten with a sore paw. (Now ain't that Boss, if you would write a memo to Foreman Lynn and ask him to let them draw for it. Then again, a cute way of puttin it?)

I'll say one thing about licking those envelopes, a guy surely gets variety. I licked a brown one and I could have sworn that the glue had been mixed with Old Bolton. But, taking them all in all, Boss, they ain't caviar and now I believe I know what that radio man means when he talks about that "taste thrill that is Forever Yours."

Please pass along the word that the big Haight contest closes at midnight Friday. And tell the gals and pals to let me have their entries. Details of the contest will be found elsewhere on the sports pages, if the guy who puts the paper together hasn't lost the type.

I've been swamped with mail all day. I wonder if the contest or the Blood Bank Fund couldn't have just a little bit to do with it?

I gave you that Little Potatoes (We're Hard to Peel) piece yesterday, Boss, so I guess it will be O. K. with you if I pass along some samples of the entries in the contest.

So Haight's a potato,
Now isn't that screwy,
But pass me the gravy,
I'll see you at Bowie.

Sooner or later somebody had to bring up that pig picture you slipped into the paper on me. G. H. Klaus gets in a few licks at his majesty, King Pounds, with these lines:

There is an old tout named Walter Haight,
Who writes letters to the boss and Jake;
He uses a picture of a pig for bait,

I don't know whether he has been doing anything else of late but E. P. Sanford is carrying off first prize in the quantity division. He sends in nine and this deserves attention:

Hold tight! Along the street there comes
Hold tight—Walter Haight is passing by.

If we have space for one more, let's put in this tidbit from Mrs. B. M. Sampsel, out Bethesda way. From somewhere she seems to have gathered the impression that I'm a bit chubby. She writes:

I'll pay the freight for Walter Haight,
And send him down to Miami,
But such a rate for such a weight,
Better I should send for Miami.

HAIGHT AND HAIGHT.

Kings Blue Takes Redlands Purse at Tropical Park Oval

Arcaro Rides Winner, 2d Of Program

Jockey Albert Bodiou Injured at Post Before First Race; Donna Leona Second

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 26.—Kings Blue, a quick-striding son of Blue Larkspur from the stable of Huntley & Sher, accounted for feature honors here this afternoon when he led home four other sprinters in the 6 furlong Redlands purse, decided over a slow track as the result of more overnight rain. The 6-year-old black horse gave Jockey Eddie Arcaro a double as he whirled over the finish line with two lengths to spare in the good time of 1:11 3-5. The victor was an 11 to 10 favorite.

The elderly, tiny mare Donna Leona, purchased for $4,200 in a recent paddock sale by Mrs. T Christopher, earned second money by a length and a half under Conn McCreary. J. B. Campbell's Devil's Crag was an easy third over High One and Commencement.

Albert Bodiou, who was to have ridden High One and several other horses, was absent from the saddle as the result of a mishap that occurred at the post before the first race. Bodiou's mount in that event, Rolls Rough, unseated the boy and inflicted a painful bruise with his roof in the region of Bodiou's lower ribs. The rider was taken to a hospital for observation but reports were that he was not seriously injured.

Donna Leona showed fine speed away from the gate and quickly opened up a daylight lead while disposing of commencement. Kings Blue moved into the runner-up spot after 2 furlongs and collared the pacemaker entering the stretch. He drew away with little effort. Devil's Crag, which has been racing in distance affairs, closed well but too late to threaten.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PONTY, $3.80, $2.80, $2.20; HOMEWARD BOUND, $4.40, $2.50; IRISH DAY (entry), $2.80.

PONTY broke alertly, but lacked speed and was outrun in the early stages. He responded to intermittent punishment in the last half mile, gained steadily while having ground and outlasted HOMEWARD BOUND in the final drive. HOMEWARD BOUND, also slow to get going, came between the leaders at the furlong pole, closed with good courage, but could not get up. IRISH DAY forced a fast pace in the footing and faltered slightly at the end.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 3:41. Off at 3:42. MERRY SON, on the outside and under light restraint the first half mile, moved up steadily thereafter and opened up a commanding lead entering the stretch, but was ridden out briskly to withstand REDROCK CANYON's bid. The latter, sluggish in the early stages, finished fast in the last furlong. WISE WILL also closed strongly in the stretch run.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:11. Off at 4:12. Winner, Huntley & Sher's blk. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KINGS BLUE, $4.20, $2.70, $2.30; DONNA LEONA, $3.80, $2.90; DEVILS CRAG, $3.50.

KINGS BLUE, in tight quarters on the inside to the stretch turn, moved to the front rapidly when obtaining clear passage and drew out in the stretch run. DONNA LEONA, broke fast, showed keen speed in the footing, but came wide entering the stretch and held on well in the final drive. DEVILS CRAG, outrun early, closed fast through the stretch.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:39. Off at 4:39. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BANKER JIM, $5.10, $3.10, $2.70; KAHYRITE, $3.60, $2.90; FLYING PLAID, $3.40.

BANKER JIM, taxed off the pace the first half mile, gained steadily under urging the remainder of the trip and wore KAHYRITE down in the closing strides. KAHYRITE displayed good speed, raced FLYING PLAID into defeat, held on stubbornly when challenged, but could not stave off the winner's challenge. FLYING PLAID, used up in racing BRASS BELL into submission the first half mile, faltered in the final furlong.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:06½. Off at 5:06½. Winner, A. C. ALHALON, rated off the early pace until straightened into the stretch, closed fast on the outside and, wearing the leaders down, won going away. PANORASCOPE followed the pace well upon the outside, took a short lead through the stretch, but then faltered when the real test came. YES OR NO showed his usual speed and saved ground, but began to weaken at the furlong pole and just lasted for third place.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:37½. Off at 5:38. Winner, J. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ERINS SUN, $14.90, $6.20, $5.10; GAY HOUR, $9.10, $3.30; BAGGRAVE, $13.90.

ERINS SUN broke well, improved his position gradually after turning into the backstretch, held on gamely when challenged and outlasted his opposition. GAY HOUR, in tight quarters leaving the backstretch, made a game effort, but could not set up. BAGGRAVE went into contention after going a half mile and finished stoutly.

Selections at Tropical Park.

Dear Al:

There will be a 2-year-old around this season named Snooks Winters after the clerk of the scales at Charles Town. Might be a good idea to hook him up with Walter Haight, Alan Clarke's juvenile colt. Clarke's youngster breezed for the first time yesterday along with a filly owned by John Manfuso. After the work, Manfuso offered to trade his 2-year-old, a half sister of Accidental, for Walter Haight and was willing to toss in $100. Clarke, who already has several fillies, smiled off the bid. The person who buys Sun Egret at Monday's Bowie auction is likely to send the horse to the stud. Sun Egret hasn't raced in a long time and his pins aren't what they once were. He won $86,000 and some change which should make him a good prospect sire. Trainer George Cook is busy with horses at Bowie. The group includes a plater with a heart as big as a watermelon named Clymene. Dave Woods, Mr. Publicity at Pimlico, and his associates, have put out a brochure on the Preakness that is just about the last word in a helpmate for racing writers. Most of the big turf scribes are leaving Florida this weekend to be at Bowie for next Tuesday's opening. Donald Hay, mutuel manager at Bowie, Mariboro and Charles Town, is back in Baltimore after a visit to Oaklawn. Hay has his crew lined up and is in excellent health. Jockey Sonny Workman is undecided about the future. He will confer soon with Alfred Vanderbilt, his boss; may ride for the turf official again this year. Due to eight-race programs post time for the first race at Bowie will be 2 p. m. The starting gate is in position and horses are being schooled there. It won't be long now.

BILL.

First race—BAD COLD appears well placed in this field. Has shown plenty of speed and is likely to lead this kind to the wire. SHORE LEAVE is reported to be a good one and deserves some attention. WALLER to take care of the others.

Second race—MACK'S ARROW comes back after a long rest and is in excellent shape. Could be the right one in a rather open affair. INDIAN PENNY had oodles of speed in that last and is the one to beat. GRANDSTAR to acount for the show end.

Third race—HIGH PLAID is good now and will do a lot or running in this abbreviated field. Gets top weight but I'm going to string along. REMARKABLE is too fit to be disregarded and will be right there. ABBASSIDE for the show end.

Fourth race—FRONTIER JANE turned in a sparkling effort to win last out. Needs only to race back to that performance. BEAMY is in excellent shape and won a heat at Hialeah. LARGO MINT probably will be the third one.

Fifth race—CORYDON has been showing plenty of punch of late and belongs on top of these at present good form. SIRASIA will be in the thick of contention. ROYAL MAN for the minor money.

Sixth race—FLYING SILVER, with McCreary to do the booting, looks like the real goods in this field. My best 'bet. BIG ROVER and BOMB to fill out the cash bracket.

Seventh race—TREADON is in excellent form and promises to come right back with another strong effort. Needs only the right ride. IN QUESTION is a fair one and will be in the thick of contention. ALL EVEN for the show.

Eighth race—I'm going to try to wake up DISSEMBLER in this field. Everything looks right for an old-fashioned killing. RADIO and MARCHING FEET will battle it out if the top one fails.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take EBONY FLY, POSTERITY and BATTER.

Sets Opening April 6

An intraclub show will be held by the Capital Dog Training Club in opening its out-of-doors season on the Military Field, Rock Creek Park, Sunday, April 6, from 10:30 to 12:30.

Winning dogs will be awarded silver-plated cups.

Izaac Waltons Open Parley Here Today

Defense of America's natural resources during the preparedness program will be the theme of a three-day conference of the Izaak Walton League of America starting today at the Willard Hotel.

In announcing plans for the convention, Tappan Gregory, Chicago lawyer and president of the league, said that plans for utilizing the Nation's resources for defense should conform with "the best conservation principles."

"We can cut spruce for airplanes without ruining our forests and parks; we can raise needed foodstuffs without creating another Dust Bowl, and we can manufacture essential war materials without polluting all our streams in the process, if we insist that sanity prevail and that public welfare take precedence over expediency in the emergency program," Gregory said.

Among the convention speakers will be John C. Page, commissioner of reclamation; Col. C. L. Hall, of the rivers and harbors board; R. R. Gardner, attorney, Glenrock, Wyo.; Chester E. McCarty, attorney, Portland, Oreg.; Representative Mundt (Republican), South Dakota; Tom Wallace, editor, Louisville Times; and the Rev. Dr. Preston Bradley, Chicago, a founder of the league.

Adm. Sims' Grandson Dies in R. A. F. Service

London, March 26 (AP).—Sergt. Denis Guy Sims, one of the two grandsons of the late Admiral William S. Sims, commander of United States naval forces in European waters in the World War, has died while serving with the Royal Air Force.

Sergt. Sims was an aerial gunner and wireless operator. No details of his death were announced. His brother, H. A. Sims, a corporal, recently was awarded the military medal.

73 Selectees From District To Be Sworn in Today by Army

Washington Selective Service Headquarters yesterday made public the names of 73 who will be sworn in for Army duty today and announced that 4,700 are to be given physical examinations in April.

Fifty-three are colored men who will go through induction ceremonies at Baltimore as part of 500 colored selectees going into uniform in March. The other 20 are white recruits who will replace others failing to pass physical examinations.

The 4,700 registrants, who will be examined at local hospitals, will be held in reserve against the April call, expected to be about 900, and against quotas in succeeding months.

Of the white men to be inducted today, 14 are to be assigned to duty with the 260th Coast Artillery, District Guard regiment, at Fort Bliss, Tex., it was reported, while the colored trainees will go to Fort Dix, N. J.

Funds for New Transatlantic Airline Voted

By the Associated Press

By the slim margin of one vote, the Senate Appropriations Committee approved funds yesterday for a new transatlantic air mail and passenger line to compete with Pan American on flights from New York to Lisbon, Portugal.

Emerging from a welter of conflicting testimony, in which both sides charged the other with attempting to establish a monopoly, the committee voted to place in the $1,152,372,632 Treasury-Postoffice supply bill an additional $1,216,000 appropriation for foreign air mail service.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, said the committee acted with the understanding that $800,000 of this amount would be available to pay American Export Airlines for flying the mail on a new transatlantic line, and the remainder would provide for a fourth weekly mail pay load for Pan American.

It was a confused session, which some members left believing that American Export's bid for a new line had been rejected.

Testimony Made Public

Meanwhile, the committee made public more than 200 pages of testimony taken in closed hearings, in which proponents of the American Export's bid charged Pan American with operating a monopoly.

Opponents asserted, in turn, that the American Export Steamship Line, which controls 70 per cent of the stock of the air line of similar name, held a monopoly on ocean-borne mail and passenger traffic to Europe and was attempting to gain at least half of the aerial traffic at the same time.

Lehman Brothers, New York banking house, was shown to be the largest stockholder in the parent steamship line, which Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, said had originally been taken over by its present owners with a $600 cash investment and the assumption of the line's debts.

Tydings said the steamship line had a Government subsidy of $1,200,000 yearly and asserted that its "monopoly" on surface traffic to Europe was so complete that United States Lines was forced to pay American Export $100,000 per trip to send ships to Europe to remove refugees to the United States.

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, testified that American Export Lines, Inc., the parent steamship company, had made a profit of $5,977,000 in the first nine months of 1940, including $1,360,000 paid in subsides by the Government.

"I think the time has come to cut off that subsidy," Tydings observed.

Harllee Branch, chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board, told the committee he believed that with Europe at war, this was an "opportune time" to institute a competing transatlantic airmail service.

1. It's quite a stunt—catching the public fancy ...and Carstairs White Seal has done it as few whiskies have before! Its popularity has increased tenfold over last year. Why? That's easy...

2. Sip yourself a drink of Carstairs White Seal. Ah! You've got it. A perfect combination of all the whiskey qualities you ever dreamed of. And that's not just "happen-stance", either...

4. Ask, anywhere, for Carstairs White Seal. (Superb with soda.) It's "The Perfectly Balanced Blend"... at a budget-balancing price. Made by Carstairs...a name of character since 1788.

D.C. Telephone Gain Is 54% In Seven Years

The increase in population and expansion of activity in the Washington metropolitan area resulted in the greatest demand for service in the history of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., the pamphlet report for 1940 showed yesterday.

Number of telephones in service at the close of 1940 was 275,326, a new record high and a net gain of 21,284 stations over the close of the previous year. The net gain in 1939 over the previous year was 14,374. The company announced that 77 per cent of the total telephones were on the dial system in 1940, against 74 per cent in 1939.

Since the depression year of 1933, the company reported, number of telephones here has increased 54 per cent. In 1940 the number per 100 population was 39 as compared with 35 in 1933. Washington leads the world in umber and use of telephones per capita.

The total number of local and out-of-town calls was about 392,500,000 in 1940, an increase of 11.6 per cent over the previous year. Oout-of-town messages amounted to approximately 3,773,000, an increase of 15.4 per cent.

Average daily number of calls per telephone was 4.51 as against 4.32 in 1939.

Expenditures for new construction during 1940 amounted to $8,065,000, an increase of $3,820,000 over 1939. During the year a new central office building was completed in the Northeast section of Washington to house new dial equipment for Lincoln, Atlantic and Franklin central offices. The cost of the building was approximately $350,000. Installation of equipment for the Franklin office was completed at a cost of about $950,000 and was placed in service in January, 1941.

Another big project of 1940, the company reported, was the placing of an alternate underground cable between Washington and Baltimore at a cost of $1,100,000.

Lead Price Boosted Second Time in March

New York, March 26 (AP).—Leading producers today raised the price of lead one-tenth of a cent to 5.85-5.90 cents a pound, the second advance this month and the highest since 6 cents was charged in late September, 1937.

The price has tended upward recently as heavy demand for defense purposes forced sellers to draw on stocks of foreign lead, principally Mexican, which comes in under a duty.

Dip in Power Output Is Less Than Seasonal

New York, March 26 (AP).—Electric power production in the United States declined in the week ended March 22, from the preceding week, but continued far ahead of a year ago, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

Latest output of 2,808,915,000 kilowatt hours was .3 of one per cent below 2,817,893,000 in the previous week, but 15.9 per cent above 2,424,350,000 in the comparable 1940 week. The decline was less than seasonally anticipated.

Pacific Gas Issue Placed on Market

New York, March 26 (AP).—Public offering was made today of $20,000,000 Pacific Gas & Electric Co. first and refunding mortgage 3 per cent bonds offered by a syndicate headed by Blyth & Co.

The offering represents "new money" financing by the company. Proceeds will be used for general corporate purposes, including the financing in part of a general construction program of $40,000,000.

New York, March 26 (AP).—John M. Harlan, trustee of Standard Commercial Tobacco Co., Inc., notified the company's stockholders and creditors today that the Giannini interests, through Capital Co., a subsidiary of Transamerica Corporation, had offered to buy the bankrupt firm's main assets.

Capital Co., has offered to pay $1,000,000, or about $12.50 a share, for the block of 80,610 shares of class "B" common stock of Axton-Fisher Tobacco Co., which is the principal holding of Standard Commercial.

Liverpool Cotton Mart To Close on Monday

Liverpool, March 26 (AP).—The Liverpool cotton futures market is expected to close at noon March 31, being unable to function longer because the government has taken over all stocks of cotton.

W. S. Hannay, president of the Liverpool Cotton Association, said today a meeting of the association's membership had been called for 10:45 o'clock on the morning of March 31 to consider a resolution to close the market at noon on that day. Members were expected to approve the closing resolution.

Pepco Among Major Utilities Facing SEC-Forced Divorce

By the Associated Press

Divorcement of operating utilities from holding companies appears certain to remove a number of important companies from the Securities Commission's jurisdiction within the next year or so.

A major example of this prospect was the disclosure Monday by the United Gas Improvement Co. of its intention to sell to the public 701,000 shares of voting stock of the $117,000,000 Connecticut Light & Power Co. If this plan goes through, Connecticut Light will cease to be a subsidiary of a holding company and automatically will be removed from SEC regulation.

Two Cases Cited

Joseph L. Weiner, director of the commission's public utilities division, pointed out yesterday that this has been accomplished in two important instances, the Indianapolis Power & Light Co. and Houston Natural Gas Corporation.

The $85,000,000 Indianapolis company was a subsidiary of Utilities Power & Light Co., which went into reorganization and became Ogden Corporation. Ogden then sold 714,000 shares of voting stock of Indianapolis Power to the public for around $17,000,000 and the company became subject to regulation only by the Indiana Public Service Commission.

In the Texas situation, four operating utilities had been owned by a Delaware holding company which, through transfers of securities, eventually became a Texas operating company comprising the four properties.

Pepco Also Faces Change

Similar divorcement from outside control is in prospect in a number of cases, notably San Diego Consolidated Gas & Electric Co., Puget Sound Power & Light Co., Mountain States Power Co., the California Oregon Power Co. and the Potomac Electric Power Co.

The SEC encourages such steps because the utilities act, as Weiner explained recently in addressing a group of lawyers, is a "self-liquidating project."

"The usual regulatory statute," he said, "attempts to preserve an existing course of conduct by subjecting it to a continued and usually ever-increasing scrutiny and supervision. The Holding Company Act, on the other hand, seeks to accomplish its objective by a reshaping of the course of conduct itself, with a continual relaxation and probably final elimination of scrutiny and supervision."

Cities Service Co. has reported its intention to dispose of its utility properties—involving some $440,000,000 of assets—and devote itself principally to petroleum interests. Such a move probably would result not only in taking Cities Service Co. out of SEC jurisdiction but also in turning over some important utility properties to public control and limiting the supervision to State authorities.

Community Power & Light Co. also expects to give up some properties as part of a program of simplification and integration which would reduce the system from its present 19 companies to a top company and four directly owned operating subsidiaries.

U. S. Will Subsidize Cotton Paper Output

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department announced yesterday it would subsidize the use of 10,000 bales of low-grade cotton in the manufacture of high-quality writing paper.

Manufacturers desiring to participate in the program would receive 4½ cents a pound from farm surplus disposal funds on 75 per cent of the cotton used in making paper.

Under an experimental program of this kind last year, about 1,020 bales of cotton were diverted into paper. Manufacturers reported that preliminary treatment of cotton was less expensive than that of other raw materials used in paper making.

Ford Airplane Motor Near Production Stage

Detroit, March 26 (AP).—The new airplane motor the Ford Motor Co. has been experimenting with for several months will be ready for production about June 1, C. W. Van Ranst, chief aircraft engineer of the company, said last night.

In a speech before the American Society of Tool Engineers, Van Ranst said the engine, capable of developing 1,800 to 2,000 horsepower for takeoffs, would weigh less than 1 pound per horsepower. He described it as a liquid-cooled V-type motor with an exhaust-driven turbo supercharger for maximum efficiency at all operating altitudes.

Monsanto Chemical Sales Continue Rise

St. Louis, March 26 (AP).—Sales of Monsanto Chemical Co., have attained new peaks each month since last November and March business continues ahead of February, Edgar M. Queeny, president, said at the annual stockholders meeting.

Plant expansions will be planned to turn out products to maintain favor after the defense emergency is over, he said.

Expansion Program Planned by Steel Firm

New York, March 26 (AP).—Stockholders of Copperweld Steel Co. will be asked at a special meeting April 30 to approve an increase of $2,000,000 on the company's indebtedness in order to finance an expansion program, S. E. Bramer, president, said today.

Operations of the company in the final quarter of 1940 were at the rate of $22,500,000 a year and currently are running at an annual rate of $28,000,000, Bramer said.

White Motor Votes 25-Cent Dividend

Cleveland, March 26 (AP).—White Motor Co., today voted a dividend of 25 cents a common share, first since December, 1932. The dividend is payable April 17 to holders of record April 10.

State Bonds Awardeed

New York, March 26 (AP).—A banking group comprising Kaiser & Co., Lee Higginson Corporation, Paul H. Davis & Co., and Francis I. DuPont & Co., today was awarded a new issue of $1,000,000 State of West Virginia Road Bonds on its bid of 100.187 for 1½s.

Wheat, Corn Climb to New Seasonal Tops

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 26.—Buying expanded in the grain pits today, lifting wheat as much as 2 cents a bushel at one stage to 90 cents for May delivery, highest of the season and within a fraction of the best price quoted for any futures contracts since last May's break.

Corn rose about a cent to new seasonal highs for July and September contracts, while oats and rye were fractionally higher. No. 2 hard wheat sold at high as 83⅞ in the spot market, almost 13 cents over the basic Government loan rate. No. 1 yellow old corn was priced up to 70 cents, or 9 cents over the loan rate on the farm.

Pit brokers said wheat buying came from all sources, including professional traders, commercial interests, mills and outsiders. Stop loss selling on the part of previous short sellers also was in evidence. Trade gossip about possibility of higher loan rates for the new crop and the effect of marketing quotas as well as revival of inflation gossip were factors in the market.

Wheat closed ¾ to 1⅜ cents higher than yesterday; May, 89⅝@89¾; July, 87⅛@87¼. Corn was ⅝ to ⅞ cent up; May, 66@66⅛; July 66@66⅛. Oats, ⅛ cent off to ⅜ cent up. Soybeans, 1½ to 1¾ cents higher. Rye, ⅜ to ⅞ cent up. Lard, 10 to 15 cents higher.

The market's upturn was held in check by private reports of good precipitation in the Southwest, including sections of Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas, and prospects of increased redemptions of loan wheat as a result of the price advance. The Government disclosed redemptions have been so heavy that a delay in pooling unredeemed wheat would be necessary to check accounts.

Railroad Nets Show Sharp Rise In February

New York, March 26 (AP).—Net operating incomes of the Nation's principal railroads for February, currently being reported, indicate that a combination of increased traffic and greater operating efficiency may show the best results for the period in a number of years, traffic experts said today.

Freight traffic is rising more rapidly than at any time in a decade, these experts said, and they expressed belief March figures were continuing the improved showing made last month.

Coffee, Sugar Prices Slump On U. S. Stand

By the Associated Press

Coffee and sugar fell by the wayside yesterday as most other commodities for future delivery advanced decisively.

The vigorous stand taken in Washington against a sustained rise in sugar influenced selling at New York. The domestic contract lost as much as .05 of a cent a pound and the world .03 of a cent. The world list was temporarily buoyed by reports Britain was in the market for around 200,000 tons of Cuban sugar.

Profit taking again hit coffee after prices had risen to the highest in months. The market dropped .15 to .35 of a cent a pound.

At New York rubber moved up .20 to .30 of a cent a pound, straits tin as much as .25 of a cent; cocoa .04 to .06 of a cent and silk closed unchanged to 2 cents ahead. This group of staples has been boosted lately by fears of difficulties in shipping.

The Associated Press index of 35 wholesale staples sold in spot cash markets, based on 1926 as 100, hit the highest level since November, 1937, at 80.43. This compared with 80.20 Tuesday. Spot prices often move at variance with quotations in futures markets.

Farm Products Shoot Higher

Chicago, March 26 (AP).—Prices of butter, eggs, wheat, corn and lard rose to the best levels of 1941—and in some cases the past several years—in futures market trading here today.

Heavy buying beneath the butter and egg futures boards on the mercantile exchange lifted prices as much as a cent or more, per pound and per dozen. March butter futures sold above 31 cents a pound, highest in three years. November futures closed at 33½, highest March price in 11 years. March eggs sold above 21½ cents a dozen, highest in four years. October delivery eggs contracts sold above 23 cents.

Commodities market experts said the various farm products were influenced by factors peculiar to each, and also by generally improved buying associated with trade gossip about inflation, expanding industrial activity and domestic consumption, and war-inspired activity. They said many investors showed more interest in commodities than in stocks.

Attention also was given to Government activity in buying large quantities of eggs directly in the country, in taking certain amounts of lard, possibly for export, and in purchasing dairy products such as cheese and evaporated milk.

Trade reports that dairy products are needed in Great Britain, along with certain fats and oils, stimulated hopes that increased exports would be possible under terms of the lend-lease law.

Fabricated Steel Orders Decline

New York, March 26 (AP).—A decline in February orders for fabricated structural steel to a volume about equal to shipments by the industry indicated defense orders were slackening, the American Institute of Steel Construction said today.

February bookings totaled 159,815 tons, compared with 266,594 in January.

The industry fabricated and shipped in February 146,642 tons, which was slightly under 154,234 in January but well ahead of 97,157 in February last year.

The industry has on hand, available for fabrication within the next four months 624,201 tons, or a monthly average about equal to the tonnage shipped in February.

Utility Shares Drop on SEC Pressure; Rails Push Ahead to New 1941 Highs

New York, March 26.—Utilities slipped in the stock market today while rails for the third straight session pushed ahead, some to the highest prices this year.

Electric Power & Light and American Power & Light, affiliates of the Electric Bond & Share structure, dropped to the lowest of the year. Electric Power & Light closed at 2, down ⅛, repeating the fading away of market values on other common stocks of big holding units.

Turnover in utility shares, notably Commonwealth & Southern, which rallied slightly, contributed a substantial portion of the day's dealings. Volume increased to 534,020 shares from 447,130 yesterday.

Rails again were favorites on the buying side, although gains were shaved in late trading. Market commentators explained the strength of the carriers as largely directed by the uptrend in operating income shown in January-February returns and anticipation continuing traffic gains would further bolster finances of many roads.

In the bond market, demand for second-grade rails resulted in one of the busiest sessions in recent months. Rail bonds were regarded as relatively immune from war-time taxes, now an important factor in calculation of corporate earnings prospects.

Steels made a higher start, then gave up the gains. Bethlehem closed off ¼ to 76¾. A. C. I. O. threat of a "finish" fight against Bethlehem and the unsettled steel wage question were weighed against the huge unfilled orders held by producers. Announcement of second-quarter prices was expected to hinge on a wage decision.

The Associated Press composite price of 60 stocks closed off .1 of a point at 41.4, prolonging the narrow range of recent weeks. The rail average was up a little but utilities and industrials dragged the over-all average down.

Stocks again had the support of strength in major commodities, especially grains and rubber. Chicago wheat rose net ¾ to 1⅜ cents a bushel and corn ⅝ to ⅞. Cotton futures closed 20 to 35 cents a bale higher.

Broad dealings in utilities raised the Curb Exchange's turnover to 123,000 shares from 79,000 the preceding session. Electric Bond & Share broke to a 1941 low, ending down ½ at 2½. Some utility preferred were up sharply in a thin market, including Cities Service Power & Light $6 preferred and Kansas Gas & Electric preferred. Fractions to around a point higher were Aluminum of America, American Gas & Electric and Consolidated Gas of Baltimore.

U. S. Hikes Subsidy On Flour Exports

By the Associated Press

The Surplus Marketing Administration announced yesterday an increase in the export subsidy rate from 90 cents to $1.05 per barrel on flour sold to the Americas.

The boost in the rate reflected recent increases in domestic wheat prices. The new rate was subject to change at 2 p. m. today, depending on wheat and flour prices.

Lasher Counsels Rail Shippers Against Hysteria

Special Dispatch to The Post

Buffalo, N. Y., March 26.—Confidence that the railroads will be able to meet the "all-out" transportation job that is an essential element of national defense was expressed here today by Capt. E. C. R. Lasher, of Washington.

Addressing the eighteenth annual meeting of the Great Lakes Regional Shippers Advisory Board, Capt. Lasher, who is chief of the railroad transportation division of the War Department, declared that the Nation's transportation needs will be met because of the cooperative machinery which has been set up by shippers, the railroads and the Government.

"We have a job ahead of us—a tremendous job—one which will strain us to the limit but one nevertheless which we will accomplish," said Capt. Lasher, who directs the movement of materials and supplies as well as the handling of troops.

"Whatever the causes and whosoever the blame for the so-called 'failure' of the railroads in 1917, it can well be said that things are different now. As a matter of fact, it has been said that the transportation industry isn't even breathing hard yet."

Parks Johnson and Wally Butterworth, the two quizzical gentlemen who conduct the C. B. S. show known as "Vox Pop" maintain that it's pretty sissy stuff to be able to pick the "man of the year" and such things, after the year is over.

The really daring and newsworthy thing to do, they hold, is to choose the famous people of the year before they have become famous. Then, at least, they reason, you can't be accused of the cowardice of playing a sure thing.

So tonight as their guests on the "Vox Pop" show which you'll hear over WJSV at 7:30 they're presenting six persons who they modestly assert are destined for peak fame in their respective fields in 1941.

We trust it won't be giving away any secrets to tell that two of the guests are to be June Havoc, star of the current musical comedy, "Pal Joey," who's to be "the most popular comedienne," and Ed Gardner, star of C. B. S.'s "Duffy's Tavern," who's to be "the most popular comedian."

Incidentally at 10:15 tonight over WJSV there'll be a program explaining all about those dial changes to be made on your radio on March 29.

Contract Bridge

The fact that they were missing the queen of trumps held no terrors for Mrs. E. B. Neil, of Columbus, and D. N. Bayless, of Atlantic City. Though their adversaries were the formidable pair of Harold S. Vanderbilt and Baron Waldemar von Zedtwitz, they bravely bid to seven spades. Mrs. Neil, with more than a dash of intuition, in spite of holding nine cards in the suit, finessed to pick up the trump queen; and she became the only declarer out of the thirty who played the hand either to bid or make a grand slam. The cards and bidding are shown in today's box.

Vanderbilt lead the heart nine; Mrs. Neil won with the queen, cashed the spade king and re-entered her hand with the heart ace. Influenced by the freakish nature of the cards and noting the singleton in dummy, she played the spade jack and, following her hunch, let it ride when Vanderbilt failed to cover with the queen. The ace of spades caught the honor, and dummy's hearts provided discards for the losing clubs.

Had North covered the spade jack, the result would have been the same, declarer trumping one club with the spade four and discarding another on the heart king.
